A NOTED JUDGE SAVED BY PERUNA.

Had Catarrh Nine Years---All Doctors Failed.

HON. GEORGE KERSTEN, OF CHICAGO.

Hon. Geo. Kersten, a well-known Justice of the Peace, of Chicago, says:

"I was afflicted with catarrh for nine years. My catarrh was located chiefly in my head. I tried many remedies without avail. I applied to several doctors, but they were not able to cure me. I learned of the remedy, Peruna, through the daily newspapers. After taking the remedy for 18 weeks I was entirely cured. I consider my cure permanent, as it has been two and a half years since I was cured."

Any man who wishes perfect health must be entirely free from catarrh. Catarrh is well-nigh universal; almost omnipresent. Peruna is the only absolute safeguard known. A cold is the beginning of catarrh. To prevent colds, to cure colds, is to chent catarrh out of its victims. Peruna not only cures catarrh, but prevents it.

All families should provide themselves with a copy of Dr. Hartman's free book entitled "Winter Catarrh." This book consists of seven lectures on catarrh and la grippe delivered at The Hartman Sanitarium. It contains the best information on the treatment of catarrhal diseases. Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio.

Joseph Cleek fell into a hole of water, one of those cold mornings last week, going in up to his neck. He was on his way to school, and had to side track long enough to dry out. He appeared to enjoy, rather than to lament, his misfortune.

Judge Schwab, of Cincinnati, deserves the contempt of Kentuckians, and the silence maintained by Kentucky newspapers, shows thar his actions merit silent contempt. When a Judge descends to personalities and hosh, what then?

A little comedy was pulled off in Union the other day, that made fun for the boys, but was far from being funny to the principal actor. The comedy consisted of three acts—a shot gun, a tree, a man and a 200 lb. buck sheep cutting a large figure in the play.

Our friend, B. C. Surface, is in great trouble—he loves lightbread; loves his family; loves Kentucky; loves everything and everybody that meu usually love, but he does declare that every time Mrs. Surface makes lightbread in the wiuter—right away the mercury descends to zero and 10 below, and he will not stand it. Ira Aylor and Courtney Talbott, of Erlanger, at dinner on the 24th ult. The dinner was given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bradford and was a very elaborate affair in every particular.

Thomas Judge took the cake on his story about having corn so thick and high that lightning bugs could be seen the brightest summer day, and a lantern had to be hung on the plow to see just exactly how to plow. But, Mr. Dick Thompson takes the cake and bakery too on his latest cow story, and it runs something after this fashion: "Cow gives milk ont of only 1 teat and still we sell $75 or $80 worth of butter every week."

The Blade Club held many interesting meetings during the bad weather. No member of the club is allowed to talk gossip or deal in personalties, but only subjects of vital importance are brought up for discussion. In this way no trouble originates in the sacred confines. If a statement is made before the club backed by creditable proof it is accepted; all points of history have to be proven by the book; the constitution of the U. S.; the historys of England and all christendom are quoted off-hand. "Figures do not lie," is the club's motto, and a fellow who says a horse is 17 feet high and can't prove it, may as well sow oats in a cyclone and expect to reap a North Dakota blizzard, as expect to have standing in the club.

Your correspondent, with Spencer Smith, dropped into Erlanger a few mornings since, for a few hours. The first man we met was Major Jefferson Childress, the genial expert toll gatherer for the Covington & Lexington pike. He believes that "eternal vigilance" is the only safe-guard against being skinned out of the toll, and it is said that nothing smaller than a mosquito nor larger than a Hyrocimus ever gets through his gate without paying. The next familiar face we saw was that of Col. Jack Berkshire, of Florence, who had just returned from Ludlow, where he had been decorating the home of Prof. Collins. Mr. Berkshire has a talent for repairing alarm clocks, but objects to standing on his head while doing the work. Capt W. H. Baker was just returning from dinner, and invited us to the Erlanger Deposit Bank, where all the "genial-spirite" gather from day to day, and pass the long winter hours talking politics, telling funny stories and transacting a first class banking business. Dr. Blanton, the most accomplished judge of cooking and fine cigars in Erlanger, was present at roll call, but we had to lament the absence of Dr Scott and Elder E. Stephens. The Doctor was confident that Taylor ought to be fired out of the Governor's chair without any ceremony, but could not say what would be done about it. Mr. Baker was in the best of spirits, and very much improved in health, so you may know just how many pleasant stories and funny jokes he had to tell about elections in Kentucky, flatboating on the Mississippi, and society life in New Orleans.

Goebel Monument Fund.

At a meeting of Democrats held at the court house, Monday, after brief speeches by J. M. Lassing, D. E. Castleman, J. W. Kennedy and others, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted.

"We, the Democrats of Boone county, in mass convention assembled, recognizing that in the death of Gov. William Goebel, Kentucky has lost her ablest statesman, Democracy her matchless leader and the great masses of our citizens their champion and defender; therefore, be it resolved,

That we most heartily endorse the effort that is being made by the Democratic party of Kentucky to raise by popular subscription a fund to purchase and erect to his memory a suitable monument.

We condemn, in unmeasured terms, the conduct of the then acting Governor, W. S. Taylor, in permitting the Executive and other public buildings at Frankfort, to be turned over to the hordes of mountain desperadoes and ruffians brought there by the Republican party and their allies for the purpose of intimidation and violence if necessary.

The assassination of Gov. Goebel, is the most heinous and dastardly crime of modern civilization and occurring under the circumstances that it did, the Republican party and more especially the then acting officials thereof are placed in a most unenviable position, and it behooves them to prove themselves innocent of any connection therewith.

We condemn as wholly unwarranted and illegal the conduct of W. S. Taylor, after the assassination of Gov. Goebel, in calling out the State Troops to the number of 1,000, or more and surrounding himself with them and making no effort to discover the guilty party, but on the contrary in blocking every effort to search the public buildings for the culprit, he rather shielded him; and his efforts to force the members of the Legislature to go down into the mountain fastness; his chasing them through the streets of Frankfort with the militia, shows that he stood only too willing to take advantage, for his own personal interest, of the awful crime that had just been committed.

Through all of these trials and excitement the representatives of Democracy with commendable coolness stood upon their legal rights and have kept within the confines of the law.

And especially, do we commend the course of Senator, J. G. Furnish, and our Representative, Benj. Stephens, in their efforts to uphold the law, stand by the side of right and justice and relegate Trusts, Force and Militaryism in time of peace to the back ground.

The following named persons in each precinct were appointed to receive donations to the "Goebel Monument Fund:" Verona, C. W. Waller; Walton, J. C. Byland; Beaver, G. O. Cleek; Big Bone, J. D. Moore; Union, J. W. Kennedy; Rabbit Hash, C. G. Riddell; Bellevue, Jos. Birkie and Caddy Maurer; Petersburg, W. T. Stott; Bullittsville, C. W. Riley; Hebron, C. T. Davis; Constance, J. A. Riddell; Florence, Dr. B. A. Dulaney; Burlington, J. S. Clutterbuck.

The necessary papers will be sent out in a few days, and the receiver in each precint may call as many to his assistance as they desire.

Every Boer who is able to carry a gun is fighting in the Transvaal. In a recent battle a Boer boy only 12 years old was taken prisoner by the British. He had been in the thickest of the fight, and had both legs broken by a bullet.

Since the Rockefeller's share of the Standard Oil Company's dividends gives him an income of $32,000,000 a year from that source alone, Mr. Carnegie's statement that the oil king is the richest man in the world still holds good, despite the remarks of Mr. Frick, which credit the iron king with only $24,500,000 a year.

The Twentieth century will have about 380 eclipses, the solar being to the lunar in about the ratio of four to three. For the first time in any calendar year since 1823 the year 1935 will have seven eclipses, the largest possible number. The total solar eclipses visible in the United States will occur in 1918, 1923, 1925, 1945, 1954, 1979, 1984 and 1994.

Judge Brewer, of the United States supreme bench, is the author, or rather the editor of a work embodying the great orations from Demosthenes down. He has incorporated Champ Clark's speech in eulogy of Frank Blair in the collection, and it is one of the richest in classic and historical allusion the American congress ever heard.

It is generally supposed that more men are killed by artillery than infantry fire. This is a total erroneous notion, as from medical reports it would appear that the rifle is responsible for nearly 90 per cent. of the British killed. In the Franco-German war it was estimated that 6,989 Germans were killed by rifle bullets, and only 695 by artillery.

Japanese servants are more and more in demand every year in New York. They are looked upon as more capable than any other kind of domestic help. There is one serious objection to them. They lavish their politeness and courtesy on the masculine members of the household in which they are employed, and can not be induced to treat the women with respect.

For the current year it is prophesied the yield of the Baku oil fields will pass 50,000,000 barrels. The petroleum yield of the United State for 1897 was 60,568,081 barrels. It is an interesting evidence of the different conditions in effect in the two great oil fields of the world that the yield in the United States was from many thousand wells, while that of the Baku field all came from a few hundred.

Gen. Joubert's wife has repeatedly accompanied him in his campaign against marauding natives and on such occasions always insisted on personally caring for his food. While on a visit to Amsterdam Mrs. Joubert was shown an interesting collection of ancient pewter in one of the museums. "Good material to make bullets," was her only comment.

One of the statutes which will be placed in Copley square in Boston is of Paul Revere on his famous midnight ride at the outbreak of the revolution. He is shown just as he has reined his horse to call to a farmer that the British are coming. Those who have seen the model say that the work is most lifelike; the horse preserves some of the momentum of his dash and is full of fire, while the figure of Revere shows the intense excitement of his wild journey.

Electricity is employed for guard duty in the Cincinnati Zoological garden. A fence of fine wire mesh about eight feet high surrounds an inclosure in which there are a number of fine game birds. It was found that rats, cats, etc., climbed over this, so that two copper wires were stretched all around the top of the fence about an inch and a half above it and some distance apart. At night the watchman turns on the electric current, which accomplishes remarkable results in killing predatory animals.

When the District of Columbia was first established it was ten miles square, and took in the city of Alexandria. After some years Virginia desired to have the part in that state receded, and the part of the square in that state was turned back to the jurisdiction of Virginia. Recently there has been shown a disposition to let part of the old territory in Virginia come back, possibly because the Government is likely to expend more money in improvements if it holds the territory than Virginia is ever likely to do.

THE APPELATE COURT

R. J. Breckinridge Sets Up a Title to the Attorney Generalship.

Suit Against Republican Officials Will Be Instituted for Possession of Records and Offices in Executive Building.

Frankfort, Ky., March 1.—In the court of appeals Wednesday R. J. Breckinridge, democratic attorney general, filed a written motion setting up his title to the office and demanding that the court recognize him. Republican Attorney General Pratt was present and entered an objection. The court declined to pass on the question, and ordered the matter submitted as a decision on it would involve all of the legal points in the contests over the minor state offices. Several commonwealth cases are set for argument on the docket for Saturday, and the motion of Judge Breckinridge points out that it will be necessary for the court to decide by that time as to which of the attorney generals are entitled to appear for the state.

The democratic senate also passed Senator Triplett's resolution providing for paying legislators and officers of the general assembly mileage to Louisville and per diem for the time elapsing between the date of Gov. Taylor's proclamation dissolving the legislature in session here and the convening of the democratic legislature at Louisville. The democratic state officers say that democratic county officers are paying in money to Democratic Treasurer Unger, the first money being received Wednesday.

Suit against the republican state officials will be instituted for possession of the records and offices in the executive building.

Frankfort, Ky., March 3.—The two factions of the state government are proceeding each in full operation, but with nothing approaching a clash pending the litigation over the offices.

The treasury of the democratic faction of the government was replenished by payment into it of about $25,000 from officials of Jefferson county. The democratic officials think that the example set by the Jefferson county officers will be followed by democratic officers in a majority of counties where they are in control, and that in a few days they will have enough money to pay current expenses.

The agreed case involving the contests over the offices of governor and lieutenant governor is being argued at Louisville before Judge Field on a demurrer filed by Taylor's attorneys to the petition of Beckham.

The court of appeals, at its sitting here, entered an order postponing the argument docket till the spring term, which begins in April. The order of the chief justice does not give the reason for this action, but merely states that the judges will hold their consultations, at which cases will be decided as usual, and that the court will convene on the bench whenever the occasion demands it. In democratic circles it is said this action was taken by the court on account of stories that the lives of two of the judges had been threatened.

Louisville, Ky., March 3.—Argument in the cases involving the title to the offices of governor and lieutenant governor was begun before Judge Fields in the circuit court Friday. Counsel for Gov. Beckham, President Pro Tem Carter, and Gen. John B. Castleman, democrats, filed a demurrer and motion to strike out the answer and reply of W. S. Taylor and John Marshall, the republican incumbents, after which an order of argument was agreed upon, and Attorney David W. Fairleigh opened for the republicans.

Frankfort, Ky., March 3.—In the house Friday afternoon Representatives Cantrill and Klair, democrats, came near being involved in a personal encounter on the floor. Only the intervention of a dozen members kept them apart. Cantrill, in his speech in behalf of Contestant Combs, from Madison county, claimed that the opponents of the McChord railroad bill was fighting against seating Combs because he was known to favor the bill. Klair denounced this charge as untrue. Whereupon Cantrill left his seat and attempted to strike Klair. Members rushed between them and the speaker declared the house adjourned amid great disorder. Klair later apologized, saying his remarks had been misconstrued and trouble was averted.

Frankfort, Ky., March 3.—The McChord railroad anti-extortion bill, which is on the house calendar, having already passed the senate, was an issue in all of the proceedings in that branch of the legislature, though the measure was not reported from the committee till late in the afternoon session.

At the morning session the house took up the contested election case of Stafford (rep.) vs. Letterle (dem.), from Louisville, and after some debate adopted the minority report which allowed Letterle to retain his seat. A strictly party vote was brought out in this case.

EARTHQUAKE SHOCKS.

Great Destruction of Property and Considerable Loss of Life in Southern Mexico.

Guadalajara, Mex., March 3.—The recent earthquakes throughout southern Mexico did much greater damage than was indicated by the earlier reports. News from remote coast and mountain towns has just reached Guadalajara, the stories of great destruction of property and considerable loss of life are told. The severe seismic shocks had a remarkable effect on the sea, causing it to roll inland, and covering the country for a distance of over one mile from the beach. This tidal inundation occurred three times in rapid succession, and every movable thing in its path was swept away.

A number of small coast villages were destroyed, and there was some loss of life, but no definite information has been received as to the number of persons drowned. This tidal inundation was most severe on the Pacific coast, extending from Acapulco to Manzanillo. Several of the mountain towns in the state of Michoacan suffered severely. The earthquake shocks destroyed a number of houses in the towns of Ostula, Coalcaman, Conchinaxara, Aguililla and Pomaro. Five persons were caught under falling walls in Pomaro and killed.

PASSED THE HOUSE.

The Porto Rico Tariff Bill Becomes a Law—President Issues a Proclamation.

Washington, March 3.—The president sent a message to congress Friday recommending the appropriation of the monies which has been received for the customs from Porto Rico since the United States took possession under the treaty, to be used for general purposes for the benefit of the Porto Ricans. The sums, approximately, amount to $2,000,000. The reading of the message was greeted with republican applause in the house, and Mr. Cannon asked unanimous consent for the immediate passage of a bill to carry out the recommendation. There was no objection, and it was agreed that there should be 20 minutes' debate on a side.

Mr. Cannon moved the previous question on the Porto Rican bill, and this prevailed on a standing vote, 143 to 119. A yea and nay vote followed.

Mr. Bailey's motion to commit the Porto Rican bill was lost, 133 to 149. The vote was taken by yeas and nays on the passage of the bill.

The Cannon Porto Rican bill passed the house by a vote of 162 to 107.

VETERINARY SERVICE.

An Effort Being Made to Have One Established in the Army—Senate Bill Introduced.

The amendment authorizes a chief veterinarian, with the rank of colonel; an assistant chief, with the rank of major; four veterinarians, with rank of captains; ten assistants, with rank of first lieutenants, and 20 assistants, with rank of second lieutenants.

Advocates of the bill claim that the United States stands alone in having no veterinary service. Gen. Miles, Gen. Merritt, Gen. Brooke and many other eminent officers indorse the measure.

Treaty Copies Delayed.

Washington, March 3.—It has been decided that the failure of the exchange copies of the Samoan arbitration treaty to reach Washington by next Wednesday shall not be permitted to prevent the consummation of the convention. Eight American Soldiers, Two Officers of the Hospital Ship Relief and Three Surrendered Filipino Officers Also Returned.

Washington, March 3.—The navy department has received from Adm. Watson, at Manila, a more detailed account than was furnished by Gen. Otis of Lieut. Gibbons' successful raid into the southern part of Luzon, where the insurgents are said to be making their last stand. Adm. Watson's cablegram is dated Manila, March 1, and is as follows:

"Armed transport Alava received from military governor Sunday. Commissioned immediately; Gibbons in command, with crew and marines from the Brooklyn. Proceeded same day, on information received, to Gulf Bujay. Returned to-day with 508 released Spanish prisoners, eight American soldiers, two officers of the hospital ship Relief and three surrendered Filipino officers. Promptness and zeal of Gibbons and detachment highly commended. All well. Boatswain's Mate Juraschka surrendered by insurgents February 16."

The two officers of the hospital ship Relief referred to in Adm. Watson's cablegram are Fred Hoppe, third officer of the ship, and Charles Blandford, assistant engineer. Boatswain's Mate Juraschka was one of five men attached to the gunboat Mariveles, who were captured October 16 last off the southern coast of Luzon while landing non-combatants. Some of the party were badly wounded, one fatally, but Juraschka was captured unhurt.

Adm. Watson's commendation of Lieut. Gibbons' exploit will be placed on the records of the department, and may result in substantial reward for that young officer. He is a native of Michigan, and did much to organize the naval militia forces of the country.

FIFTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

Washington, Feb. 26.—Senate—Formal discussion of the right of former Senator Quay to a seat in the senate as a member from Pennsylvania was begun by Mr. Turley. He presented a constitutional argument against the seating of Mr. Quay. Consideration of the Hawaiian government bill brought out a lively discussion between Mr. Tillman and Mr. Spooner in which the former admitted that ballot boxes had been stuffed and Negroes had been shot in the south to maintain white domination. An amendment was made to the bill striking out the property qualification of voters for members of the legislature, but little other progress was made.

House—The general debate on the Porto Rican tariff bill was extended until Tuesday night. Interest centered in the conferences which were going on among the republican leaders and the dissenting republicans in their efforts to compromise their differences upon the bill.

Washington, Feb. 27.—Senate—Mr. Depew, of New York, addressed the senate on the Philippine question. His oration was beautiful in thought and diction. He strongly upheld the policy of the administration and, in conclusion, pictured the brilliantly commercial and civilization moving hand in hand for the happiness and uplifting of the people of the Philippines as well as those of this country that the galleries were swept by a storm of applause. After Mr. Turley had concluded his speech on the Quay case the Hawaiian government bill was again taken up but little progress was made.

House—The general debate on the Porto Rican tariff bill closed. Mr. Dolliver, of Iowa, and Mr. Bailey, of Texas, made the closing arguments. Each spoke for one hour and a half. The republican managers are now confident that, with the modifications agreed upon at the conference, the bill will command a narrow majority in the final vote.

Washington, Feb. 28.—Senate—Notwithstanding the agreement made by the senate to vote on the Hawaiian government bill the final vote on the measure was postponed until 4 o'clock Thursday. Practically no progress was made on the bill although it was under consideration nearly four hours. Mr. Aldrich, chairman of the finance committee, at the opening of the session, made an explanation of the work of the conferees on the financial measure, his statement resulting in an unexpected and spirited debate.

House—The battle royal over the Porto Rican tariff bill ended in the house in a sweeping victory for the republicans. The bill, amended and agreed upon at the conference of the republicans on Monday night so as to reduce the tariff from 25 to 15 per cent. of the American tariff and limiting its life to two years, was passed by a vote of 172 yeas to 161 nays.

Washington, March 1.—Senate—The bill providing a form of government for the territory of Hawaii was passed without division. Mr. Clay (Ga.) delivered a carefully prepared speech on the Philippines. He favored the adoption of the Bacon resolutions declaring it to be the policy of the United States to turn over the islands to the Filipinos as soon as a stable government could be established by them under the protection of this country. The Porto Rican tariff bill was made the unfinished business, and will be considered as soon as the conference report on the finance bill shall have been disposed of next Tuesday.

House—The democrats scored their first victory of the session on the motion to take up the contested election case of Aldrich vs. Robbins from the Fourth Alabama district. On two separate votes the democrats won by the aid of two republicans—Mr. Mondell, of Wyoming, and H. C. Smith, of Michigan—beat the republicans by three votes—on each occasion. An agreement was made to consider the Loud bill relating to secondclass mail matter March 28. A bill passed to grant an American register to the ship Windward, in which Lieut. Perry will make an attempt to reach the north pole.

Washington, March 2.—Senate—Interest in the Porto Rican tariff measure now has been transferred from the house to the senate. Consideration of the bill embodying substantially the provisions of the house bill, and in addition providing for a temporary form of civil government for the island of Porto Rico, was begun, several speeches being made. An hour and a half of the session was devoted to a consideration of the Hawaiian case. Mr. Hoar (Mass.) presenting an able constitutional argument in favor of seating Mr. Quay on the ground, mainly, that it was the intention of the framers of the constitution that the senate at all times should have its full quota of members.

House—Within two hours of a special message from the president recommending the immediate passage of a bill to place in his hands all the moneys collected upon Porto Rican goods since the Spanish evacuation of the island to be used for the relief of the Porto Ricans, had been passed by the house, the house had passed and sent to the senate a bill to carry out the recommendation. The bill was passed by a vote of 168 to 107, 3 democrats, two populists and two silver republicans voting with the republicans in the affirmative. Subsequently the Aldrich-Robbins contested election case from the Fourth Alabama district, which the house twice refused to consider, was taken up, 126 to 129, and was adopted for the remainder of the day.

Washington, March 3.—Senate—Without dissent, a resolution was adopted calling upon the secretary of war for the court-martial proceedings held during the war against Adjt. Gen. Corbin. The Quay resolution was taken up and Mr. Rose, of Vermont, argued against the seating of Mr. Quay. Mr. Teller, of Colorado, delivered a lengthy speech on the conference report on the financial bill. The senate adjourned early on account of the death of Representative Epes, of Virginia.

House—A joint resolution was passed for the government acquisition of a certain reservation of great trees in California. Mr. Hay, of Virginia, then announced the death of Representative Epes, of Virginia, which occurred Friday night. A committee of 8 members was appointed by the speaker to act with a senate committee as a funeral escort. As a further mark of respect to the deceased, the house then adjourned until Monday.

He Guessed at the French and Struck Nothing But Eggs and Toothpicks.

Gilson—Next time I take a girl to a French restaurant I won't be so all-fired smooth. I don't care a durn whether she believes I talk French in my sleep and take a French newspaper, or whether she thinks I don't know a French poodle from a dachshund!

Willets—What's the matter now?

"Last night I thought if I'd go right down the card and pick out something every couple of inches I'd strike it about right. If there's one thing I can't eat it's hen fruit. Well, the first round we got was soup with a dropped egg in it."

"Well, you didn't have to eat it!"

"The next prize package I drew was a plain omelette. I fought shy of it and said I was waiting for the real solid dishes."

"Yes."

"Well, next I got eggs broiled in butter and then egg sandwiches! I couldn't play off forever, and I had to eat 'em."

"Poor old chap!"

"Then I got mad and jumped clear to the last thing on the list for dessert. And what do you think the waiter brought us? Toothpicks!"—N. Y. Press.

No Wonder They Fled.

An authority upon chemistry was lecturing before a well-known woman's club and illustrating his remarks with experiments. All went well until he passed a moment and then said: "I'm very sorry, but I must ask any of the ladies who use face powder containing bismuth to leave the room during this experiment, as the gases I am about to set free have a peculiar affinity for bismuth and turn it purple."

Whereupon the entire audience save three courageous sisters rose and fled from the room.—St. Paul Globe.

THE CUBAN SITUATION

Natives Are Not Preparing for an Uprising as Expected.

Recommendations Made By Gen. Jas. H. Wilson, Military Governor of the Department of Matanzas-Santa Clara, in an Interview.

Matanzas, Cuba, March 5.—Gen. Jas. H. Wilson, military governor of the department of Matanzas-Santa Clara, in the course of an interview regarding Cubnn affairs said:

"Trouble is absolutely out of the question. The future depends largely upon agricultural prosperity, and where work is plentiful wages are good and a country is prosperous no sensible man wishes to alter conditions.

"Any person who publishes reports representing the Cubans as preparing for a rising does so with malicious intent to misrepresent them or because he has been led to believe this by those who know better. The prospects of Cuba are very bright. If sugnr goes to the United States free or nearly so, there will be such an influx of capital and of immigrants as would render Cuba ere long one of the richest and most prosperous places in the world.

"The cattle industry yields enormous profits, particularly as respects working cattle, which can never be replaced by mules because the peculiar conditions are better adapted to cattle. Coffee, timber and fruit also offer great inducements to capitalists, and tobacco planting yields almost immediate returns.

"I do not consider that the immediate future of Cuba depends chiefly upon schools, road making, improved sanitation or judiciary reform, although of course these things are of very great importnuce. The best the United States can do for Cuba and the Cubans is to give every opportunity for improving the value of the land by putting it to the best uses. In this way capital could do an immense amount of good here, as well as get large returns. I suggest supplying cattle for working purposes on a time basis, accepting regular rates of interest, which should be about one per cent. a month. Cattle can be landed here at a cost of $70 a yoke which, once here, would bring more than $150.

"Large numbers of working cattle are required by reliable and hard working men who are anxious to obtain them. Were I man of 25, with energy and some capital, I should certainly look upon Cuba as one of the best places to accumulate wealth."

Gen. Wilson says he has investigated the reports that Mr. Drake, of Chicago, had been endeavoring to foment trouble, and has found these untrue. So far as he is able to judge Mr. Drake is an honorable man, who is in Cuba for a pleasure trip.

Stars and Stripes Torn Down.

Omnha, Neb. March 5.—One of the incidents of the heated municipal campaign which has just closed was the tearing down and destroying of an American flag and the substituting therefor of a red flag on a flag pole in Mayor Moore's yard some time Saturday night. Sunday morning the mayor was astounded to see the red cloth flying where erstwhile the stars and stripes floated. As the rope was cut, his honor had to call on the fire department to run up a ladder and take down the red cloth. He then rnn up a brand-new American flag to the top of the mast. The work is supposed to have been done by political opponents.

The region is peculiarly liable to freshets, owing to its geological character and the removal of its timber, and as soon as the weather permits, J. W. Toumey, government superintendent of tree planting, and another working plant expert of the government division of forestry will examine the region and decide on a plan of reforestation.

LADYSMITH RELIEVED.

The Boers Raised the Siege and Retired to Winberg.

Lord Roberts Reports the Enemy in Force at Norval's Pont Bridge—British Enter the Free State—The Latest War News.

London, March 1.—The war office has received the following dispatch from Gen. Buller:

"Lyttleton's Headquarters, March 1. —9:05 a. m.—Gen Dundonald, with Natal carbineers and composite regiments, entered Ladysmith last night."

"The country between me and Ladysmith is reported clear of the enemy. I am now moving on Nelthorpe."

London, March 3.—Lord Roberts, at Osfontein, six or eight miles east of Paardeberg, faces the reformed Boer army, from 5,000 to 6,000 strong. This may be merely a corps of observation, ready to retire on prepared positions. Doubtless it is receiving accretions from the late besiegers of Ladysmith and from other points. Whatever the force may be, Lord Roberts has ample troops to cope with it.

As a heavy rain is falling on the veldt, and the grass is improving, this will be a good thing temporarily for the Boers.

Lord Roberts has surprised observers by the excellence of his transport during the first advance, and he is likely to do so again, although military men here think he must wait for some days before going much farther.

No adequate explanation is yet made of the 50,000 reinforcements that are preparing for Lord Roberts.

London, March 4.—President Kruger is said to have left Pretoria with the intention of meeting President Steyn. The place where they will meet is not mentioned, but it is believed to be somewhere in the Orange Free State. Those in South Africa who are conversant with the effect the recent reverses have had on the Boers express the opinion that the meeting of the two presidents is preliminary to a suggestion for peace. But if this is the case, it must be due to the pressure brought to bear upon the presidents by the burghers and Afrikanders in the British colonies rather than in the personal inclinations of the presidents, as all the available information depicts them as being as determined as ever to persist in the war until resources of the republics are much more enfeebled than they seem to be at present, although some significance is attached to the consultation in view of the reported visit to England of Chief Justice Devilliers, Mr Hofmeyer and Dr. Tewater, ostensibly on private business and for their health. But the closest observers do not anticipate any sudden cessation of hostilities, and, certainly, the reports from the theater of war do not tend to encourage the advocate of immediate peace. The Boers are apparently rallying with their accustomed ability to repair a temporary reverse, and Great Britain has yet to test their force as a defensive power under the new conditions of warfare.

Dordrecht, Cape Colony, March 4.—Evening—Gen. Frabant's colonial division after a night's march, attacked the Boers in a strong position at La-Buschagnes Nek, on the road from Dordrecht to Jamestown. The engagement proceeded with great vigor, the Boers generally retiring before the British shell fire from three positions. A heavy rifle fire was exchanged where the British engaged the Boers on the right flnuk.

Gen. Brabant's advance by evening was most satisfactory, having reached the strong entrenched positions which they occupied and now hold, the Boers being on the opposite hill.

The British will remain to-night in the captured positions, although the Boers brought two guns into action and made determined efforts to retake them.

The British losses are six killed and 18 wounded.

London, March 5.—The war office has received the following dispatch from Lord Roberts, dated Osfontein, Sunday, March 4:

"Gen. Cronje, on behalf of his party, and Commandant Wolmarans, on behalf of 4,000 other prisoners who have all now left Modder river, asked the British officers to thnk me for the consideration and kindness with which they have been treated.

"Gen. Clements reports that his advanced troops hold Achtertang and that every communication would be opened to Joubert's sliding to-day. The enemy is still in force at Norvals Pont bridge.

"Gen. Gatacre telegraphs that the number of Boers at Stormberg is daily diminishing.

"Col. Baden-Powell reports that all was well at Mafeking on February 15 and that the enemy's activity was being met everywhere by equal activity on the part of the defenders.

"The position is unchanged at Osfontein, except that frequent heavy showers have muterinay improved grazing to the benefit of the horses and transport animals."

Big Increase in Capacity.

AMBUSHED THE ENEMY.

Twenty-four Insurgents Killed, 80 Wounded and Several Captured By Col. Anderson.

Manila, March 2.—Col. Anderson, with the 38th infantry, employing the insurgents' own tactics, has ambushed the enemy near Batangas. Through spies Col. Anderson learned that a detachment of insurgents would pass a certain road. He posted his soldiers concealed among the trees lining the road, and when the enemy arrived the Americans volleyed unexpectedly, killing 24 insurgents, wounding 30 and capturing several. Some arms and ammunition also were captured.

The effect of this blow has been salutary. The enemy in that locality are dismayed.

Manila, March 2.—A hundred insurgents seven miles from San Fernando de La Union ambushed ten men of the Third Cavalry who were escorting a provision train. The Americans scattered and while returning to camp, one man was killed. The insurgents captured four horses and a quantity of provisions. A subsequent reconnaisance of the locality developed the fact that there were entrenchments there and a force of Filipinos, estimated to number 800 men. The Third Cavalry is preparing to drive the insurgents out.

The recently purchased naval transport Alava, sent to Ragay, in the gulf of Liberate, for Spanish prisoners, has returned here bringing 500 persons, including priests, officers and civilians and ten Americans.

The navy officials being informed that the prisoners were carelessly guarded, hurried the Alava to Ragay manned by 20 bluejackets. Six officers from Brooklyn and fifty marines accompanied the transport.

TRAINING LANDSMEN.

The Buffalo Will Go Into Commission April 1 as a Training Ship—She Has Been Repaired.

New York, March 2.—So marked has been the success of the navy department's experiment in training landsmen, drawn mostly from the interior of the country, on the auxiliary cruiser Dixie, that orders have been received at the navy yard to place the Buffalo in commission by April 1, as a training ship. On that date she will leave the yard for Norfolk, where she will receive a crew of 450 landsmen for training, 172 seamen and a marine guard of 27. The Buffalo has been under repairs at the navy yard for some months, but the work is now completed. It was first intended to employ the Buffalo to convey the wives and relatives of naval officers to the Philippines, but the idea has been abandoned. At the time of the Spanish war she was purchnsed from the Brazilian government, being at that time a dynamite cruiser.

Disorders Continue in Martinique.

Fort de France, Island of Martinique, March 2.—There were several fires Wednesday in the cane fields in the neighborhood of La Trinite and Fort de France, on the Morne Pavilion and Moulinvent plantations, and Sunday there was a collision between some soldiers, natives and Europeans at Bassepoint. Two Europeans were wounded. The recent developments seem to confirm the opinion that the disturbances were provoked by electoral manouvering and did not result from the strike.

STATE ODDS AND ENDS.

TRAGEDY AT A DANCE.

The Heartless Murderer Smokrd a Cigarette Near the Corpse After Committing the Crime.

London, Ky., March 5.—One of the foulest and most cold-blooded murders ever perpatrated in this section was committed near East Bernstadt, a mining town in this county, at the Smallwood dive, a disreputable joint on the line of the L. & N. railway. Millard Hughes, a young man from White's Station, Madison county, while at the Smallwood resort attending a dance, was set upon by Leonard Smallwood, Hamp Gragg and others, and while begging for his life had the whole top of his head shot off.

While Hughes, who had been shot twice in the head with a 44-caliber Colt's revolver, was lying on the floor still gasping for breath, his murderer, Leonard Smallwood, took a seat by the fire and coolly lit a cigarette and smoked it within two feet of the murdered man's body. The corpse lay there all night, and was not removed until after the coroner's jury had viewed the body.

ONE DEAD, ONE DYING.

Terrible Results of a Little Boy Spilling Powder on an Open Hearth Near Grayson, Ky.

Grayson, Ky., March 5.—While Grant Mullins and Marion Dowdie were starting to work in the coal mines a 3-year-old boy picked up half a gallon can of mining powder and ran toward the fire, and as Mullins attempted to catch him the child dropped the can on the open hearth, spilling part of it.

The powder exploded with terrific force, setting fire to the clothing of Mrs. Mullins, her three children and Dowdie and Mullins. Mrs. Mullins, a sheet of flames, ran to a pool of water near by. Mullins and Dowdie tore the clothes from the children and then from themselves. Mrs. Mullins has since died, and her husband is dying. The others may recover.

PLEADED GUILTY.

A Louisville Hardware Dealer Fined $1,500 for Falsely Billing a Car Load of Freight.

Louisville, Ky., March 3.—The federal grand jury returned an indictment against John W. Price, secretary of W. B. Belknap & Co., hardware dealers, one of the largest wholesale houses of this city. The indictment alleges that Price on October 10, 1898, billed to the E. L. Wilson Hardware Co., of Beaumont, Tex., a car load of mixed hardware, guns, ammunition, etc., labeling and billing said shipment as "wagon material in the rough," the rate on which is lower than the rate on mixed hardware.

The indictment, it is said, is the result of rivalry between St. Louis and Louisville wholesalers in the Texas market. Later in the day Mr. Price pleaded guilty, and Judge Evans fined him $1,500.

Louisville, Ky., March 3.—An amended petition filed in the federal court makes some serious charges in connection with the bankruptcy proceedings instituted against L. B. Frankfort, Ky., March 4.—Lieut. Charles Ward, of Company C, Lexington, and Sergt. George Pearce, of the same company, who is also sergeant major of the 2d regiment, tore the crepe from the marble columns of the capitol. Pearce confessed to Lieut. Col. Morrow and implicated Ward.

The latter is now at home, having in the meantime been relieved from duty to return to business. The act is thought to have been the result of a thoughtless romp.

Lieut. Col. Morrow will order a court-martial. He predicts that Ward and Pearce will be severely punished.

The charge against Ward will be conduct unbecoming an officer. There is talk of prosecution in the local courts, but Morrow said: "I shall not surrender these men to the civil authorities. They can be punished but once for this offense, and that will be by court-martial."

KENTUCKY WILL LEAD.

Republicans From the Southern States Will Meet in Nashville to Consider an Election Law.

Frankfort Ky., March 4.—The committee appointed by the republican legislative caucus to arrange for a convention of the republicans of Kentucky, Virginia, Missouri, Mississippi, Alabama, North and South Carolina, to inaugurate a movement against the election laws now in force in those states, held a meeting and organized. The Kentucky Court of Appeals, in an opinion by Judge Paynter, holds that William H. The option held by the Government on several pieces of property adjacent to Fort Thomas will expire with the present session of Congress. They were obtained with a view to making a regimental station out of Fort Thomas. The Chamber of Commerce of Cincinnati has adopted resolutions urging that the post be extended, and similar movements in Newport and in Covington may result in securing the change.

A few days since a cow jumped off the steam ferry Major while in mid-stream and swam to the Indiana side. She struck the Cannelton wharf, and, being unable to gain the land, turned and started back to Kentucky. When about half way across she suddenly disappeared, and all who were watching the animal in her life and death struggle in the high current thought she was drowned. A day or so afterward she turned up sound and well in the lower bottom.—Hawesville Clarion.

The cannon donated to us by the government through the influence of our worthy Congressman Col. Berry, arrived from Fortress Monroe last Friday evening and has been deposited temporarily on the sidewalk in front of the Court House until it is permanently mounted. The cannon is quite a good sized one and during the Civil war was in active service. We would suggest that for the present it should be mounted in the Court house yard until the grounds of the new government building are arranged and then it should be placed there.—Carrollton News.

The Republicans of the State are righteously indignant at the wicked Democrats who are trying to obtain possession of the offices for which the Republicans received the most votes. In the matter of contested elections the Republicans have made a record for unfairness that should stop them from any such claims. The history of contested elections in Congress shows that such measures are seldom contested on their merits but that party necessities generally govern. For instance, a few years ago the legally elected Democratic Congressman from this district was thrown out and Bishop Hopkins was seated because one Republican faction was given the usual emblem and another the Coon as an emblem. It made a difference of less than one hundred votes but the Democrat was unseated and the Republican given his place in spite of the large Democratic majority. Commencing with the 47th Congress and coming down to the present time there have been ten Congresses, five of them Democratic and five Republican. Within that time 124 contests have been brought before the House; of these 80 have been Republicans and 44 Democrats. As a result the Republicans have unseated 33 Democrats and the Democrats have unseated 12 Republicans. The contests brought by Democrats in a Republican House have nearly always proved fruitless, while the Republicans were equally unlucky when the cases were considered by a Democratic majority. A condition of things like this may all be wrong, but the fact remains nevertheless.

In the 54th Congress three Democratic members were unseated by the Republicans. On the face of the returns one of these Democrats had over 3,000 majority, another 5,000 and another 1,500. In the 55th Congress the Republicans "fired" three Democrats and in the 56th two more were given their walking papers. One of these had over 6,000 majority on the face of the returns. —Winchester Democrat.

Crop and Stock.

Black leg has appeared again in Garrard county.

Hogs are dying of a peculiar disease in Fayette county.

Gus Straus, of Lexington, has received a cablegram from the Matanzas (Cuba) Street Railway authorizing him to purchase 200 mules bred in the Blue Grass region for use in pulling street cars. A number of Kentucky mules used in Cuba by the United States Government during the war fell into the service of the street car company and gave much better satisfaction than the small Mexican animals. Mules are selling at Lexington for from $90 to $150 a head.

One of the handsomest and fastest pairs of mares in the country were sold Friday by C. F. Neagle, of Lexington, to Griffin & Cunningham, of Detroit, for $2,500. The mares are bays, about 15 hands high, nicely mated, and step in perfect unison. The sire of one is Gambetta Wilkes, and the other is by Nuthurst. They have won many premiums in the Western horse shows, and will be put in several of the exhibitions during this year by their new owners- Bowerman Bros. handled this pair and drove them several miles around 2:25. Neagle had he held them three hours longer, could have realized $500 more. He received a telegraphic order for them from Charley Mark at $3000. —Lexington Telegram to the Enquirer.

The present double column editorials from the pen of Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge and appearing in the Lexington Herald, do not resemble the speeches made by that distinguished gentleman in "the dear old county of Sweet Owen" in days gone by. We are quite sure if the Colonel were to come down to Owen county and attempt "to sip as it were from the fountain head of Democracy" as he used to say—not a drop could he get from that fountain to cool the raging fever of his blood. Our people admire his intellect and have stood by him through "thick and thin" and have recorded in his favor thousands of votes in the past; the name Breckinridge has in days gone by commanded, as it were, the Democratic votes of Owen county. We followed the Colonel up to the threshold of the log cabin, there we stopped. No man lives or has ever lived who is able to make Republicans out of Owen county Democrats. Let the emergency be whatever it may count us 2000 strong for any Democratic nominee.—Owen News.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Midway.

William Brown, of Big Bone creek, has moved into the house recently vacated by J. B. Eldred in Beaver. Mr. Eldred having moved to the house Geo. Sleet left.

Beaver, and for that, the entire community, has lost one of her best citizens, in the person of Mr. Geo. Sleet, who has moved to his newly purchased farm in Grant county.

Miss Nannie Wolfe, who taught a good school for her pupils and patrons at Beaver the past winter, has been secured to teach a spring subscription school, which she began last Monday.

There is a wonderful exodus of our brothers in black from Beaver at present, a large number having been persuaded that there are opportunities offering at Connersville, Ind., not obtainable here.

Our farmers have about sold and delivered their crop of tobacco, all having sold at pretty fair figures, an incentive to many to grow quite a large crop of fine, golden leaf this winter while baking their shins around some clever grocer-keeper's comfortable stove.

The probability is that before another year shall have rolled around we will have a turnpike from Big Bone to Beaver. Everybody should do all they can to further this commendable enterprise, as nothing builds up a farming community more than a good pike.

Died—February 26th, infant son of James Carroll and wife. After an impressive funeral discourse by Rev. Lafe Johnson, the little remains were laid to rest in the Walton Baptist cemetery. The parents were heart broken, but they have happy consolation in the Master's blessed assurance "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Our mail-carrier, Walter Brown, in passing Midway, instead of putting the mail in the box, he throws it over the fence into the pasture, giving as an excuse that should he stop on the mud road, it is a question whether his horse would be able to generate sufficient energy to start again on his perilous journey.

"Well, hello!" you can hear this familiar call at T. J. Hughes' frequently now, as he has completed his telephone from Walton to Beaver, and if the weather will permit he will have it finished to Big Bone and Hamilton inside of two weeks. This will be a great convenience for people along the route and they owe much to Mr. Hughes for his untiring push in drawing the line for them.

Where the ladies their cookeries club, to meet and have a great hubbub. They permit the hubbubles with them go, provided there they see them no more. It was apparent on this notable occasion, that hubbies were submissive to their determination; for, in the parlor the ladies assembled—hubbies in the sitting-room henpecked husbands resembled. Fortunately I was not a hubby pecked, hence the ladies paid me due respect. Hubbies, I advise you at home to stay, and let your wives have their sway. Forty sat down to the bountiful spread, and ate heartily, and never a word said. Turkey, oysters, salads passed in rapid succession, by lovely waiters in graceful procession. After dinner the ladies to the parlor adjourned, and henpecked hubbies to sitting room returned. The ladies asked conundrums and quotations made, while neglected hubbies in sitting room stayed.

This precinct does not intend to be at all selfish in the next distribution of county offices. All she wants is county judge, county clerk, sheriff, county superintendent, county attorney, jailer. This generously leave the assessor and coroner for the other eleven precincts. Who says the Burlington precinct is not liberal in the matter of distributing officer? She has two or more candidates for each of the above named offices except assessor and coroner.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier, of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could hot stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble, purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 60c at W. F. McKim's, Burlington; J. G. Oelsner's, Florence; M. J. Crouch's, Union.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 14, 1900. NO. 21

GEN. LEW WALLACE, a leading Indiana Republican, calls Senator Hanna a "suspect." What does he mean?

DOES the Constitution follow the flag? is a question at least as perplexing as the twentieth century problem.

THE country now has the spectacle of the President opposing the President on the Porto Rican tariff question.

W. B. BROWNLOW was renominated by the primary election held in the First Tennessee Congressional District.

JACK CHINN has sued Mrs. Banta, of Frankfort, for $25,000 damage for saying he shot William Goebel. This will give those who say they believe Chinn did the shooting, an opportunity to produce their proof.

AFTER so long a time a Kenton county grand jury was found that indicted several parties for interfering with the election last November. Among those indicted is Esquire Wheeler, who had soldiers brought to Covington, on election day.

A PAPER published in Manilla, P. I., says President McKinley has called out 50,000 soldiers to suppress the civil war in Kentucky. This is another case of go from home to hear the news, as well as a proof that there are papers in other parts of world that are monumental liars besides some that are published in this country.

David B. Hill, it is said, is going to the Democratic Convention with his satchel full of bricks destined for Mr. Bryan, whom he thinks he can defeat for the nomination. Here's to you Dave! You won't win, but you will put a spice into the proceedings and wake up the party to efforts that can not be balanced by the Republican ratification feast at Philadelphia.

SEVERAL Republican Congressional conventions were held over in Indiana, last week, and owing to hostility to the President's present attitude on the Porto Rican tariff bill pending in the Senate, some of the conventions refused to adopt resolutions indorsing the administration and their Congressmen, and then rendered their action farcical by renominating their present Congressmen. But in doing that the action of these conventions was as consistent as has been the President's action in regard to the Porto Rican tariff.

A MANILLA dispatch in the New York World tells how completely the Philippine war is over. Generals Young and Howe, at Aparri, are asking for re-enforcements to repel persistent attacks by the rebels; General Bates reports a body of 2,000 insurgents in another province; the town of Iriga has been burned by the enemy; 1,200 "well-armed insurgents" have surrounded two towns garrisoned by the Forty-seventh Regiment, and in their night attacks have killed eight and wounded twenty of our soldiers.

Two more of the men charged with being accessories to the murder of William Goebel are under arrest. Caleb Powers and John Davis were caught Saturday night at Lexington while attempting to make their way to the mountains, where they expected protection from the officers of the law. Powers and Davis were concealed all day Saturday in one of the State buildings at Frankfort, to which the officers armed with warrants of arrest were refused admission, the soldiers frankly stating that they were acting under Taylor's orders. At night the two fugitives were disguised as soldiers and made a dash for the eastbound Chesapeake and Ohio train, which they boarded, accompanied by twenty-five soldiers, who were to see them safely lodged in London. At Lexington the Chief of Police of that city and the Sheriff of Fayette county, backed by a strong posse, boarded the train and seized Powers, Davis and the officer in command of the protecting squad and took them from the train. They were put in jail at Lexington. Powers had in his pocket a pardon in advance from W. S. Taylor.

Editorial Paragraphs.

Most of the gold Democrats are quite willing to come home if the past will only be forgotten.

One can't help wondering how different things would be if Porto Rico had a few electoral votes.

The Civil Service Commission should include in its list of questions one as to what country Porto Rico is a part of.

And now the Republican party and Porto Rico are each wondering which of them got the gold brick when the island was annexed.

The Shah of Persia is going to visit the Queen and bring his harem along. Will the Sultan of Jolo do likewise when he comes to see his great and good friend, McKinley?

Pennsylvania does not want Quay and the Senate will have to reverse the precedents of a century in order to seat him. But neither fact seems to make much difference to that august body.

Gen. Roberts has triumphed, and every British paper is proclaiming that the Boers are thoroughly whipped, and that the Orange Free State is about to sue for peace. This explains why Great Britain has called out 100,000 more troops.

It is a pity that we shall not have time enough to amend the Constitution so as to permit an Ohio man to be named for Vice-President along with McKinley this fall. But perhaps the Republican party may decide to make its nominations "outside the Constitution."

The Democratic Senators should help Senator Davis to carry through his amendment. It is not the best party policy but it is life and death to the Porto Ricans and no Democrat should emulate the Republican policy of preferring expediency to honesty and plain duty.

Where did Congress get power to act "outside" the Constitution? Its powers were delegated to it "by" the Constitution and it has none not so delegated—any more than any other body of respectable old gentleman, as Secretary Olney once called the Senate. Once it goes outside the Constitution, it goes out of existence. It is only by the Constitution that it exists at all.

There is considerable said in the daily press about "railroading applications for patents," and there are attorneys who advocate this practice, but the Commissioner of Patents in an interview has said: "The shortest period in which a patent can be secured is seven weeks, and it can be done in that time only by the attorney for the claimant conceding practically all the objections of this office."

Representative Payne, chairman of the Ways and Means committee of the House of Representatives was fairly stumped the other day. He announced that the President had increased the value of the Porto Rican peso from 41 to 62 cents by a decree. He was at once asked by Mr. Norton of Ohio, why the value of the United States silver dollar could not similarly be raised by legislation. Mr. Payne could not answer. Can any one do so?

The President says that everyone is against imperialism. True enough! Everyone in this country is against what he considers imperialism. The question is one of definition. The President does not consider it imperialism to hold several million of people as subjects, governed by an alien people, without representation, and given only such rights as Congress may see fit to bestow on them. If he did he would be opposed to it himself. But other people do consider this sort of thing the rankest imperialism and they would like Mr. McKinley to tell them just what he does understand by the word.

Pith of the Press.

Was there ever such a spectacle before—a President laboring with Congressmen and Senators not to support the earnest recommendation he had made in his message.—Indianapolis News.

Senator Chandler calls the witnesses in the Montana senatorial bribery case the greatest aggregation of liars he ever saw. And Senator Chandler figured conspicuously in the politics of the old Southern Returning Board days, too.—Boston Herald.

Articles of incorporation of the Equine Provident Society were filed in the county clerk's office in Brooklyn yesterday. The object of this society is "to provide a shelter and ranch where horses which have served their masters faithfully can be taken care of in their declining years."—N. Y. Sun.

For what do Mr. McKinley and his advisers desire to sell their country? That would be a hard question to answer. We can see on the face of things why they are willing to trade the Constitution and a famine in Puerto Rico for campaign subscriptions from the oil, sugar, tobacco, and rum trusts, but what do they get for the British canal and for surrendering the Monroe doctrine?—Washington Times.

Gen. Otis reports a loss of eight men in a fight in Southern Luzon, but as the "enemy left 64 dead on the field and many wounded" there is again gratifying progress in what President McKinley in his latest speech eloquently describes as "the great task of lifting up and assisting to better conditions and larger liberty those distant people who have become our wards." The war of course, is again "over."—New York World.

THE CARE OF CHICKS.

The success or failure of poultry keeping depends, we might rightly say, upon the care given the young chicks during the first few weeks of life.

Should they be handled properly and given a good start towards growth and hardihood, the chances are that later in life they will be both profitable and handsome, while on the other hand, should they be neglected and allowed to become stunted in growth, they will most certainly prove failures in the world of poultrydom.

It is, therefore, wise for every one who cares to raise chickens, whether for pleasure or profit, to carfully look after the little ones during the first few weeks after hatching.

In the first place very young chicks require more heat than food. Nature has provided for them as to food, but we must supply the necessary heat, that is, protect them either by artificial means, or if hatched under hens, a warm place must be provided for the mothers—which will in turn care for their brood.

When chicks begin to hatch do not disturb the hen, except to perhaps take a few of the shells from the nest. Let her remain quietly for at least twelve hours after the last chick has broken the shell. Then remove her and chicks gently from the nest and put her in slat coops under a dry shed, where the sun freely shines, and let the chicks nestle under her wings.

If the day be pleasant give them a little rolled oats or oatmeal, slightly moistened with sweet milk. A board twelve inches square placed in front of the hen will be found useful in keeping the food clean. A little sand or fine grit should also be scattered over the board.

Stale crackers are also very good for first food and may be given either dry or slightly moistened. Sweet milk is good for young chicks but must be given in shallow plates or in patent fountains; otherwise the chicks will fall into it and get wet and chilled.

After the second day a variety of food should be given, such as ground bone, green food, cracked wheat, corn, etc., but guard closely against dampness and cold.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier, of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble, purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 60c at W. F. McKim's, Burlington; J. G. Oelsner's, Florence; M. J. Crouch's, Union.

VERONA, KY., Mch. 3, 1900.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Recently two Mormon Elders have been traveling this end of the county distributing tracts and trying to make converts to their faith. They reached this town about a week ago, and tried to get the M. E. Church in which to hold a meeting, but were refused. They then tried to secure the public school building, but were again refused. The last we heard of them they were preaching in a school house in Gallatin county. We learn that there are more than 1,700 of these missionaries laboring in our country, and they claim to have made already 63,000 converts outside of Utah.

They suppress the offensive features of their doctrine and practice. They will hesitate to deny that their church now advocates polygomy, but when pressed, will finally say that the statements to the effect that the Mormon Church is encouraging and teaching polygamy are entirely untrue; yet in one of their official organs we find testimony exactly to the reverse. It quotes repeated instances of teaching by the leading men of Mormonism to the effect that polygamy is still a tenet of that church. But polygamy is not the worst feature of Mormonism. In their church catechism among many other offensive teachings we give a few: "He (Adam)" is our Father and our God, and the only God with whom we have to do." Chap. iv, question 1, we read: "Are there more Gods than one?" Ans.—"Yes, many." Comment on this: "When our Father Adam came into the garden of Eden, he came into it with a celestial body, and brought Eve, one of his wives, with him." Page 32: "Was it necessary that Adam should partake of the forbidden fruit?" Ans.—"Yes, unless he had done so, he would not have known good and evil here, neither could he have mortal prosperity. We ought to consider the fall of our first parents as one of the great steps to eternal happiness, and one ordered by God in his infinite wisdom." Question—"Did Adam and Eve lament or rejoice because they had transgressed the commandment?" Ans.—"They rejoiced and praised God." Concerning the Bible their catechism declares: "We believe the Bible to be the word of God, so far as it is translated correctly; we also believe the Book of Mormon to be the word of God."

The question arises, what shall be done with those who would seduce our children and neighbors into such practices and beliefs as these? Fill up the minds of our youth with the truth, and there will be no room left for the entrance of false doctrine. As soon as one of these Mormon elders appears in a community, obtain reliable information of their doctrine, and in a proper way lay it before the people. Mormonism can only prosper where there is ignorance.

From the Vindicator, Rutherfton, N. C.

The editor of the Vindicator has had occasion to test the efficacy of Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice with the most remarkable results in each case. First, with rheumatism in the shoulder from which he suffered excruciating pain for ten days, which was relieved with two applications of Pain Balm, rubbing the parts afflicted and realizing instant benefit and entire relief in a short time. Second, in rheumatism in thigh joint, which was relieved by two applications, rubbing with the liniment on retiring at night, and getting up free from pain. For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington; O. N. Grant, Grant; Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, and C. S. Balsly, Bullittsville.

Two violations of the Constitution in a single week is the record of the Republican majority in the House—a record that should drive the Republican party from power. It does not mitigate the offense against constitutional government that one of these violations should have been an attempt to partially right the wrong committed in the other. A rightful thing wrongly done is often as bad or worse than a wrong. When the Republican majority, driven by the party whip, passed the bill levying a 15 per cent. duty on the products of Porto Rico for a period of two years, a grievous wrong was inflicted upon the Porto Ricans and the Constitution of the U. S. was violated. Later, when the Republicans became alarmed at the vigorous protests from all sections of the country against the proposed robbery of the helpless Porto Ricans they again violated the Constitution by doing a thing right in principle in the wrong way—passing a bill placing more than $2,000,000, already in the Treasury, and all future collections under Dingley duties upon Porto Rican products, at the disposal of the President, to be expended under his discretion for the benefit of Porto Rico. It is perfectly right that every dollar of this money should be spent for the benefit of Porto Rico, but as Representative Bailey so forcibly pointed out it is everlastingly wrong, to turn over to the discretion of one man money in the Treasury of the United States, when the Constitution expressly gives the right to dispose of money in the Treasury to Congress and not to the Executive. But good may come out of evil. These things serve to accentuate in the minds of the people the attitude of the two great political parties toward the Constitution—to make plain that there is only one Constitutional party and that is the Democratic party.—State Journal.

A bank in Rapid City has an Indian depositor. A few days ago the old Indian buck, his squaw and little daughter started from one of the Indian reservations for a visit to the Indian School at Rapid City. Before starting the old squaw carefully dug up all of the family wealth and packed it carefully in two small hand satchels. Upon arriving at Rapid City the trio sought the first bank they came to, and entering, made known to the cashier that they wished to place in the white man's vaults some of their surplus cash.

The cashier soon grasped the situation and made known to the squaw that he was ready to take anything she had. The old woman of the plains, with a satisfied grunt reached for satchel No. 1, and opening it she pulled out a roll of bills. These she handed to the cashier. He counted out $500. The second time the old squaw reached for the bills and again she pulled out $500. The third time she brought to light a big handful of gold coins of different denominations. She hesitated a moment and then placed them carefully back in the grip. The glitter of the yellow metal was too much for her Indian nature.

Again she dove to the bottom of the handbag and out came another roll of greenbacks. The cashier was completely astounded. He counted out another $500. The old squaw closed the grip with a snap, and grunting with satisfaction, reached for satchel No. 2, which was being held by the little daughter. Opening the grip the woman disclosed a large number of gold and silver coins of all denominations. There was a hurried family consultation, the coins were passed by and there was another dive for more bills. Out came several small rolls, and all were landed on the cashier's window. Another count and another $500. Grip No. 2 was closed and the woman of the tepee signified by signs that she was through her part of the transaction. The cashier counted all the rolls, prepared a certificate of deposit, the unpronounceable name was affixed and the business was closed up.—Chicago Record.

The Georgia Experiment Station estimates that $6,500,000 worth of fodder goes to waste every year in that state alone. If the estimate is approximately correct, what an almost incalculable loss must there be in the great corn growing belt of the West. Prof. Redding says that corn fodder is equal in quality to good timothy hay. It is better than timothy hay in practical feeding, and is often, as we have sometimes said before, put ahead of clover by our best feeders. Any roughage that may be nearly equal to timothy hay, to say nothing about clover, is too valuable to discard in our stables and yards, or to be fed in a reckless extravagant way. The subject must be left with the reader. It is for him to say whether or not he can afford to grow a valuable crop and permit the wind to blow it away.

THE decision of Judge Field on the consolidated injunction cases affecting the contest for Governor was rendered Saturday. It is wholly in favor of the Democrats. Judge Field holds that the action of the Legislature on a contest for Governor and Lieutenant Governor is, under the Constitution of the State, final, and not subject to review by the court; that the courts must regard the records of the Legislature as conclusive and may not inquire into its motive or purposes. The demurrer of Gov. Beckam to the answer of the defendant, W. S. Taylor, was sustained.

FROM GRANT COUNTY.

[Courier.]

A prominent citizen of the neighborhood of Flingsville was in town the other day and had occasion to use the long distance telephone to Louisville. He asked what the price was to talk to that place and was given the minimum rate of 50 cts. for a three minute talk. He went to the phone and talked for half an hour and almost fainted when the operator told him that his talk had cost him $2 75.

The bankrupt sale of Absalom Carter took place in Williamstown and Dry Ridge on Monday and Tuesday. D. S. Clay was the auctioneer. The Covington Trust Company was represented by J. C. Simrall, of Covington. The real estate in Williamstown was bought by R. H. Elliston for $2,400. The stock of lumber, hardware, groceries etc. at this place and Dry Ridge brought about $3,000. The property all brought good prices.

One day last week, a merry company of men and boys, near Stewartsville, went out to cut a bee tree, and after the tree was down, gathered about it to look after the bees and the honey; when suddenly a large limb which had been caught and broken from the tree in falling became unexpectedly loosened and fell with a crash right in the midst of the group. William Barnes was struck on the back of the neck, and a young Mr. Ashcraft on the head, though neither was seriously injured. Frank Cook was struck on the arm and in the side, and thrown to the ground, by the smaller branches of the falling limb, the main body of which caught his left leg and broke and crushed it terribly, grinding and twisting as it settled into the softened earth. It is feared that amputation may yet become necessary. Mr. Cook is a worthy and popular citizen, and great sympathy is felt for him, in his affliction.

At Dry Ridge on last Friday, Ira Wade and Jeff Finnell, a colored man, undertook while under the influence of liquor to terrorize the town shooting off their pistols on the street and winding up by shooting at John S. Lafferty in his saloon. Wade was arrainged in Quarterly Court and fined $25 and ten days in jail for carrying a pistol, $50 for shooting at random on the highway and bound over to grand jury to answer for shooting at Lafferty in the sum of $250. Finnell was fined $50 for shooting on the street, and bound over in the sum of $250 for shooting at Lafferty. In default of bail both parties were lodged in the county jail.

An epidemic of gambling is abroad in Grant county and all kinds of gaming, the Courier is reliably informed, is going on nightly and daily. Craps, poker, betting on horse racing, lottery, etc., is in full and continuous blast. A book on New Orleans and San Francisco horse races is being made at Dry Ridge. We understand that the bookmaker went broke last week and will not commence business again until he gets a new "roll." Lottery in its broadest and biggest form, with a capital prize of a 200 acre farm, is the latest thing. The drawing is to be made in the old Louisana Lottery style. Tickets placed in a wheel and the winning ticket drawn therefrom by a blindfolded boy. The tickets are going like "hot cakes." For the information of the public we merely quote the law, that it is a felony to conduct a lottery and any one who aids or abets is guilty as the principal. The punishment is confinement in the penitentiary from two to five years. The fine for holding a ticket in a lottery is from $25 to $100, so be careful boys and don't tell anybody you "have got 'em."

It is a sad sight in Williamstown to see boys only fifteen years old drunk on the streets. We don't know where the boys get the whisky. Williamstown saloon keepers have always aimed to keep within the law and we are sure that none of them would sell a boy liquor; but somebody is selling liquor or giving it to the boys of Williamstown.

THE WORKING WOMAN

Dr. Talmage Speaks Words of Encouragement to Her.

Faith and Trust in God Afford Comfort for Those Who Are Oppressed and Struggling for a Livelihood.

This discourse of Dr. Talmage is an appeal for mercy in behalf of oppressed womanhood, and offers encouragement to those struggling for a livelihood: text, Ecclesiastes iv., 1: "Behold the tears of such as were oppressed, and they had no comforter."

Very long ago the needle was busy. It was considered honorable for women to toil in olden times. Alexander the Great stood in his place showing garments made by his own mother. The finest tapestries at Bayeux were made by the queen of William the Conqueror. Augustus, the emperor, would not wear any garments except those that were fashioned by some member of his royal family. So let the toiler everywhere be respected!

The needle has slain more than the sword. When the sewing machine was invented, some thought that invention would alleviate woman's toil and put an end to the despotism of the needle. But no; while the sewing machine has been a great blessing to well-to-do families in many cases, it has added to the stab of the needle the crush of the wheel, and multitudes of women, notwithstanding the reenforcement of the sewing machine, can only make work hard as they will, between two and three dollars a week.

The greatest blessing that could have happened to our first parents was being turned out of Eden after they had done wrong. Adam and Eve in their perfect state might have got along without work or only such slight employment as a perfect garden with no weeds in it demanded, but as soon as they had sinned the best thing for them was to be turned out where they would have to work. We know what a withering thing it is for man to have nothing to do. Of the 1,000 prosperous and honorable men that you know 999 had to work vigorously at the beginning. But I am now to tell you that industry is just as important for a woman's safety and happiness. The most unhappy women in our communities to-day are those who have no engagements to call them up in the morning, who, once having risen and breakfasted, lounge through the dull forenoon in slippers down at the heel and with dishevele hair, reading the last novel, and who, having dragged through a wretched forenoon and taken their afternoon sleep and having passed an hour and a half at their toilet, pick up their cardcase and go out to make calls, and who pass their evenings waiting for somebody to come in and break up the monotony. Arabella Stuart never was imprisoned in so dark a dungeon as that.

There is no happiness in an idle woman. It may be with hand, it may be with brain, it may be with foot, but work she must or be wretched forever. The little girls of our families must be started with that idea. The curse of American society is that our young women are taught that the first, second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, tenth, fiftieth, thousandth thing in their life is to get somebody to take care of them. Instead of that the first lesson should be how under God they may take care of themselves. The simple fact is that a majority of them do have to take care of themselves and that, too, after having through the false notions of their parents wasted the years in which they ought to have learned how successfully to maintain themselves. We now and here declare the inhumanity, cruelty and outrage of that father and mother who pass their daughters into womanhood having given them no facility for earning their livelihood.

Mme. de Stael said: "It is not these writings that I am proud of, but the fact that I have facility in ten occupations in any one of which I could make a livelihood." You say you have a fortune to leave them. O man and woman! Have you not learned that, like vultures, like hawks, like eagles, riches have wings and fly away? Though you should be successful in leaving a competency behind you, the trickery of executors may swamp it in a night, or some officials in our churches may get up a mining company and induce your orphans to put their money into a hole in Colorado and if by the most skillful machinery the sunken money cannot be brought up again prove to them that it was eternally decreed that that was the way they were to lose it and that it went in the most orthodox and heavenly style. Oh, the damnable schemes that professed Christians will engage in until God puts His fingers into the collar of the hypocrite's robe and strips it clear down to the bottom! You have no right because you are well off to conclude that your children are going to be well off. A man died leaving a large fortune. His son fell dead in a Philadelphia grogshop. His old comrades came in and said as they bent over his corpse: "What is the matter with you, Boggsey?" The surgeon standing over him said: "Rush, yes! He is dead!" "Oh, he is dead!" they said. "Come, boys, let us go and take a drink in memory of poor Boggsey!" Have you nothing better than money to leave your children? If you have not, but send your daughters into the world with empty brain and unskilled hand, you are guilty of assassination, homicide, infanticide.

There are women toiling in our cities for two or three dollars a week who were the daughters of merchant princes. These suffering ones now would be glad to have the crumbs that once fell from their father's table. That worsted, broken shoe that she wears is the lineal descendant of the $12 gaiter in which her mother walked, and that torn and faded calico had ancestry of magnificent brocade that swept Pennsylvania avenue and Broadway clean without any expense to the street commissioners.

Though you live in an elegant residence and fare sumptuously every day, let your daughters feel it is a disgrace for them not to know how to work. I denounce the idea prevalent in society that, though our young women may embroider slippers and crochet and make mats for lamps to stand on without disgrace, the idea of doing anything for a livelihood is dishonorable. It is a shame for a young woman belonging to a large family to be inefficient when her father toils his life away for her support.

So far as I can understand, the line of respectability lies between that which is useful and that which is useless. If women do that which is of no value, their work is honorable. If they do practical work, it is dishonorable. That our young women may escape the censure of doing dishonorable work, I shall particularize. You may knit a tidy for the back of an armchair, but by no means make the money wherewith to buy the chair. You may work a dollsace brush beautify a mantel ornament, but die rather than earn enough to buy a marble mantel. You may learn artistic music until you can squall Italian, but never sing "Ortonville" or "Old Hundredth." Do nothing practical if you would, in the eyes of refined society, preserve your respectability. I scout these finical notions. I tell you a woman, no more than a man, has a right to occupy a place in this world unless she pays a rent for it.

In the course of a lifetime you consume whole harvests and droves of cattle and every day you live and breathe 40 hogsheads of good, pure air. You must by some kind of usefulness pay for all this. Our race was the last thing created—the birds and fishes on the fourth day, the cattle and lizards on the fifth day and man on the sixth day. If geologists are right, the earth was 1,000,000 of years in the possession of the insects, beasts and birds before our race came upon it. In one sense we were invaders. The cattle, the lizards and the hawks had preemption right. The question is not what we are to do with lizards and summer insects, but what the lizards and summer insects are to do with us. If we want a place in this world, we must earn it. The partridge makes its own nest before it occupies it. The lark by its morning song earns its breakfast before it eats it, and the Bible gives an intimation that the first duty of an idler is to starve when it says: "If he will not work, neither shall he eat." Idleness ruins the health, and very soon nature says: "This man has refused to pay his rent. Out with him!" Society is to be reconstructed on the subject of woman's toil. A vast majority of those who would have woman in industrious shall her up to a few kinds of work. My judgment in this matter is that a woman has a right to do anything she can do well. There should be no department of merchandise, mechanism, art or science barred against her. If Miss Hosmer has genius for sculpture, give her a chisel. If Rosa Bonheur has a fondness for delineating animals, let her make "The Horse Fair." If Miss Mitchell will study astronomy, let her mount the starry ladder. If Lydia will be a merchant, let her sell purple. If Lucretia Mott will preach the Gospel, let her thrill with her womanly eloquence the Quaker meeting house.

Years ago, one Sabbath night in the vestibule of our church, after service, a woman fell in convulsions. The doctor said she needed medicine not so much as something to eat. As she began to revive in her delirium she said, gaspingly: "Eight cents! Eight cents! I wish I could get it done. I am so tired. I wish I could get some sleep, but I must get it done. Eight cents! Eight cents!" We found afterward that she was making garments for eight cents apiece and that she could make but three of them in a day. Hear it! Three times eight are 24. Hear it, men and women who have comfortable homes! Some of the worst villains of our cities are the employers of these women. They beat them down to the last penny and try to cheat them out of that. The woman must deposit a dollar or two before she gets the garments to work on. When the work is done it is sharply inspected, the most insignificant flaws picked out and the wages refused and sometimes the dollar deposited not given back. The Women's Protective union reports a case where one of the poor souls, finding a place where she could get more wages, resolved to change employers and went to get her pay for work done. The employer said: "I hear you are going to leave me?" "Yes," she said, "and I have come to get what you owe me." He made no answer. She said: "Are you not going to pay me?" "Yes," he said, "I will pay you," and he kicked her downstairs.

Oh, that Women's Protective union! The blessings of Heaven be on it for the merciful and Divine work it is doing in the defense of toiling womanhood. What tragedies of suffering are presented to them, day by day! A paragraph from their report: "Can you make Mr. Jones pay me? He owes me for three weeks at $2.50 a week, and I can't get anything, and my child is very sick." The speaker, a young woman lately widowed, burst into a flood of tears as she spoke. She was bidden to come again the next afternoon and repeat her story to the attorney at his usual weekly hearing of frauds and impositions. Means were found to pay which Mr. Jones was induced to pay the $7.50."

Another paragraph from their report: "A fortnight had passed, when she modestly hinted a desire to know how much her services were worth. 'Oh, my dear,' he replied, 'you are getting to be one of the most valuable hands in the trade. You will always get the very best price. Ten dollars a week you will be able to earn very easily.' And the girl's fingers flew on with her work at a marvelous rate. The picture of ten dollars a week had almost turned her head. A few nights later, while crossing the ferry, she overheard the name of her employer in the conversation of girls who stood near: 'What, John Snipes? Why, he don't pay! Look out for him every time. He'll keep you on trial, as he calls it, for weeks, and then he'll let you go, and get some other fool!' And thus Jane Smith gained her warning against the swindler. But the union held him in the toils of the law until he paid the worth of each of those days of 'trial.'"

Another paragraph: "Her mortification may be imagined when told that one of the two five-dollar bills which she had just received for her work was counterfeit. But her mortification was swallowed up with indignation when her employer denied having paid her the money and insultingly asked her to prove it. When the Protective union had placed this matter in the courts, the judge said: 'You will pay Eleanor the amount of her claim, $5.85, and also the costs of the court.'"

How are these evils to be mediated? Some say: "Give woman the ballot." What effect such ballot might have on other questions I am not here to discuss, but what would be the effect of female suffrage on women's wages? I do not believe that woman will ever get justice by woman's ballot. Indeed women oppress women as much as men do. Do not women, as much as men, bear down to the lowest figure the woman who sews for them? Are not women as sharp as men on washerwomen and milliners and mantua makers. If a woman asks one dollar for her work, does not her female employer ask her if she will not take 50 cents? You say: "Only ten cents difference." But that is sometimes the difference between Heaven and hell. Women often have less commiseration for women than men. If a woman steps aside from the path of rectitude, man may forgive; woman never. Woman will never get justice done her from woman's ballot. Neither will she get it from man's ballot. How then? God will rise up for her. God has more resources than we know of.

But there is something for women to do. Let young people prepare to excel in spheres of work, and they will be able after awhile to get larger wages. Unskilled and incompetent labor must take what is given; skilled and competent labor will eventually make its own standard. Admitting that the law of supply and demand regulates these things, I contend that the demand for skilled labor is very great and the supply very small. Start with the idea that work is honorable and that you can do some one thing better than anybody else. Resolve that, God helping, you will take care of yourself. If you are after awhile called into another relation, you will be all the better qualified for it by your spirit of self-reliance, or if you are called to stay as you are you can be happy and self-supporting.

Poets are fond of talking about man as an oak and woman the vine that climbs it, but I have seen many a tree fall that not only went down itself, but took all the vines with it. I can tell you of something stronger than an oak for an ivy to climb on, and that is the throne of the great Jehovah. Single or affianced, that woman is strong who leans on God and does her best. Many of you will go single-handed through life, and you will have to choose between two characters. Young woman, I am sure you will turn your back upon the useless, giggling, irresponsible nonentity which society ignominiously acknowledges to be a woman and ask God to make you a humble, active, earnest Christian. What will become of that womanly disciple of the world? She is more thoughtful of the attitude she strikes upon the carpet than how she will look in the judgment; more worried about her freckles than her sins; more interested in her apparel than in her redemption. The dying actress whose life had been vicious said: "The scene closes. Draw the curtain." Generally the tragedy comes first and the farce afterward, but in her life it was first the farce of a useless life and then the tragedy of a wretched eternity.

Compare the life and death of such a one with that of some Christian aunt that was once a blessing to your household. I do not know that she was ever asked to give her hand in marriage. She lived single, but untrammeled she might be everybody's blessing. Whenever the sick were to be visited or the poor to be provided with bread she went with a blessing. She could pray or sing "Rock of Ages" for any sick pauper who asked her. As she got older there were days when she was a little sharp, but for the most part auntie was a sunbeam, just the one for Christmas eve. She knew better than anyone else how to fix things. Her every prayer, as God heard it, was full of everybody who had trouble. The brightest things in all the house dropped from her fingers. She had peculiar notions, but the grandest notion she ever had was to make you happy. She dressed well—but her highest adornment was that of a meek and quiet spirit, which, in the sight of God, is of great price. When she died, you all gathered lovingly about her, and as you carried her out to rest the Sunday School class almost covered her coffin with japonicas, and the poor people stood at the end of the alley, with their aprons to their eyes sobbing bitterly, and the man of the world said, with Solomon: "Her price was above rubies," and Jesus, as unto the maiden in Judea, commanded: "I say unto thee, arise!"

TO PREVENT DAMP WALLS.

A Simple Process Which Involves But Little Expense and Labor.

It is unnecessary to dilate upon the danger and indescribable character of damp walls. Not only do they endanger the furniture, works, fittings and dressings of the house itself, but a much more serious matter is the peril which they convey to the health of inmates. It is also known that in many cases walls, as though gifted with the power of voluntary perversity, will persist in proving damp, where no recognized cause exists. In a recent article touching upon this matter the writer describes a very simple remedy for this difficulty. He says: In many localities there is a great deal of complaint about damp walls. Expedients of all sorts have been resorted to in order to remedy this evil, but in most cases they have involved great cost and labor, and sometimes the only alternative was the tearing down of the wall and rebuilding it with a filling of Portland cement and other impervious material. A simple process is said to effectually do away with all dampness. Applications are made alternately of dissolved castile soap and dissolved alum. Three-fourths of a pound of soap is melted in one gallon of boiling water. The liquid thus obtained is thoroughly beaten, to cause a stiff froth. This and the water are then completely incorporated by stirring and made boiling hot. The time for preparing the wall should be after a long dry spell, and, as the wall must be as free from moisture as possible, this condition can be assisted by the judicious use of fires. Then brush the surface to be covered until as clean as possible. With a wide, flat brush coat the surface with the boiling soap preparation, working it back and forth until the wall is covered with small bubbles. Let it remain 24 hours to dry out, then apply an alum solution made by dissolving half a pound of alum in four gallons of water. The alum coating may be nearly at blood heat. This should stand a day or two to dry and harden, then another application of soap, the same as the first, must be put on. How many coats are needed depends on the condition of the wall; sometimes half a dozen would be necessary. The soap and alum form a coating insoluble in water, and this unites with the material in the wall, filling all of the crevices and making a thoroughly waterproof surface.—Housewife.

ONLY A DREAM.

A Convict's Sweet Illusion of Freedom and Wealth Ruthlessly Dispelled.

The day of my discharge has come. How happy I am. How proud I feel as I stand with my face to the wall near the cellhouse door, awaiting the summons to go to the storeroom to change my clothes. It seems that the men will never cease their tramp, tramp, as they file from the cellhouse on the way to the shops. But the last of them finally goes out the door, and I am hustled to the storeroom. I array myself in my "store" clothes, then make my way, eager and trembling with excitement, to the front office. There, after a few preliminaries, I am handed my discharge and my money and joyfully go forth to battle once more with the world. How brightly the sun shines. How fresh and invigorating the air. It actually smelled better than the air behind those ugly frowning walls.

And, now that I am once again free, where will I go, and what will I do? Ah, a thought strikes me. I have not yet breakfasted. Where is there a good restaurant? Right down the street. I enter and give an order that makes the waiter stare in astonishment. Ha, ha! He will stare harder than that when he sees me get outside of that breakfast. Beefsteak, fried potatoes, eggs, ham, hot rolls, butter, coffee and—. But while the cook is hustling around making ready the feast I will take a drink. Is there a saloon near? Yes. Just two doors below. Thither I go, and feeling rich enough (for haven't I 25 big American dollars in my pocket?) I ask everybody up to drink. All accept. The drinks are placed on the bar. The barkeeper is making change for a ten, we raise the glasses to our lips, and—

Clang! Clang! Clang!! goes the gong, and I rise and dress, and, as usual, go to my daily grind.—Minnesota Prison Mirror.

Planked Bread.

Just as the most tasty way of cooking shad is on a plank, so many people think that the best corn bread is that cooked in the same fashion. Into two tablespoonfuls of cold hominy rub a tablespoonful of butter or lard, one egg, one-half pint of milk, and corn flour enough to make the batter just stiff enough to be spread upon a board. Do not let the batter be more than half an inch thick on the board. Put it in the oven, or before a hot fire if you can manage it, and let it brown. Pass a coarse thread between the cake and board, turn it and brown the other side. Use a well-seasoned hardwood plank.—Farm and Fireside.

The Kernel.

The difference in our estimate of people and things depends on how we take them. If we can the whole nut, we find a good deal that is coarse and unnutritious; but if we have the habit of picking out the kernel we generally find it sweet. Even the squirrel knows enough for that. Persons of a very wide and varied experience are apt to acquire this squirrelous wisdom. Out of each of their battles, sieges and fortunes they have contrived to extract a central core that was interesting.—Housewife.

BACK IN THE RANKS.

Democrats Who Helped Hanna Have Now Nothing to Hold Them.

Mark Hanna has parted from his bogy. He has killed the goose that laid the golden egg. His great campaign stock in trade is gone. Like Richard, he may now caper nimbly in a lady's chamber, to the lascivious pleasings of a lute." When he presents himself this year, endeavoring to frighten democrats into support of McKinley, he will be laughed at. For he will not be able to rally democrats to the support of the defender of the trusts and the subverter of the fundamental ideas of the republic.

There can be no excuse for democrats giving aid or countenance to his man McKinley. When he presents himself demanding the rinews of war to bolster up a candidate who has nothing to recommend him he will be laughed at.

It is now the boast of a republican correspondent that, the senate having passed the currency bill by an overwhelming majority, the finnecial question is removed indefinitely from the political campaign, because even if the proponents of free coinage were to endeavor to undo the work of this bill they would enter upon a stern chase which obviously is a long one. They would not be able, even with a silver majority in the house of representatives, to repeal this law for at least six years. It will be idle, therefore, on the part of Mark Hanna to raise the cry: "Wolf! Wolf!" Nobody will heed it and time will be afforded the immense number of so-called gold democrats, who really elected McKinley in 1896, to give their undivided attention to chastising that gentleman for his manifold sins. In effect, Mark Hanna serves notice on the country that an ally is not needed, that nothing is to be feared by those who are timorous of the enactment of free silver legislation, and, therefore, no one feeling strongly about the matter need give himself further concern. He has succeeded in establishing the gold standard for at least six years. Any assaults upon it in the meantime will be mere wastes of effort.

The democrats who in 1896 made McKinley's election possible are now thoroughly ashamed of the part they had in elevating to the chief magistracy a man with whose general political sentiments they had so little in common and are likely very gladly to accept the hint of Hanna that he has no further use for them.

The currency matter is settled for six years at least. It is no longer an issue. Mr. McKinley cannot be posed by Hanna as the savior of the currency, as the champion of stability and the single standard.

He will come before the country seeking the presidency not on any question of free silver, but as the wobbly champion of protection, so called; as the particular friend of British aggression against republics of Dutch origin, as the friend and defender of trusts, and as the originator of an imperialistic policy which condemns the declaration of independence and seeks to give a new character to the republic of North America.

As such democrats cannot but condemn him. He will appeal to them in vain. He had assistance from them in '96; he can no longer claim it. If he does claim it, if he does send his corrupt and corrupting manager seeking to frighten democrats into support of his candidacy he will not get it.

Three years of McKinley have demonstrated to the people of the republic that to prolong his term would be undesirable, perhaps fatal.—Chicago Chronicle.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

——Annexing peoples to the United States who cannot have the rights and privileges of American citizens is unpatriotic, un-American and, from the republican point of view, absurd.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

——When the administration sophists and grabbers shall have shown that the constitution does not affect any new territory acquired by the United States, they will have less difficulty in showing that it does not apply to any American territory whatever.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

——Anti-trust leagues hold conferences, listen to able speeches and adopt resolutions declaring trusts, combines and monopolies "must go." But the republican congress continues to bind tighter around the people the chains of high protection, which fosters and supports many trusts.—Nashville American.

——On the whole Secretary Hay should resign. He is an unfit person to be trusted with an American portfolio. The home of such sentiments as he possesses is on the other side of the Atlantic. This will be the opinion of all Americans independent of partisan feeling.—Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

——Time was when the president of the United States was the head of the government. Now the president dances attendance to the British ambassador, all on account of an overproduction of Hay in his cabinet. And McKinley was to have been our great American president.—Columbus (O.) Press-Post.

——The first problem of "empire" which Mr. McKinley had to solve was how to deal with the Filipinos. Result: An unnecessary war that is still waging. The first problem of "empire" presented to congress was the Porto Rican tariff question. Result: A policy of commercial slavery for the Porto Ricans that makes them long for the "happy days" of Spanish rule. So much so far for these servants who are posing as masters in the household of the republic.—N. Y. World.

THE ONLY SURE WAY.

Abolition of a High Protective Tariff Would Be a Blow to the Trusts.

In considering the action taken by the anti-trust conference at its meeting in Chicago it may be said, without discussing the wisdom or timeliness of other features of the platform adopted, that the plank which declares for the withdrawal of protective tariffs from all articles controlled by a trust strikes an effective blow at the root of the trust evil.

It has become plain to the people of this country that the high protective tariff which, at the expense of the consuming public, has made possible the building up of certain mammoth corporations, has also brought into being the trust as a palpable menace to the general good. The operation of the tariff gave to these favored industries a control of the markets. Established control naturally led to the trust or combine idea. The advantages born of the destruction of foreign competition inevitably suggested the advantages sure to follow the elimination of the element of domestic competition by means of the "combine" for the regulation of output and prices.

The trust system would be broken at its strongest point the moment protective tariffs were removed from all articles controlled by the trusts. The intrenched fortifications behind which the trust forces have been organized would be swept away, and this tremendous influence forced into the open. Competition with the whole world would mean, first and foremost, healthy competition at home. The centralizing tendency of commercial and industrial enterprises would thus be effectually checked. The American people, the consumers, would be the immediate and direct beneficiaries of this wholesome reform.

Nor may it now be charged that injustice would be done to American merchants of manufacturers by this abolition of a high protective tariff. The very concerns that are now "protected" from European competition in their American, or home, markets are to-day actually underselling those European competitors in European markets. They are doing this, of course, because they can manufacture the same or better goods than their European rivals at a less cost. What justification, then, is there for a protective tariff which causes the American consumer to pay a higher price for the same American product than does the consumer in a distant European market?

The unfairness and iniquity of the high protective tariff of to-day is thus apparent in the world's daily market transactions. The trust, the greatest existing menace in American life at the present time, is the creature of the high protective tariff. Abolish the tariff as no longer necessary to the "protection" of American industries now able to undersell Europe in her own markets. The moment that is done the worst trusts will die for lack of sustenance unjustly drawn from the general stock for the bloat-fattening of a favored class.—St. Louis Republic.

OUR SHIFTY PRESIDENT.

Double Dealing of the Chief Executive in His Treatment of Questions of State.

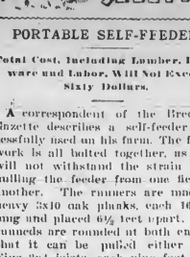
When a man plants himself squarely on both sides of any question the impression left on the popular mind is that he has obliterated himself as a factor in the discussion, and this has clearly happened in the case of the president and the Porto Rico tariff question.

Mr. McKinley began by saying in congress in December that it was "a plain duty" to remove all tariff restrictions on trade between Porto Rico and the rest of the United States. He gives to some of those who talk with him the impression that he is still of the same opinion. But it is known that privately he is telling the republican congressmen that they had better pass the ways and means committee's bill providing for a tariff on imports from Porto Rico. We do not, of course, suppose that Mr. McKinley expected when he put in the recommendation for free trade in his message in December that he would be urging congressmen to maintain a tariff against Porto Rico in February.

The final result of such shiftiness in the white house is that on this question the president's power over legislation established by the constitution becomes a nullity. The president conforms to the constitution in telling the congress what he thinks ought to be done, but at the same time tells congressmen privately that he will be just as well suited if they do the opposite thing and that whatever they may do will meet his approval.—Hartford (Conn.) Times.

Rank Hypocrisy.

The noble quality of hypocrisy is one that never deserts the republican organization in periods closely preceding elections. The senate finance committee reported a new section of the currency bill which recites "that the provisions of this act are not intended to place any obstacle in the way of the accomplishment of international bimetallism," and so on. Do these political jugglers fancy that their legerdemain deludes anybody?—Washington Times.



——Grosvenor is McKinley's closest friend among the congressmen, just as Hanna is among the senators. Judging McKinley by the company he keeps, all wonder is removed that he has shamelessly and deliberately violated his solemn pledges to uphold and extend the civil service reform rules. His net in surrendering to the spoilsmen will make him a weak candidate among the friends of honest government.—Troy Press.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

PORTABLE SELF-FEEDER.

Total Cost, Including Lumber, Hardware and Labor, Will Not Exceed Sixty Dollars.

A correspondent of the Breeders' Gazette describes a self-feeder successfully used on his farm. The frame work is all bolted together, as nails will not withstand the strain when pulling the feeder from one field to another. The runners are made of heavy 3x10 oak planks, each 16 feet long and placed 6½ feet apart. The runneds are rounded at both ends so that it can be pulled either way. Nine 2x4 joists, each nine feet long, are bolted onto the runners, about two feet apart. These joists are then fastened together by 2x6 joists, which project over the runners far enough to support the the feed trough. The trough is built about the width of a scoop. This permits of easily removing the grain from the trough should you choose to do so. This, however, is seldom done. The bottom of the feeder is built high in the middle and slopes to the feed trough on either side. The roof projects a little over the sides and measures about 14 feet from eave to eave. A door or cover is provided at either side for the feed trough. If one has cows in the lot at night, but wishes calves to grain from the feeder during the day, he can simply drop the lid when the cows are in the lot and raise it on turning them out. Calves can then eat oats or shelled corn or whatever you may have in the feeder for them. Cut the rafters for the floor out of 14-foot 2x4's, making them each 3½ feet long; 36 rafters of this sort will be needed for the bottom of the drop on the sides.

PORTABLE SELF-FEEDER.

After the feeder is sided up with shiplap or flooring, the roof of 1x3 sheeting is put on, which is afterwards covered with shingles. It is a good idea to put several braces across the feeder from eave to eave. Bolt these to the 2x4's. Strength will be given to the structure by running a half-inch rod the length of the feeder and making it fast just below the grain doors. The feeder is about 16 feet long, and has a capacity of about 1,000 bushels of corn. Total cost, including lumber, labor and hardware, will be about $50 or $60. From 50 to 60 cattle can be fed at one of these feeders. Have slides in the troughs so the amount of grain can be adjusted to the kind of feed.

USING STRAW STACKS.

Every Farmer Who Is Raising Small Grain Has This Rather Weighty Problem to Solve.

If he is a good farmer he will not allow the stack to stand and rot down. Aside from waste, there is nothing about a farm more unsightly than old straw piles. A neat and energetic farmer does not have them. He finds a use for all the waste on his farm, and therein lies the secret of success. There is wealth and prosperity for the man who utilizes all the waste. The way to use straw is as a feed. By the usual method of stacking, its value as feed is very soon destroyed, however. It is the common practice to put the boys on the straw pile when threshing. Such a thing as stacking the straw to keep it is rarely thought of. The only idea is to get it away from the machine so that the threshing may progress as fast as possible. Well preserved, bright straw fed to cattle as a rough feed would prove of great value.

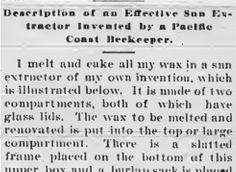
It would prove of great value, also, in the construction of sheds. A shed made by piling straw around and over a framework of posts and poles is much warmer than any shed that is made of lumber. A lean-to made of straw, facing the south, where the chickens can run and scratch on the warm days of winter, will more than pay for the trouble of making it in the number of eggs laid. As a bedding for cattle and horses, it can have no superior. It readily absorbs the liquid manure, which is the most valuable part, and is usually lost. It is thus converted into a most valuable fertilizer if hauled directly from the barns to the fields. Nothing is then lost.—J. L. Irwin, in Agricultural Economist.

Planting Corn for Silage.

The Michigan experiment station bulletin says: For the silo the corn may well be planted in drills about three and a half feet apart and with the kernels from two to six inches apart in the row. In a very wet season a heavier crop may be harvested from plots drilled with a grain drill, every tube sowing, but the greater yield of protein and other nutrients was found in our experiments to be in the crop planted with less seed per acre.

INCUBATOR CHICKS.

It Is Less Trouble to Raise Them Than It Is to Run After a Lot of Setting Hens.



Blessings on the man who first invented the incubator. It seems little short of marvelous how these wooden machines (when intelligently managed) will hatch chickens so perfectly. They really have a better start in life than the chicks the old hen hatches, for the very simple reason they have no lice. How many readers have tried hatching ducks in an incubator, I wonder. There is no prettier sight than one of those wonderful machines full of little ducks when the last ones are out of the shell. The greedy little things begin to "nose around" (with their long yellow bills) for something to eat before they get dry. I hatched three little quails in my machine last summer. After they got dry I tried to put my hand on one of them and he hopped away to the darkest corner, the little fellow didn't want to be "watched."

Some people condemn artificial incubation. For my part I would rather give the incubator the little care it requires than to run after a lot of setting hens. It is so aggravating to have an old hen stay off her eggs till they are cold, or maybe break half the eggs. Some old hens are like some people, there isn't much dependence to be put in them. And if you have a good incubator (and I believe the most of them are all right) you can depend on them as money makers. Of course there is more work attached to raising the chickens. So much depends on the person, whether he make a success of the chicken business. Then I think one has to have a love for any work he is engaged in to be successful.—National Stockman.

HOW TO RENDER WAX.

Description of an Effective Sun Extractor Invented by a Pacific Coast Beekeeper.

I melt and cake all my wax in a sun extractor of my own invention, which is illustrated below. It is made of two compartments, both of which have glass lids. The wax to be melted and renovated is put into the top or large compartment. There is a slatted frame placed on the bottom of this upper box and a burlap sack is placed on top of this slatted frame. The wax is placed on this sack. The glass lid is then put on, and as the wax melts it will strain through the sack and run down through the spout into the lower part. A common dishpan sets under the spout to catch the wax. There is a little water in the pan. The glass will keep the wax hot all day. If any dirt gets through the sack it will settle at the bottom of the hot wax in the pan, and when the wax is taken out, next morning, it will be in the shape of a beautiful cake, while all the dirt will remain in the water. By this method there is little bother and no danger of the wax getting on fire and endangering the house. The wax is entirely free from foreign substances, and is first class in every respect.—F. E. Brown, in Agricultural Epitomist.

SAVING COLONIES.

Bees That Are Apparently Dead Can Often Be Saved by Taking Them Into a Warm Room.

Colonies of bees apparently dead may be found, owing to the unusual weather conditions existing this winter. The A. B. C of Bee Culture gives the following:

"Sometimes colonies may run out of stores unexpectedly, and, to all appearances, be dead from starvation, the greater part of the bees on the bottom board and others with their heads in the cells. Now, if they have not been in this condition more than three or four days, they can often be revived by taking them into a warm room. As soon as they begin to show signs of life, sprinkle them with diluted honey or sweetened water. In the course of two to six or eight hours they will come to life, as it were, crawl up on the combs and be nearly as well as if their vanishup had never happened. Such cases occur most frequently in the apiary, when the nights are not very cold. Valuable queens may often be saved when but few or none of the worker bees can be resuscitated; for it is a strange fact that the queen's tenacity of life is greater than that of any of the workers.

"In my earlier experiences I was trying very hard one year to winter my whole apiary, of 48 colonies without any loss. I did it, but one of them came so near being lost that it was saved only by the above treatment; therefore, friends, don't be in a hurry to decide that a colony is lost irretrievably."

Lime as a Plant Food.

There is one kind of plant food that gives good results on all soils; it enters into the composition of all plants and it is cheap, yet it is not given a place in the list of fertilizers. It is lime, and it is well known to farmers as a valuable and useful agent for promoting utility. But farmers who use lime should not omit fertilizers, as lime does not take the place of manure or fertilizers. It should be applied in the fall, but it is not too late to give the land a light dressing of lime in the early spring. It will show good effects on both heavy and light soils.

He Dealt in His Dream.

"May you take this lesso. home with you to-night, dear friends," concluded the preacher at the end of a very long and wearisome sermon. "And may its spiritual truths sink into your hearts and lives to the end that your souls may experience salvation. We will now bow our heads in prayer. Deacon White, will you lead?"

There was no response.

"Deacon White," this time in a louder voice. "Deacon White, will you lead?"

Still no response. It was evident that the good deacon was slumbering. The preacher made a third appeal and raised his voice to a pitch that succeeded in waking the drowsy man.

"Deacon White, will you please lead?"

The deacon rubbed his eyes and opened them wonderingly.

"Is it my lead? No—I just dealt."—Detroit Free Press.

Our Nation's Wealth.

Gold and silver are poured abundantly into the lap of the nation, but our material wealth and strength is rather in iron, the most useful of all metals, just as the wealth of a human being lies in a useful stomach. If you have overworked yours until it is disabled, try Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It will relieve the clogged bowels, improve the appetite and cure constipation and dyspepsia, biliousness, liver and kidney disease.

New Translation of R. S. V. P.

A clergyman entering upon the charge of a new living not far from London resolved to invite all his parishioners to an "at home" in order to make their acquaintance, and accordingly sent out cards to that effect. A district visitor calling at one of the houses was at once accosted in this way: "Oh, miss, I have been wanting so much to see you, for my neighbor and I have got an invitation card, but we are so puzzled about the four big letters in the corner. She says they mean: 'Reply soon, victuals provided,' but now you will be able to tell us."—Chicago Chronicle.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have such faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

ARTIFICIAL SUNLIGHT.

The Last Addition by Science to Popular Use.

BRILLIANCY AND SAFETY.

A Revelation in Economical Illumination for Homes, Hotels and All Classes of Buildings.

Acetylene, the new artificial light, three years ago known only to Scientists, is today coming so rapidly into popular use that it promises to replace all the older means of lighting. The new light is to be christened Artificial Sunlight, as by its rays colors can be distinguished as by day and in softness, steadiness and all qualities of light the resemblance is most marked.

The great economy and convenience in producing the new illuminant, and the beauty and excellence of the light itself explain in a measure its marvelous growth in popularity.

Calcium Carbide, the material from which each individual user produces his own Acetylene, is a solid substance, hard as granite and is ordinarily crushed, like broken stone, to pieces about the size of eggs. This material is compact, clean, convenient and ever safer to handle than coal. Its marvelous affinity for water makes it of value and the moment it comes in contact with water the generation of Acetylene begins. Carbide, as it is generally called, is usually packed, in air and water tight drums, holding one hundred pounds of this material, each.

Enough Acetylene gas can be made to light a large room for several hours by merely throwing a piece of carbide the size of one's thumb into a tumbler of water. In that case, however, the gas is not controlled—the gas is all made in a few moments and lost. Machines called generators are made, which cause the Carbide and water to be brought together just in proportion as the gas is needed for lighting.

Most of these machines are simply constructed and they do this automatically. If the light from one burner is needed, then the machine causes just enough gas to be made to supply one burner. If ten burners are lighted, then the same machine will deliver enough gas to supply ten burners. The very simplicity of this principle has attracted the attention and inventive genius of hundreds of scientists and mechanics; thus, in some instances, unreliable and unsafe Acetylene generators have been produced. The good and reliable machines are many, however, and most of such are constructed under the direction of competent mechanical engineers and sold by responsible concerns.

Imagine receiving one's supply of artificial light, as solid, one hundred pounds at a time in a little drum from the freight station. When one realizes that each package will make as much light as 25,000 cubic feet for one hour, more light than the ordinary size family will use in three months, and such a package will cost about $4.00, perhaps the explanation of the increasing popularity is found.

The cost of Carbide has been steadily reduced notwithstanding the early impressions of the great expense in manufacture. Such large quantities are now being consumed, and such material reductions in price have actually been made, that users can expect that lighting with Acetylene will be as inexpensive as it has proved to be desirable in point of excellence and beauty.

Acetylene solves the lighting problem wherever city gas and electric light is not available, by the simple process of the Acetylene plant. These can be placed in any dwelling or building by an ordinary mechanic, can be manipulated by any person of ordinary intelligence. They are practical, simple, safe, economical, and appeal to every owner or occupant of a building, every merchant or manufacturer, every individual interested in the artificial light problem.

MY BEAUTIFUL BABY BOY

Weak Women Made Happy by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

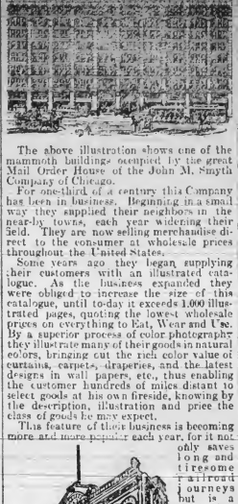
Letters from Two Who Now Have Children.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It was my ardent desire to have a child. I had been married three years and was childless, so wrote to you to find out the reason. After following your kind advice and taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I became the mother of a beautiful baby boy, the joy of our home. He is a fat, healthy baby, thanks to your medicine."—MRS. MINDA FINKLE, Roscoe, N. Y.

From Grateful Mrs. Lane

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: — I wrote you a letter some time ago, stating my case to you.

"I had pains through my bowels, headache, and backache, felt tired and sleepy all the time, was troubled with the whites. I followed your advice, took your Vegetable Compound, and it did me lots of good. I now have a baby girl. I certainly believe I would have miscarried had it not been for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had a very easy time; was sick only a short time. I think your medicine is a godsend to women in the condition in which I was. I recommend it to all as the best medicine for women."—MRS. MARY LANE, Coytee, Tenn.



The above illustration shows one of the mammoth buildings occupied by the great Mail Order House of the John M. Smyth Company of Chicago.

For one-third of a century this Company has been in business. Beginning in a small way they supplied their neighbors in the near-by towns, each year widening their field. They are now selling merchandise direct to the consumer at wholesale prices throughout the United States.

Some years ago they began supplying their customers with an illustrated catalogue. As the business expanded they were obliged to increase the size of this catalogue, until to-day it exceeds 1,000 illustrated pages, quoting the lowest wholesale prices on everything to Eat, Wear and Use. By a superior process of color photography they illustrate many of their goods in natural colors, bringing out the rich color values of curtains, carpets, draperies, and the latest designs in wall papers, etc., thus enabling the customer hundreds of miles distant to select goods at his own fireside, knowing by the description, illustration and price the class of goods he may expect.

This feature of their business is becoming more and more popular each year, for it not only saves long and tiresome railroad journeys but is a great time saver. It leaves out the profit of the jobbing house, the retailer, the expensive commercial traveler, the general agent, the subagent, and thus eliminates from one to four profits, saving this amount for the consumer. In short, it is a great wholesale store brought to the home. The mammoth catalogue referred to is a 20th century dictionary of economy.

The illustration above shows the recent building added to this great enterprise.

The success of this Company seems incredible, considering the fact that they have advertised so little. Their spirit of fairness and industry, and the secret of this wonderful success. The quantity of goods they require in some lines enables them to handle train loads of merchandise, secured at the lowest possible cost and freight rate.

When goods in the rough are coming from the mills and factories in the East, the lake steamers are pressed into service at a freight expense which is but little in advance of the iron ore rates.

The farmers who contemplate raising tobacco are getting their plant beds ready to burn as soon as the ground is dry enough to sow the seed. The acreage, I suppose, will be about the same as last year.

The meeting of the joint council at Hopeful, last Saturday, was attended by nearly all of the members of that body, and great interest was manifested in the work and welfare of the churches, they represented. The following were elected for ensuing year: B A. Floyd, chairman; M. P. Barlow, Treasurer; J. S. Surface, Secry. Those present from Hebron were Wm Graves, Robert McGlasson, Robert Rouse, S. J. Rouse and W. L. B. Rouse; Hopeful—Jerry Beemon, J. S. Surface, M. P. Barlow, George Barlow, N. C. Tanner and B. A. Floyd. Ebinezer—B. C. Surface, E. H. Surface, J. B. Dixon and M. M. It is a pleasure to Willie Huey's friends as well as to his family to see him improving so rapidly. He is a boy who has many admirers.

R. B. Huey and mother have traded farms. We are sorry to lose Mrs. Huey and Miss Mary as neighbors, but what is our loss is others gain.

J. J. Walton, Carl Hunt and Ray Botts left, Saturday, for their future homes in Kansas. Boys, we all wish you well, and miss your presence.

J. J. Huey looks as natural as ever standing behind the counter measuring laces and weighing out cheese and crackers. Jack always gives the half penny to his customers.

I met our old friends A. P. and Hubert Marshall, last Saturday, while in Aurora. They both still show their Kentucky marks—jovial and social greetings.

Mr. Editor, we will try and have concrete side walks and the streets graveled by the time you pay us another visit. [You do not expect me to visit Bellevue again, soon, do you?—Ed.]

W. E Vest and a civil engineer from Switzerland county, Ind., were surveying the ground for the proposed new iron bridge across Woolper creek near Grant's ford, last Wednesday and Thursday.

We see through the columns of the Recorder that there are many prospective candidates for the various county offices, but I think best to get the present election settled before we go into another.

Walton.

The dramatic entertainments given were under the auspices of the Walton Masonic Lodge. The two to be given this week are independent of that august fraternity.

Last Thursday Attorney Walker C. Hall, of Covington, B. F. Menifee, of Crittenden, and John L. Vest, of Independence, took depositions in S. G. Tomlin's office in the case of the Farmers and Traders Bank, of Covington, against John Stansifer and others.

Mr. James Stapleton has hung the crop of tobacco he raised on Daniel Bedinger's place in the warehouse occupied by Mr. Glasscock. There is about 8,000 pounds of it. Jim says if he does not sell it hanging, he will prize it, when thoroughly redried, and put it on the breaks himself.

The long felt wants are about to be realized: Willie Kennedy has nearly finished a handsome paling fence around his residence at the corner of Main and Church streets, and J. G. Tomlin is building a plank sidewalk in front of his property towards the crossing of the L. & N. R. R. on Main. The L. & N. will continue the same to the crossing.

Geo. Powers and J. G. Tomlin had a land trade last week. The latter traded 84 acres of the Waite place, south of town, including the homestead to Powers for 68 acres and some cash. How much is known only to themselves. As both parties are satisfied it does not matter to the public at large what the difference was. It was known that Tomlin held his place at $60 per acre, and Powers' valuation was $50. They were about 3 weeks making the trade.

The North Ky. Medical Society held a meeting here on Thursday at the Pheonix Hotel with the following attendance: Drs. J. H. Brown, and D. K. Menifee, Crittenden; N. S. Mathews and J. M. Wilson, Williamstown; —Daugherty, Verona; D. E. Voss, Fiskbury; Robt. Carothers, Newport; Walter Forchheimer, Cincinnati; O. R. Slater, Chas. McCullum, Erlanger; S. A. Menifee, Richwood; D. M. Bagby, A. L. Adams, S. M. Adams, B. F. Metcalfe, Walton.

At one time it looked as if the meeting of the doctors would be signalized by the demise of one of our worthy friends. Attorney J. L. Vest was parting from his friend, Dr. B. E. Metcalfe in the latter's office, when he was seized with a nervous chill, which was so violent that he could not be moved. There was a rush of Doctors to the office, and if John had not possessed extraordinary vitality, the sight of so many boss disease tacklers might have caused him a sudden trip into the Great Hereafter. The doctor managed to get rid of them and also of his numerous friends, who were crowding the small office, save only a few to watch and care for him while remedies were being prepared. All that night, the next day and night did the brave young doctor battle with the grim Reaper, until this, Sunday, morning he was proud to announce that his friend was improving. The case was a surprising one and should be reported. He has had thirty eight violent nervous chills up to last night, and the wonder is that he is alive, to say nothing of his improvement.

There was much excitement in town to day, March 12th, when it was learned that two boys, Harvey Diers and James Stetson, had skipped from their homes. Mr. Diers learned that his son had left late yesterday afternoon and dispatched Marshal Hance to Brachi, while he took passage on the commuter. The boys were there and saw Mr. Hance and hid until Mr. Diers arrived and had accompanied Mr. H. home in the buggy, when they hopped on freight train No. 38 and got at Erlanger and boarded No. 41 going south. This was learned from another boy who was with them and who had been all along the line during the Spanish war. Harvey had six and James one dollar when they left Walton.

Corn is selling at 45 cents, hay, $11, bran, $16, in our local markets. It is a good time to have such produce to sell.

John Black, a highly respected citizen, moved out of this neighborhood, last week, to Sand Run. We are sorry to lose him and our very best wishes attend him.

Our shepherds have passed through the most troublesome stage of that business and now await anxiously the coming of the spring grass.

The writer with a few other invited guests spent the day most delightfully at Mrs. Christina Stevens', Wednesday. She has a charming family and they rank with our very best entertainers.

There will be a motion made at the next meeting of the Cook Club that the men be allowed to go with the ladies, but to return home immediately and keep up the fires, churn, clean out the hen house and make new nests and whitewash and cut stovewood until time to come after the members of the club, who will reward them by telling them about all the good things they had to eat and the very enjoyable time they had. [Write a "leetle aisy" on this subject.—Ed.]

Your Bullittsville correspondent (Mr. G. C. Graddy) has never to my knowledge been solicited either to attend the Club meetings or make any report of them through the press. We therefore leave it to the husbands who were invited and were present at the meeting referred to, either to acquiesce in his statements or denounce them as misrepresentations of facts. Hope the Bullittsville gentleman will desist in the future making any note whatever of the Club's meetings. He was called on to repeat a quotation and his mind was so scorbed in the composition of his "poetry" he could think of nothing but the silly lines:

"Here I stand on two little chips,
Come and kiss my sweet little lips."

While one of his so called "henpecked husband's" whose mind was calm, and undisturbed, responded with a beautiful and appropriate quotation. (And he was not in the sitting room either.)

A FRIEND OF THE CLUB.

Supt. Voshell sold his wool to J. W. Conner at 25 cents per pound.

Ask Lynn Wilson and Ezra Blankenbeker if they can play crokonole?

Miss Ella Norman is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Asburry, of Mason county.

Mrs. Bettie Smith has been on the sick list for several days. Her condition is critical at this writing.

Matson Rachal is doing some shelf building and remodelling in his store to accommodate a large stock of new shoes.

Napolean Bristow can testify to the fact that "Meeks" Blankenbeker knows a linen towel when he sees it and no mistake.

Rev. Adams filled his regular appointment at the Baptist church, Saturday and Sunday. Sunday was communion day.

Miss Lillian Corbin returned from Covington, Monday, after a very pleasant visit with relatives and friends in the three cities.

Dr. Stevenson, of Covington was visiting his son, George, last week. The Doctor trips along like a boy of 16, and is well preserved.

Frank Allen, of Big Bone, hauls large loads of huckster goods to Covington every week, and seems to be prospering right along. Frank is a hustler.

Daniel Bedinger, of Richwood, was buying tobacco here, Saturday. Mr. Bedinger was driving a "sorrel flyer" that seemed to fairly skim the earth.

John L. Rouse, one of the prosperous citizens, of Long Branch, with his sons and Joseph Weaver were delivering tobacco to Mr. Kennedy, Wednesday.

We have never yet heard a man say that Supt. Voshell failed to do his duty and do it intelligently. Can any man say it? He will be a candidate for re election and its dollars to cents he is elected too.

Our friend, Kirby Crisler, ferried into Union, Saturday evening, on the smoke stack of a "Prairie Schooner" in search of a hired man. Kirb is one of the most enthusiastic politicians in this precinct.

R. T. Clements received from Richmoud, Ind., parties the most convenient oil tank we have seen. It measures just the amount purchased and saves all the oil—making it convenient and economical.

The indications are that spring time has arrived—birds building nests, robbins swapping spit with each other on the back fence, bees prospecting for easter lillies and gardens being cleaned up ready for onions.

The very latest move of a progressive nature to be made in this section is a "ginseng farm" by Solomon Long. He knows the ins and outs of the "sang" business and like Mr. Mulbery Sellers, thinks there's "millions in it."

The Recorder made us say, last week, that Lynn Frazier and Matson Rachal would exhibit five thieves at the Florence fair. It should have read five "theaves." There is only a small difference in spelling, but a mighty difference in meaning. [Correct you are.—Ed.]

L. W. Lassing has been a regular patron of the Blade Club several days the past week, and in talking upon the political situation in Kentucky ventured the opinion that "any and all acts of the Legislature during its present session might be unconstitutional and made null and void by judgments of the higher courts."

J. W. Conner says "driving is driving," but driving through a trending man at a deliberate rate of speed is very different from going at a 2:50 gait and have mud flying up in the air like chaff coming out of a separator and covering everything in sight one inch deep on the dead level. Burl also believes in the idea that parasols are alright for sunshine, but not much good to keep rain off of two people in a no-top buggy.

The editor of the Ohio State Grange Bulletin transferred his membership to Golden Grange in Union. The gentleman got a taste of Boone's famous hospitality, last month, when lecturing here, and could not resist its wonderful influence and power. Mr. Walcott certainly believes that all Kentuckians are not the worse people on earth or he never would have ventured to cast his lot with them. If he don't find people in Boone that will stick to him until Buckeyes are couverted into Bunker Hill monuments, then we are badly mistaken.

James A. Smith attended a meeting of the Blade Club, one evening last week, and talked along the lines of pioneer history of "ye olden times," when Covington was a small village and three or four merchants did the principal business; when farmers from this section made pilgrimages there, perhaps twice a year with loads of hen fruit and other farm products to be exchanged for Orleans sugar and sich luxuries. Mr. S. brought the house down when he told about going there at the age of 8 years and some merchant presenting him with a stalk of sugar cane out of a hogshead of sugar, that he appreciated more than he would a deed to 200 acres of blue grass land now.

March the 11th was Spencer Smith's birthday; March 6th was Master Wallace's, and they celebrated the two events, Saturday, the 10th. We have had considerable experience in this matter of "celebrating" and know whereof we speak, in saying it is a science. To celebrate a birthday as Spencer and Master Wallace did, with a dinner, is a science of all sciences, and depends for its success upon a great variety of contingencies, principal among which is knowing how from away back. Knowing how our forefathers down through generation after generation of people who make hospitality, entertaining and cooking a study. Kentuckians, by the way, are the only people on earth who have reached the highest point of perfection in these arts and look upon hospitality as the cardinal virtues. Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Smith are typical Kentuckians and not exceptions to this rule. Saturday was a lovely day, with birds singing, lambs skipping, &c., so it was an ideal day for dining. At 11 o'clock a large number of relatives and friends had gathered around their fireside, radiant with health and excellent appetiets. At 12:30 dinner was served and fully sustained Mrs. Smith's reputation for fine cooking—a brace of turkeys (baked to a Queen's taste), with boiled ham, supplemented by salads and all kinds of vegetables, were the substantials, while cake of several kinds with ice cream and candies were the delicacies. The day was one of unalloyed pleasure to all present.

For sale—50 nice ewes, and 2 milch cows. Cows will soon be fresh.

This breeding has produced the best saddle and harness horses ever in the Blue Grass section, and it is to be hoped that the breeders in this section will take advantage of it and raise a higher grade of horses, when it can be done so cheap.

D. E. Castleman's horse was running on the street, last Thursday, when it ran on to the pavement arouud the Court-house square, and one of its feet slipped betweeu two of the iron rods and under the bottom iron rail, where the horse was securely fastened for some time before it could be released. Fortunately the horse's leg was not broken, but the iron rail stripped all the skin and flesh off from near the knee down to the hoof. Veterinary Crisler, of Bullittsville, and Dr. Rouse, of Limaburg, chauced to be in town and dressed the wound. The horse suffered agony all day, but the pain ceased that night and he will soon be well again. This horse, like some people, is particularly unfortuuate, and has been badly crippled two or three times.

One afternoon last week when the sun was shining bright and warm, and several men were lined up on the bank yard fence. A full attendance at the Reunion of the Sons of Confederate Veterans is earnestly desired. In order to insure this, proper orgaulzations of these Sons must be perfected in the various towns throughout the State. If a son or grandson of a Confederate Soldier or Sailor will write me requesting it, a printed guide explaining the method of orgauizing a local camp and a model constitution will be forwarded him. In this way local camps can become a part of the National Order of United Sons of Confederate Veterans. The plan of organization is plain and simple.

Kentucky, for many reasons, should put forth special efforts toward the success of the Reunion and the cooperation of the Sons of Confederate Veterans is sought. Issued by the order of

The above is a copy of an invitation (except names) issued to about twenty favored guests, the most of whom responded and assembled in the spacious parlor of "Widdy Spookendyke," in Burlington, last Friday evening.

Those who participated in the Merry Walk did so with a grace and dignity that is seldom, if ever, surpassed. So majestically and gracefully did all bear themselves, the judges could not agree as to which couple should have the prize, thereupon all were invited to partake of it with a delicious beverage, and the contest was thus amicably settled.

The lady guests present were Sarah Ann Snopperton, pink moire, black lace; Aramiuta Poddleston, royal purple and white lace; Eliza Jane Slimskin, white pique; Betsy Slocum, pink unnsveiling and white silk; Araminta Fuddleston, brocade peau de soie; Charity Swibald was dressed as an Indian maid; Serephina and Anabella Scroggius, the former in white and scarlet, the latter, wiue silk; Belzura Iceuogle, brocade de chaue. The "widdy" ladies, Fuddleston, Clutterchump, Scoggins and Spookeudyke, looked handsome in their black dresses and becoming caps.

The gentlemen, Messrs. Huddleston, Snoberton, Poddlestou, Slimskiuson, Slocum and Icenoggle were each in evening attire and looked uuusually handsome.

It was about eleven o'clock when the guests bid the "Widdy" Spookendyke adieu, having been entertained by her in a manner seldom equaled and never excelled.

A CARD.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

In begging you for your valuable space, I wish to thank my many patrons of Boone and surrounding counties for their liberal patronage during the past season. I am proud to say it has been highly appreciated by the Yard Compauy, as well as myself. We have established a permanent market in Covingtou again, regardless of discrimination, and at no time have we ever had to sell any consignment below Cincinnati prices. Notiug the above we feel free to solicit your business for Covington. We regard it a home enterprise, and knowing we can handle all kinds of live stock, regard less of quantity, to the best advantage, is why this letter is written. Our business has been good and we are now making arrangements to increase it the coming season. We find our stock wanted by many gilt-edge firms of the East and it is safe to say it will always be worth above par, as it is paying now a liberal dividend. Our cattle sales will show that the writer did more business in Covington last month than did ever the old Covington Stock Yards in a February. We have increased the slaughtering near double since we opened our yards. Butchers that formerly bought dressed meat are now killing their supplies. Covington and Newport butchers have been true to our enterprise, and on many occasions Cincinnati butchers have been liberal buyers. Last season we handled 50,000 sheep and lambs in two months at the very highest market price. I want to impress on your minds that this season we will have permanent lamb buyers in Covington, representing all the best houses in the East and West, and hope to show you a prosperous and satisfactory business, and the seller will not be the buyer, which will be a satisfaction to many shippers. We sold more cattle for Eastern markets and export trade than Cincinnati and at better prices—many loads at 5¢ and above, which is a high price for the class of cattle our country affords. We will have the usual demand for this class of cattle as the president of the compauy (W. B. Kidd) is an expert buyer; also (the king of Ireland) Simon O'Donnel, the largest export buyer of the United States, is interested in the yards, and to meet him is meeting a whirl-wind. He has done more business and traveled more distance than any man of his age, and is always picasant and ready at any time to talk the above named goods. Our butcher cattle trade is a steady trade, and we need a supply daily for our many butchers. Our hog trade has not been up to expectations, owiug to scarcity of hogs tributary to our market, but rest assured we are capable of handling all consignments as Eastern orders would absorb them say nothing of our packiug house and our Covington and Newport butchers, who are always in the market. All live stock shippers were benefitted by our yards last season in prices, and reason teaches you that you will be farther beuefitted by giving our place a liberal patronage, and you may also rest assured with no detriment to the consiguor. Our R. R. facilities are equal to any yard. We get Cincinuati rates to any point East or West. All stock shipped on C. & O., K. C. and L. & N. R. R., can save $2 to $3 per car by unloading in Covington, say nothing of extra shriukage in shipping through the cities to Cincinnati, lu securing the same price at Covington would seem unreasonable for any Southern shipper to bill to Cincinuati.

Trusting I am intruding on your space I will conclude, wishing and anticipating shippers a prosperous year.

Respc'ty, J. M. CONNER.

An American woman living in Manila writes that the two greatest deprivations that she and her American friends have to undergo are fresh fruit and sweet milk. There is no berry of any sort to be had and no small fruit. There are plenty of bananas, but they have an insipid taste.

The present population of the province of Tumses, Peru, is 5,000 souls, in sad contract with its former prosperity, when 100 miles of canal on either bank of that river furnished occupation for 80,000 agriculturists alone. Vestiges of roads and aqueducts are found throughout the country.

Senator Harris, a member of the committee on privileges and elections, rarely speaks out in meeting. Days pass without a comment falling from the lips of the Kansas statesman. He is said to be even taciturn among his close friends. Senator Harris was born in Loudon county, Va., and was graduated at Columbian college.

The population of India is about four times that of the United States, while the latter has about double the area of the former. The bulk of the people are employed in agriculture. Each man rents, generally, but a few acres. There are, of course, occasional large plantations run by a rich man or Rajah, but they are exceptional.

Some curious secrets as to matrimony are seen in the following statistics: May and November are the most marrying months. Fewer people are married in March than in any other month. When bachelors marry widows the widow is generally the older, but when widowers marry maids the maid is usually the younger.

Sunny Slope, Cal., enjoys the distinction of being the largest vineyard in the world. It is situated amid the most beautiful scenery of that favored land, two miles from San Gabriel. Of a total of 1,900 acres, 735 are devoted to grape vine, the remainder being distributed among orange trees (of which there are 12,000), lemon and olive trees.

The first electric launch to be used in the canals of Venice, Italy, has been delivered from England. The launch, which is called the Alessandro Volta, will accommodate fifty passengers. Its length is about fifty-six feet and width ten feet. It is equipped with a storage battery of 100 cells and will travel at a speed of about nine miles an hour.

In Berlin the police authorities control many little things about which the police of American cities would not concern themselves once in a thousand years. Three courts decided recently that if the Berlin police judged any particular color scheme of a house to be improper or too gaudy or in bad taste, otherwise they could order the painter to change it.

No member of the house is more particular with his correspondence than Representative Bradley, of New York. He makes it a point to answer every letter the same day it is received. The letters he receives are carefully filed away. He believed in preserving all correspondence no matter how insignificant, for, as he says, it often happens that what may appear as a trifling note may at some time be of great value in more ways than one.

After nearly half a century of newspaper and literary work in this country Mrs. Jennie June Croly will soon leave for England, the land of her birth, where she intends to pass the remaining years of her life. Mrs. Croly began her newspaper work in New York in 1855, was one of the founders of Sorosis in 1868, was twice elected president of that organization and in 1889 founded and became president of the woman's press club.

Sir Isaac Pitman invented the "vegetarian bed," composed not of feathers, but of mosses, ferns, flowers and hay. This bedding material, commended as healthy and health-giving by many doctors and others, has become famous in vegetarian circles, and deserves to be more widely known. "It smells like ozone," is the testimony of more than one physician, and many say that sleeping upon it "gives rest to brain and mind."

Coal and wool will be superseded by electricity in the twentieth century kitchen. The electric oven bakes bread ideally, and meats prepared by it do not require watching or basting, while broiling or frying may be done in superior style. The electric chafing dish is attachable to an ordinary light wire; the current is turned and immediately the oysters begin to stew or the eggs to frizzle. In the electric kitchen there will be no coal, no ashes, no smoke, no soot, and not even a battery.

Not many authors have had a larger income from their books than the celebrated English author, John Ruskin. For the past thirteen years his copyrights brought him an average of $20,000 a year. They must continue a valuable property, though the earlier writings will, of course, be anybody's in seven years. A careful estimate shows that Ruskin's best selling book has been "Sesame and Lilies." After it would come "A Crown of Wild Olive," "The Seven Lamps of Architecture," and "Unto This Last."

INDIAN UPRISING.

Mexican Troops Unable to Suppress the Outbreak in the State of Sonora, Mexico.

Austin, Tex., March 10.—Advices from Ortiz, state of Sonora, Mexico, are that the Indians have continued their depredations to an alarming extent during the past week, having ransacked a great stretch of territory and done no little damage to several hamlets along the road between Potam and Torin. The Mexican troops do not seem to be able to cope with the situation at the present writing, and it is manifest that more men will be needed to effectually suppress the uprising.

The Indians, who were all banded together about ten days ago for the purpose, presumably, of making an attack upon the main forces of the Mexicans near Torin, have again dispersed into roving bands of some 200 or 300 each, and in this manner they are covering a great range of territory and doing more damage in the way of marauding movements. It is evident, however, that they are in constant communication with one another both by "runners" and by signal fires, as almost every night signal fires are flashed from the mountains, indicating the temporary camp of some of the Indians.

Owing to the unsettled and extremely wild country in this neighborhood, however, the Mexican troops do not dare venture to the location in the night, and, for that matter, they find great difficulty in leaving the road during the day, owing to the acres of prickly pear and chaparral through which they have to wade and which seriously interfere with their progress. The Mexican troops are very suspicious of the Indians laying traps to massacre the entire force.

WHEELER'S POSITION.

He Is Still in the Volunteer Service, His Resignation Never Having Been Received.

Washington, March 10.—The statement attributed to Gen. Joe Wheeler in a recent interview in San Francisco, that he tendered his resignation as an officer of the volunteer army last November, has caused some surprise among the officials of the war department. It is said by these that if Gen. Wheeler has tendered his resignation, the document has not yet reached the adjutant general's office. According to the records of the war department, Gen. Wheeler is still an officer of the volunteer army and is in receipt of the pay and allowances of a brigadier general.

In case he desires to quit the military service to resume his legislative duties, the matter will be considered by the president after a personal conference with him. It is said at the war department that Gen. Wheeler was ordered home from the Philippines at his own request, as reported to the department by Gen. Otis.

IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Gen. Bates' Expedition Lost Seven Men Killed and Ten Wounded—Insurgents In South Camarines.

Manila, March 10.—Gens. Young and Hood are asking for reinforcements and a battalion of the 48th regiment has been sent to Aparri. Other troops will follow. The rebels recently persistently attacked Aparri for several hours, but were finally driven away. Details of the affair are lacking.

Gen. Bates has returned here after leaving garrisons in the provinces of North and South Camarines. The expedition lost seven men killed and 10 wounded. On entering New Caceres, province of South Camarines, Gen. Bates learned that 2,000 insurgents had departed the same day. The Americans immediately sent out three pursuing columns, encountering the enemy in three small engagements and killing a total of 40 men.

The Spanish prisoners report that the enemy has divided into small bands in the mountains, under the leadership of Gen. Legaspi.

Incendiarism Suspected.

Chicago, March 10.—From evidence collected it is believed that the destruction by fire Thursday night of the Second Presbyterian church and the burning a few weeks ago of the Trinity Methodist church were the work of an incendiary crank. Both fires started in the organ loft, where it was almost impossible to reach the flames. Rev. W. E. McClellan, pastor of Trinity church, received a postal card bearing the following message: "God does not care any more for churches than he does for barns, or he would not let them burn up." An effort will be made to find the writer.

Charged With Poisoning.

Columbia, S. C., March 10.—A sensation has been caused here by the rearrest of Mrs. Belle Graddick, a handsome young woman, on the charge of poisoning her husband who died February 10. The coroner's jury at the time of Mr. Graddick's death had the wife and a young man named Eldridge Dawkins arrested, but the two were released subsequently on a technicality.

BOERS MAKE A STAND.

An All-Day Engagement in the Driefontein Kopjes Was the Result.

During the Night the Enemy Retired, but Are Being Pursued By the British Troops—British Casualties So Far 15,677.

Driefontein, Orange Free State, March 11, 6:35 a. m.—Broadwood's cavalry brigade, advancing on Bloemfontein, unexpectedly found the Boers in a strong position in the Driefontein kopjes yesterday. Gen. Kelly-Kenny's division arriving, severe fighting ensued. The Boers resisted stubbornly, but were driven from their center position, leaving a number of dead and 40 prisoners. The British force is moving forward today.

During the fighting, in which five regiments took part, with artillery, the Boers, though forced from their center position, clung tenaciously to the other kopjes, shelling the British freely with three guns and two Vickers-Maxims. The British cavalry began to turn the Boer position, but night fell before the movement was completed. The Boers retired during the night.

A large number of Australians were engaged in the battle. The 1st Australian horse brigade, with the Scots Greys, advanced to within 800 yards of the Boers under heavy fire.

The New South Wales mounted infantry joined in the pursuit of the Boers northward.

The action began at 8 in the morning with an artillery duel. Gen. French's cavalry and Gen. Porter's brigade supported out guns. The Boer artillery was accurately handled, and the British cavalry found a task harder than they had expected. The Boers also maintained a stubborn rear guard action along a running front of 12 miles on a very difficult ground.

Gen. Broadwood with dogged perseverance moved altogether six miles southward, trying to find a means to get round, but the Boers followed behind rising ground and even attempted to outflank him. Meanwhile the sixth division of infantry, advancing on the Boer left, slowly forced the enemy to retire. Had the infantry been able to move faster, the Boers would have been enveloped. The last shot was fired at 7:30 p. m. The prisoners belonged to President Kruger's own commando.

The British reported casualties up to this date are as follows: Killed, 2,418; wounded, 8,747; died of disease, 1,029; missing, 3,483; total, 15,677.

Cape Town, March 11.—News from Lady Grey, Herschel and Aliwal North shows that the rebels are laying down their arms in large numbers and that the Boers all along the border are in serious straits.

The rebels assert that the Boers are sullen sitting on bread and water and so called coffee made from rye. Other rebels are leaving to fight in the Free State. British rule has been restored at Lady Grey, where a big fight is reported to have occurred, many rebels being killed.

It is reported that thousands of rebels contemplate surrendering to Gen. Brabant.

London, March 12.—A correspondent of the Daily Mail at Lorenzo Marquis, telegraphing Saturday, says:

"According to Boer reports, the fall of Mafeking is certain. There has been heavy fighting this week, and the Boers have been shelling the town from all the outlying forts, which they have captured. Col. Baden-Powell cleared all the natives out of the town, but the Boers drove them back.

"The Boers are preparing for a final assault, with the idea that the capture of Mafeking will raise the drooping spirits of the burghers."

London, March 12.—The Daily Mail has received the following dispatch from Pretoria, dated Saturday, March 10, and censored by the Boer government:

"President Kruger and President Steyn have wired to Lord Salisbury peace proposals, on condition that the independence of the two republics be respected and the rebel colonials amnestied.

"Yesterday the foreign consuls were called into conference and were requested to invite the intervention of the powers they represented in order to prevent further bloodshed."

London, March 9.—The full extent of Lord Roberts' success is not clear, but the best informed appear satisfied that it brings peace perceptibly nearer. Experts anticipate that the burghers will make no further stand west of the Free State capital, and some of them even deduce from the fact that the Boer forces are divided and have retreated in different directions that demoralization has set in, and that the Transvaal forces will next be found carefully entrenched in positions north of the Vaal river, while the bulk of the Free Staters will abandon the contest and sue for peace.

Object to Penitentiary-Made Goods.

Kansas City, Mo., March 12.—Implement men say trouble is about to result because of the action of the board of control of the Kansas state penitentiary making binding twine and selling it at a reduction of 1½ cents per pound.

Jackson to Return to Australia.

San Francisco, March 11.—Peter Jackson, the world famous colored heavy weight, is about to return to his old home in Sydney, Australia, there to remain. Jackson is at present in Victoria, B. C.

LINCOLN'S BODY MOVED.

It Was Placed in a Temporary Receiving Vault Until the New Monument Is Completed.

Springfield, Ill., March 12.—After a lapse of 24 years, during which time they have lain hermetically sealed and buried beneath a half dozen feet of solid concrete, the remains of Abraham Lincoln were removed Saturday afternoon from the crypt of the Lincoln national monument and transferred to a temporary vault of the monument knoll.

The removal of the body was made necessary by the demolishing of the monument preparatory to its reconstruction. For this purpose the last general assembly of Illinois made an appropriation of $100,000. The work of dismantling has been going on throughout the winter, and Friday the large force of workmen came within touch of the burial casket.

The ceremonies attending the transfer were informal. State Treasurer Public Instruction Bayliss, representing the present board of trustees of the monument, were present and witnessed the removal of the casket in their official capacity, and the Lincoln Monument association, The Lincoln Guard of Honor, and the G. A. R. were also represented. None of the relatives of the dead president were present.

When the cedar box containing the metallic casket was exposed to view it was found to be in a bad state of decay, and in a few years more it would have entirely rotted away. This is due to the moisture which has found its way into the concrete masonry which formed a covering for the casket. The casket itself was not opened, that ceremony being postponed until the remains are placed in their final resting place upon the completion of the new monument. The temporary vault prepared for the casket is 12 feet square and is constructed with double decks, thus insuring room for the six bodies now under the monument.

HIS LIFE'S JOURNEY ENDED.

Hon. E. J. Phelps, Ex-Minister to England, Dies at His Residence in New Haven, Ct.

New Haven, Ct., March 10.—Hon. E. J. Phelps, former minister to England, died at his home in this city late Friday afternoon, after an illness of about two months. The end was peaceful, and for several hours before he passed away he was unconscious.

New Haven, Ct., March 12.—Funeral services for the late Edward J. Phelps, ex-Minister to England, were held in Battel chapel. Dr. Timothy Dwight delivered the funeral address. The college choir sang two hymns, "Lead, Kindly Light," and "Abide With Me."

The plain black coffin was carried into the chapel on the shoulders of eight seniors, members of the Wolf's Head Fraternity, of which Prof. Phelps was an honorary member.

Among the honorary pallbearers were President Arthur T. Hadley, of Yale; Prof. William Graham Sumner and Dean Francis Wayland.

The body was taken to Burlington, Vt., where the interment in the family plot will be made Tuesday.

Fifty Were Drowned.

Calais, France, March 11.—The British steamer Windsor, which has arrived here from Leith, Scotland, reports that the British steamer Cuvier, Capt. Quinton, from Antwerp for Brazil, was sunk in collision with an unknown steamer. The second mate and two seamen of the Cuvier were rescued. The rest of the crew of about 50 are believed to be lost.

Telegraph Line to Alaska.

Seattle, Wash., March 12.—Capt. Abercrombie and 43 government engineers will sail for the Copper river, Alaska, on the steamer St. Paul, this week. They will at once prepare to lay bridges over the Copper, Klutena and other rivers for the trail to the Yukon, and then will begin setting poles for the telegraph line. It is the intention to string most of the wire from Valdez to St. Michael.

No More Cutting of Rates.

New York, March 12.—It is rumored that the great western railroads have made an agreement to do no more cutting of rates between Chicago and the western coast. The agreement, it is reported on excellent authority, practically amounts to an alliance of these railroads for mutual protecting against the interstate commerce law.

Our Gunboats at Havana.

Havana, March 11.—The United States armored cruiser New York, flagship of Rear Adm. Farquhar, commander-in-chief of the North Atlantic squadron, arrived here; followed shortly by the gunboat Machias. The battle ship Texas and the cruiser Detroit are expected within the next 24 hours.

There Will Be No Compromise.

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 11.—Secretary Morcland, of the Carnegie Steel Co., declared emphatically that no compromise in the pending Frick-Carnegie litigation had ever been dreamed of.

Many Negroes Baptized.

New York, March 12.—Negro men, women and children—some deaf, some mute, others blind, but most of them whole and sound—to the number of 184 were plunged into a tank of water and brought out of it gasping and breathless in the Mt. Olivet Baptist church, Sunday.

"Cannibalism" Charged.

Vancouver, B. C., March 11.—Two Indian chiefs are in jail here, charged with "cannibalism" at Alert bay, B. C. They are charged with eating human flesh at Potlatch.

Democratic Gov. Beckham Now Has a Military Force of His Own.

Secretary of State Powers and Policeman Davis in Jail at Lexington—Whittaker and Culton Removed to Louisville.

Louisville, Ky., March 11.—Judge Fields, in the circuit court Saturday morning, handed down an opinion that he has no jurisdiction in the cases brought to determine the governorship controversy. He holds that the constitution vests in the legislature the power to decide contests for this office.

Frankfort, Ky., March 10.—W. H. Coulton, a clerk in the office of State Auditor Sweeney, was arrested and placed in jail, charged with complicity in the murder of the late William Goebel. The arrest was made by Chief of Police Williams.

Warrants have also been issued for the arrest of Secretary of State Caleb Powers and Capt. John W. Davis, policeman of the state capitol square.

Frankfort, Ky., March 12.—The sheriff who held the warrants for the arrest of Secretary of State Caleb Powers and State House Policeman John Davis, charged with complicity in the assassination of William Goebel, was denied admission to the capitol building, where the men were all day Saturday. In the evening the two men, dressed in the uniforms of soldiers, accompanied by about 20 soldiers, succeeded in getting on board a train, but were arrested upon their arrival at Lexington, where they are now in jail.

The first move on the part of Beckham's followers toward the formation of a state guard under his administration has been made. City Clerk Ben Marshall circulated a paper and enlisted the requisite number of men who are to compose a company, guns for which have been provided by citizens here, most of them being either needle guns or Winchesters.

A report gained currency that Taylor had given his soldiers orders to arrest Beckham and other officers of the democratic state government. On account of this report the men enlisted by Capt. Marshall were assembled at the city hall, armed and sworn in as special police for the purpose of protecting the democratic officers, who are quartered at the Capitol hotel. A large number of citizens also volunteered and were assigned to various posts in the vicinity of the hotel to offer a resistance in case the talked-of arrests were attempted.

Taylor's soldiers, who are on guard at the state house, were reinforced by the arrival of the Barbourville company of 71 men, all of whom are fully armed and equipped.

Beckham appointed Col. David R. Murray, of Hopkinsville, assistant adjutant general, with the rank of colonel, and he was sworn in.

Harland Whittaker and W. H. Culton, who are confined in jail here, charged with complicity in the assassination, were removed from the jail at an early hour Sunday morning and taken in a hack to Shelbyville, where they were placed on a train and sent to Louisville under heavy guard.

Taylor has issued a lengthy statement, addressed to the people of Kentucky, reviewing the conditions leading up to the "serious conditions and dangers" now confronting them, and severely condemning the course taken by the Kentucky courts, which he characterizes as "courts of conviction instead of trial." He also explains why he granted pardons to Secretary of State Powers, W. H. Culton, Chas. Finley and Capt. Davis.

Lexington, Ky., March 12.—The threatened riot over the arrest here of Secretary of State Powers and Policeman Davis did not take place. The time was ripe, under misleading reports that mountain men were preparing to rescue the prisoners from the jail, for desperate resistance on the part of the local officers, who are mostly Goebel men, and had an attempt been made to take the prisoners, the result is unpleasant to contemplate.

The adopting of a disguise by Davis and Powers, in order to get out of Frankfort, puts an ugly phase on the matter for the prisoners, although they explain that they did so merely to get away from Goebel influences, which, they allege, would work to their detriment in securing a fair trial. Both tacitly admit that in this they made a mistake, for both strongly urge their innocence of any connection with the murder of Goebel, and insist that they have no fear whatever as to the outcome. Judge George Denny, a prominent republican attorney, will represent them in whatever legal steps are taken.

Capt. Longmire received orders from Assistant Adjt. Gen. Dixon, under the Taylor administration, to disband the soldiers here. He ignored the orders. Robert Kenny, of this city, is acting as assistant adjutant general under Castleman.

Toronto, Ont., March 12.—Miss Ellen Terry has almost entirely recovered from her illness, and will leave for New York to rejoin Sir Henry Irving at the end of this week.

SMALLPOX DISTRIBUTORS.

How the Germs Are Nurtured and the Disease Is Spread.

It would seem that people will never learn to be careful. The recent alarming spread of that dire epidemic, smallpox, throughout different sections of the country has been traced by physicians and sanitarians in many instances directly to the moldy and rotting layers of paper and paste which cover the walls of many houses. The practice of laying layer after layer of paper on a wall, using common flour paste, is especially calculated to create homes for disease germs. People could not do more to effect such a result if they tried. The rotting vegetable matter affords caves from which are ready to dart forth the infection at every opportunity. There is no excuse for this practice, as walls and ceilings can be coated with a pure, cleanly and sanitary material like Alabastine, for instance, at no greater expense. Alabastine is a rock-base cement, which incorporates itself with the wall or ceiling. It is easily applied, comes ready to mix with cold water, requires no washing or scraping before renewing or retinting, is beautiful, long-lasting and safe.

For walls that have been infected, nothing is equal to Alabastine as a disinfectant to render them pure and clean and the rooms once more habitable.

MANY MINERS KILLED.

A Terrible Gas Explosion in the Red Ash Colliery in West Virginia.

Old Fire Boss Discharged—Scores of Miners Assert That the Fans Were Not Operated for Three Days.

Hinton, W. Va., March 7.—The most terrific and disastrous explosions that has ever occurred in this section occurred Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock at Red Ash Coal & Coke Co.'s mines at Red Ash, opposite Echo, Fayette county, thirty miles west of this place. The loss of life is appalling.

Fire Creek, W. Va., March 8.—The rescuing parties continue working hard at Red Ash mine in removing debris and securing the bodies of the victims of the explosion of Tuesday. It is still impossible to give the exact number of the victims or to identify all of the bodies that have been recovered. The most conservative estimate of some of those connected with the mine places the number of killed at 40, and there are others who insist that the number of victims will be found to reach twice that many.

Fire Creek, W. Va., March 9.—That the explosion at the Red Ash mines Tuesday morning, which cost half a hundred lives, was due to carelessness of some employe there is little doubt.

Suits for heavy damages will be filed against the Red Ash Mining Co. Col. John Sinclair, of Fayette, the attorney of the company, who is one of the best known lawyers in the state, was brought to the scene and made a thorough examination.

The explosion was almost certainly due to the fact that the first shift of 50 or more men entered the mine before the proper precautions had been taken to ascertain whether there was gas in the passageway.

This examination is the duty of the fire boss. It is his duty to cover every part of the mine each morning before the men enter. He carried a Davy safety lamp, which is bound to announce the presence of gas or fire damp.

The fire boss was Block Laing. Laing is among the missing and it is believed the shifts started to work before he had completed his circuit. His safety lamp could not possibly have caused the explosion, while a naked lamp would certainly have done so.

Up to three weeks ago a man named Beard was the fire boss. Miners who have known him for years say that he knew his business thoroughly. Before his discharge he stated that some of the bradishes (wooden partitions used to shut off dangerous or unused chambers) needed repair, and if they were not fixed soon an explosion might result. The superintendent states that bradishes are constantly being repaired.

Scores of miners assert that the fan has not been in constant operation the last three days before the explosion.

Fire Creek, W. Va., March 9.—The progress made at the Red Ash mine has been small, owing to first one cause and then another. The working crews were tired and fresh men were not at hand, the crowd present being very much smaller than on previous days. Then a couple of dead mules were found mixed with other debris in the main entry, and the stench made their removal a task of some time. However, a fresh crew of experienced and willing men from the Laurel mines arrived later to lend a hand. Superintendent Laing expects to get through the entire job within the next 24 hours, when the full extent of the tragedy will be known. Others who are acquainted with the work think it will take a longer time to complete it. Work has progressed 4,000 feet into the mine.

Thurmond, W. Va., March 10.—The total number of those taken from the Red Ash coal mine, where the terrific explosion took place Tuesday morning, is thirty-one. Of these, Wm. Robinson, Elisha Bruce and a boy named Tom, all colored, are living and will probably get well. They were found near the mouth of the drift very soon after the explosion. The dead taken out up to this time are John Day, Wm. Day, Matt Quarles, Jas. Washington, Jas. Hackney, Sam Jackson, Chas. Fouts, Simon Pitts, Nevill Ramsey, Eddie Hendrick, Wolfy Agee, John Stone, Robt. Ball, Smith Franklin, Hollister Noell, Isaac Morris, Novella Dews, Lew Dodson, C. C. Stewart, Chas. Downey, Walter Dennis, Peter Chappell and six others who were found in such a state of decomposition that they have not yet been identified. This makes the total number of dead taken out 28, those who will recover three and the number still thought to be in the mine about 20.

The body taken out supposed to be that of Chas. Dowley was found to be C. C. Stewart, Downey's body being recovered later. Six others were found, but were so badly decomposed that they have not yet been recognized. The bodies now being found are so offensive that it makes work in the mine very disagreeable and renders necessary the use of large quantities of disinfectants.

Killed His Brother and Himself.

Oakland, Cal., March 10.—Alex. Carter, 32 years of age, in a temporary fit of insanity shot and killed his brother Charles, a university student, aged 22, at the home of their parents in North Berkeley. Then, placing the muzzle of the pistol in his mouth, he blew out his brains.

San Diego, Cal., March 10.—The cruiser Marblehead will not go to Corinto, as was reported. Her orders have been changed, and she will proceed to San Francisco.

TICKET NOMINATED.

Eugene V. Debs Nominated for President, and Job Harriman for Vice President by Social Democrats.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 10.—For President, Eugene V. Debs, of Indiana; for Vice-President, Job Harriman, of California.

This is the national ticket of the social democratic party, which will absorb the Holquit-Harriman faction of the socialistic labor party by agreement.

The social democrats were happy Friday. They say the candidacy of Debs will attract hundreds of thousands of voters to their party. They profess to see the beginning of a great national victory.

The convention in agreeing to unite with the socialistic labor faction, retains the party name—social democratic party. The candidates and the amalgamation are to be approved by a majority of each party, according to the referendum.

Mr. Debs had previously refused to accept the nomination, but finally succumbed to persuasion.

It seems from the explanation of friends, that Debs has been applying his earnings to the extinction of a debt against the American Railway Union and that he did not want to cease until the debt was paid.

The debt amounted to several thousand dollars. Debs received assurance that the debt would be taken care of and that he would receive a rest of three months before entering the political canvass.

At Friday morning's session of the convention the nominations of Debs and Harriman were confirmed.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 8.—The social democrats adopted the following platform on motion of Eugene V. Debs:

1. Revision of our antiquated federal constitution, in order to remove the obstacles to full and complete control of government by all the people, irrespective of sex.

2. The public ownership of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts and combines.

3. The public ownership of all railroads, telegraph, telephone, all means of transportation, communication, water works, gas and electric plants and other public utilities.

4. The public ownership of all gold, silver, copper, lead, iron, coal and all other mines; also all oil and gas wells.

5. Reduction of the hours of labor in proportion to the increasing facilities of production.

6. The inauguration of a system of public works and improvements for the employment of a large number of the unemployed; the public credit to be utilized for that purpose.

7. All useful inventions to be free to all, the inventor to be remunerated by the public.

8. Labor legislation to be made national instead of local, and international where possible.

9. National insurance of working people against accidents, lack of employment and want in old age.

10. Equal civil and political rights for men and women, and the abolition of all laws discriminating against women.

11. The adoption of the initiative and referendum and the right to recall representatives by the voters.

12. Abolition of war as far as the United States are concerned, and the introduction of international arbitration instead.

The committee on resolutions reported consideration and approval of a resolution condemning the establishment of militarism in Porto Rico and the combination of capitalists to deprive the inhabitants of Porto Rico of the franchise.

Fighting Rebellious Indians.

Oaxaca, Mexico, March 12.—A force of Mexican troops numbering less than 1,200 men, under command of Col. Francisco Gonzalez, made a steady advance against the Maya Indians in Yucatan during the last several days and has gained several miles of rebel territory. Several attempts were made by the Indians to ambush the government troops, but were unsuccessful. Skirmishes between the troops and Indians are of daily occurrence, but there are few casualties reported on either side.

Another Blow at Trusts.

Jackson, Miss., March 12.—The senate by a vote of 24 to 4 passed the house anti-trust bill. The bill makes all trusts and combines illegal, all contracts with such null and void, and any agent punishable by heavy fine and imprisonment. No corporation is permitted to purchase or control the business of another in the same business. Any person injured by a trust corporation may recover $300.

Refused to Bury the Corpse.

Hernando, Miss., March 11.—Thomas Clayton, a Negro, was shot to death in this county by members of his own race because of criminal assault on a 10-year-old girl. He was called to his cabin door and bullets from a dozen Winchesters were fired into his body. The blacks refuse to bury the corpse. There is no excitement among the plantation hands.

Granted Another Respite.

Nashville, Tenn., March 11.—Gov. McMillin has granted 20 days' respite to C. H. Givens, of Jefferson county, who was to have been executed March 14 for complicity in wife murder. This is the second respite granted Givens on account of illness.

To Klondike By Automobile.

New York, March 12.—The French liner Aquitaine, which came into port from Havre, brought three Frenchmen who say they intend to make the attempt to go to the Klondike by automobile.

COMING HOME.

One Battalion Each of the 14th, 18th and 23d Infantry Now in the Philippines Ordered Home.

Washington, March 9.—By direction of Acting Secretary of War Meiklejohn instructions have been sent to Maj. Gen. Otis to return to the United States some time in May one battalion each of the 14th, 18th and 23d infantry.

The withdrawal of these troops was recommended by Maj. Gen. Miles several months ago. He pointed out to the department that the three regiments designated would have been two years in the Philippines in June next.

There is no doubt that the decision of the department to withdraw three battalions, which number more than one thousand two hundred men, is influenced to some extent by the disorganization of the rebel army and the prospect that the American troops will no longer meet with resistance from an organized force. Notwithstanding the action of the department in ordering home these battalions, officers who have served in the Philippines, and who have just returned, say that this must not be taken to mean that the rebellion has been suppressed. The insurgents are operating in small forces, which scatter at the approach of American troops, but which reassemble and attack whenever a good opportunity presents itself.

A well known officer in Luzon, writing to a friend in this city, gives it as his opinion that the rebellion will not be entirely suppressed in less than ten years.

ARCHBISHOP HENNESSEY.

Funeral Services Over His Remains at Dubuque, Ia.—Cardinal Gibbons Presided.

Dubuque, Ia., March 9.—Funeral services were held Thursday over the remains of John Hennessey, first archbishop of Dubuque. The obsequies occurred at 10 o'clock, and were of the simplest character. There were no flowers and no ornaments whatever, even the high altar being stripped of everything except what was necessary in the celebration of mass. There was also an entire absence of music, only the voices of hundreds of priests being heard in the Gregorian chant. This was in accord with the dead prelate's wishes. The ceremonies began at 7 o'clock, when Cardinal Gibbons and each of the archbishops celebrated requiem mass.

Interment took place immediately after the mass, the casket containing the body being placed in the vault and sealed.

Gen. Wheeler on the Philippines.

San Francisco, March 9.—Gen. Joseph Wheeler favors giving the Philippines a territorial form of government. Said he: "I believe the people are ready for a certain kind of self-government. They could be given the power to make laws under such a system of government as has been adopted by our territories. The municipal governments are all in the hands of the natives, and they get along without trouble or friction. Under a territorial form the islands could be best controlled."

Monument Given Free.

Springfield, Ill., March 9.—Col. J. S. Culver, of this city, who is rebuilding the Lincoln monument here, and who built the Illinois monument on the battle field of Chickamauga, has written the governor of Indiana offering without expense to the state, to erect a substantial monument at the grave of Nancy Hanks Lincoln, near Spencer, Ind. He offers large pieces of granite from the Lincoln monument and a car load of stone from the temporary vault in which Lincoln's remains still rest while his monument is being constructed.

To Open Chinese Trade.

London, March 9.—Answering a question in the house of commons the parliamentary secretary for the foreign office, Mr. Brodrick, promised that papers would shortly be presented to the house dealing with the subject of Great Britain co-operating with the United States in endeavoring to arrive at an agreement with the powers to secure equal opportunities for the trade of all nations throughout the whole of China.

Why He Was Discharged.

Washington, March 9.—David J. Brooks, of Philadelphia, testified before the industrial commission. His evidence was similar to that submitted by other members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. He said he had been discharged by officials of the Philadelphia & Reading Co., who, he stated, intimated that this action was taken because of his connection with the brotherhood.

Department Store Burned.

Natrona, Pa., March 8.—The two-story brick department store of the Pennsylvania Salt Manufacturing Co. was destroyed by fire. Loss on build ing, $40,000; on stock, $13,000. Insurance not known. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

Price of Gen. Lawton's Life.

San Francisco, March 8.—By mail advices a startling story comes from Manila that a Filipino society in the capital of Luzon paid the man who killed Lawton $25,000, and that they raised a large fund for rewards for killing other American officers.

Victoria Will Visit Ireland.

London, March 8.—It has been decided that Queen Victoria will visit Ireland next month, staying at the vice regal lodge in Dublin, which has been placed at her disposal by the viceroy, Earl Cadogan.

FIFTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

Washington, March 5.—Senate—Mr. Carter, of Montana, dealt vigorously with the Quay case in the senate in the course of an explanation as to why he will vote for the former senator from Pennsylvania, notwithstanding he voted against the seating of Mr. Corbett in the last congress. The near approach to the time of voting on the conference report on the financial bill brought out the speeches of that measure, one by Mr. Fairbanks, of Indiana, and the other by Mr. Butler, of North Carolina.

House—The following bills were passed: The state of Wyoming to relinquish to the United States about 5,000 acres of land granted the state at the time of admission for university purposes and select other lands in lieu thereof; to issue a patent to a tract of land at El Reno, Okla., for cemetery purposes; to extend the time for completing the bridges across the East river between Long Island and New York; to provide for the rights of citizen settlers on the Navajo Indian reservation; to authorize white persons who have intermarried with Cherokee Indians to bring suits in the court of claims.

Washington, March 6.—Senate—A resolution was adopted directing the secretary of the interior to place under bond the "Mammoth Tree grove" and the "South Park grove of big trees" in California and Tuolumne counties, California, the idea being that the government acquire the groves. The conference report on the financial bill was agreed to by a vote of 41 to 25, the report thus having a majority of six. Early in the session discussion of the Quay case was resumed. Mr. Simon replying to the speech made by Mr. Carter, of Montana.

House—The entire day was spent in considering the Aldrich-Robbins contested election case from the Fourth Alabama district. Mr. Gibbons, the sitting member, made a speech in support of his own behalf. The other speakers were Mr. Burkett, in behalf of the contest, and Messrs. Glenn and DeArmond for the contestee.

Washington, March 7.—Senate—Mr. Sullivan offered a resolution declaring the Philippine islands are the rightful property, honorably acquired, of the United States, and that "while the misguided Filipinos continue the present war, brought on by them against the rightful authority of the United States, so long as a single gun in their hands is trained upon our flag, no expression of intention as to the future course of the United States with respect to them, should be made by the senate." Mr. Sullivan asked that the resolution lie on the table until he should call it up. Mr. Lodge then addressed the senate on the Philippine question in which he wanted the president invested with full power to govern the islands until congress takes action.

House—The house was in session but 25 minutes, adjourning out of respect to the memory of the late Representative Harmer, of Pennsylvania, "the father of the house." The usual committee was appointed to attend the funeral. The vote on the Aldrich-Robbins contested election case, which was to have been taken was postponed.

Washington, March 8.—Senate—The chair announced the appointment of Senator Hanna of Ohio and Tillman of South Carolina as members of the board of visitors to the naval academy. A bill giving American register to the steamer Windward, presented by a British citizen, to Robert E. Peary, U. S. N., the Arctic explorer was passed. Formal discussion of the Porto Rican tariff and civil government bill then began and continued uninterruptedly for four hours and a half. At the night session the bill for the Alaskan Code Bill were read, and without concluding this formal but necessary work the senate at 5:15 adjourned.

House.—The house unseated Gaston A. Robbins, a democrat from the Fourth Alabama district, and seated in his stead Wm. F. Aldrich, a republican, who has been three times a contestant from the same district on the ground of fraud, and who is now given his seat for the third time by a republican majority. The vote was a strict party one. The contested election case of Wise vs. Young from the Second Virginia district was then taken up. Mr. Wicks giving notice that he would ask a vote on it at two o'clock on Monday.

Washington, March 9.—Senate—Discussion of Mr. Mason's resolution expressing sympathy for the Boers was conducted in the senate behind closed doors, Mr. Davis, chairman of the foreign relations committee, demanding that the doors be closed. The feature of the open session was a speech by Mr. Lindsay (Ky.) on the Porto Rican tariff and government measure. He opposed the tariff provision of the bill and some parts of the proposition for the Porto Rican civil government.

House—The first day pension session of the house provided for under the new law proved a great success. There was comparatively little friction, and 92 bills were favorably acted upon in committees of the whole and subsequently passed by the house.

Washington, March 10.—Senate—The diplomatic appropriation bill was passed with a few minor amendments. One of these was the striking out of provisions for pensioning ex-Queen Lilliokalani, of Hawaii, $5,000 a year. It was maintained that it would establish a dangerous precedent.

House—The house agreed to take up the bill providing a government for Hawaii on April 3, the final vote to be taken April 5 at 4 p. m. Tuesday. The Wise-Young election contest was resumed and occupied the remainder of the session.

It Was Not the Plague.

San Francisco, March 10.—Federal Quarantine Officer Kinyoun reported to the board of health that the pigs, rats and other animals inoculated with germs taken from the glands of the Chinaman who died the other day of what was at first supposed to be bubonic plague, showed no signs of having the black fever, and therefore the board recommends that the quarantine placed on Chinatown as a precautionary measure against the spread of the disease be removed.

Charged With Theft.

Washington, March 10.—Chief Wilkie, of the treasury secret service, was notified of the arrest in Philadelphia of Edward E. Grimmell, formerly a civilian clerk in the office of the disbursing officer for the medical department under Maj. D. H. Hall in San Francisco. The charge against him is that of theft of United States property, and he was held by a United States commissioner for a further hearing on March 16.

Archbishop Hennessy's Successor.

Sioux City, Ia., March 12.—News from what is considered a reliable source reached Sioux City that Archbishop John Keane is to be made Archbishop Hennessy's successor. It is said the archbishops of the country and archdiocese have unanimously agreed to send his name to Rome. It is further stated that there are to be two new Catholic sees in Iowa, with Sioux City and Des Moines as see cities.

Joseph P. Ryan Dead.

New York, March 10.—Joseph P. Ryan, secretary of the Irish National Federation of America, died at his home in this city. He was the originator of the famous Hoffman house Irish parliamentary fund, which was the means of raising thousands of dollars for the Irish cause.

Sixteen Miners Killed.

Nantes, France, March 10.—Sixteen miners have been killed by an explosion in a coal pit at Besseges. The galleries of the mine collapsed, burying the bodies of the victims.

FROM ALL OVER THE STATE.

PLAN OF PROCEDURE.

The Goebel Reward Committee Discuss the Situation—The Chances of the McChord Bill.

Frankfort, Ky., March 8.—The Goebel reward commission met here Wednesday afternoon to organize and map out a plan of operation. Col. T. C. Campbell and Justus Goebel conferred with the commission. The $100,000 reward appropriation bill reached Democratic Gov. Beckham late Tuesday.

The leaders of both sides were active till late Tuesday night. The McChord bill, which was down for final passage, and three contested election cases, gave the lobby a lively appearance. It is said Democratic Gov. Beckham has taken up the fight for the McChord bill, and opponents of the bill charge that the prospective patronage of the administration is being traded off for votes. Advocates of the measure were more confident Wednesday morning than usual, but opponents think they can beat it.

Contested election cases on calendar Wednesday were: Gill vs. Brister, from Logan; Roberts vs. Aiken and Ragland vs. Strong, both from Louisville.

ANTI-EXTORTION BILL.

It Fixes the Maximum of Freight Rates and Punishes Discrimination and Extortion.

Frankfort, Ky., March 9.—The house passed the McChord railroad anti-extortion bill by a vote of 56 to 42. The bill authorizes the state railroad commission to fix the maximum of freight rates and to punish discrimination and extortion. From a party standpoint its passage was the carrying out of the principal plank in the platform on which the late William Goebel was nominated. The republicans in a body opposed the bill, and up to the last it looked as if enough democrats would bolt party lines to defeat the bill, but on the final vote only two—Representatives Blair and Armstrong—voted with the republicans against it, and Henry and Orr, democrats, did not vote. That the bill will be approved by the democratic governor is conceded.

AN EXTRA SESSION.

If the Courts Decide in Favor of Beckham, One Will Be Held Early in May.

Frankfort, Ky., March 9.—The democratic leaders in the legislature, going on the assumption that the courts will decide in favor of Beckham, are preparing for an extra session of the legislature early in May. Beckham it is said, determined that the fate of the McChord bill, which has just been passed in the house, should decide whether or not an extra session should be called. The passage of the Crenshaw school book bill, which passed the senate, is expected to go over to the extra session, the time being too short for it to pass the house at the present session.

Knew Nothing of the Murder.

Frankfort, Ky., March 9.—Mrs. Amelia Saffel, whose name has been widely published as an eye-witness to the Goebel assassination, and who, it was said, had made sensational statements in regard to the assassination which would be brought out by the anti-Goebel side, gave out a statement saying that she knew nothing of the murder and had never said that she did.

Railroads Will Fight.

Frankfort, Ky., March 10.—It is understood that the railroads will fight the McChord bill on the ground that it did not pass the senate according to the constitutional requirement, because only 19 senators voted. The case will likely be taken through all the courts, and the enforcement of the law may thus be postponed for several years.

His Name is Rollins.

Louisville, Ky., March 10.—The first name of Whittaker, held without bond on the charge of killing William Goebel, has been determined. It is not Harlan, Harland or Holland, as has been published, but it is Hollins. He was named after Martin Hollins, a miller, who died several years ago. Whittaker's friends say he is an expert shot.

Accused of Vandalism.

Frankfort, Ky., March 10.—The local officers have determined to prosecute Lieut. Pierce, of Lexington, who is charged with desecrating the state house by stripping the crape placed there in memory of Senator Goebel. A full list of witnesse has been obtained and a warrant is to be issued, charging Pierce with a high misdemeanor.

Goebel's Undertaker Dead.

Frankfort, Ky., March 7.—Jud Graham, the veteran undertaker of this city, died, aged 61. He had a carbuncle on his neck which developed into erysipelas. He had charge of the funeral of the late Senator Goebel, and took cold that day, which is thought to have contributed to his death.

Another Election Echo.

Louisville, March 10.—The grand jury returned an indictment against Thomas McCue, charged with impersonating a registered voter named Allen at the last election.

JACK CHINN BRINGS SUIT.

He Asks Damages From a Frankfort Woman Who Said That He Had Shot William Goebel.

Frankfort, Ky., March 8.—Col. Jack Chinn, the turfman and politician, and who was with Wm. Goebel when the latter was assassinated, filed suit for libel against Mrs. Kate M. Banta, wife of a merchant of this city.

The first paragraph charges that defendant, in the presence of various people, declared that she saw Chinn "shoot Goebel from behind," and that by this libelous declaration he has been damaged in the sum of $25,000.

The second count says and the plaintiff further states that the defendant, Kate M. Banta, at numerous other times and places in the city of Frankfort, spoke and published these following false, slanderous and malicious words of and concerning the plaintiff: "He, Jack Chinn, shot and killed William Goebel;" that said words were spoken falsely and maliciously and for the avowed purpose of charging the plaintiff with having fired the shot that caused William Goebel's death.

Wherefore plaintiff says he is damaged in the sum of $10,000, for which he asks a judgment and for all proper relief.

The petition is signed by ex-Chief Justice W. S. Pryor and James Andrew Scott as attorneys.

Frankfort, Ky., March 9.—Col. T. C. Campbell left for New York, where he goes to file a $100,000 libel suit for Col. Jack Chinn against the New York World. The World printed alleged statements from Mrs. Amelia Saffell and Mrs. Kate M. Banta, of this city, charging that Chinn killed Goebel. Chinn has sued Mrs. Banta for $25,000 libel.

Welsh, Robert Hunter and Hugh Scott, were arrested and taken before United States Commissioner Hill, and gave bond in the sum of $1,500 each for appearance in the United States court at Louisville in October.

The first four were arrested on indictments returned in the United States court at Louisville, charging felonies, intimidating or interfering with voters in the November election. The last three are charged with conspiring to defraud voters at the same election. It has created a sensation here.

If we expect a healthy, profitable flock of hens, we must not overlook the fact that the care given the chicks during the first few days of life determines to a great extent just what they will be in mature life. Chicks must be kept healthy and in order to do this a system must be adopted and strictly adhered to. They must come from the nest free from vermin and must not be allowed to become chilled. They must be given the best and most wholesome food, just what is best suited for the forming of flesh and bone. Those that are intended for market require different treatment from the pullets that we intend for next winter's layers. It takes time and patience, coupled with hard work, to make poultry raising a success, but it can be done.

By a careful diagnosis of the Gasburg correspondent's case, it is found that he is suffering from a political parasite, and if the moustrosity is not immediately removed, while in the delirums which naturally follow the disease, he will bite himself, in which event death is almost certain; but the friends hope that the use of McKinley tea which he is administering internally, will be bracing to him until along about when the leaves begin to fall, the first of next November, when he will succumb from exhaustion. But the fact in the case is he has soured on the Democratic party because it failed to elect or appoint him to office, and it is to be hoped that the party to which he has lately swore allegiance will be more generous with him and appoint him to the same place which he filled in this precinct on last election day, with credit to himself and satisfaction to his friends

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 21, 1900. NO. 22

THE author of "Annie Laurie," died a few days ago at the ripe old age of 91 years.

THE time for which the ground hog contracted to furnish winter weather is up, and it is hoped he will let up.

PERMANENT spring weather will soon be here—bicycle advertisements are inundating country publishers.

IT is said that less than one-tenth of Chicago's 4,000 registered lawyers are making a living since the bankrupt law went into effect. The lawyers will have to avail themselves of the law in self-defense.

INSTEAD of tendering his friendly offices to end the war in South Africa, President McKinley only proposed himself as a medium for conveying from the Boers to the British such propositions for peace as the dutchmen should see proper to suggest.

IT is evident that Sargeant Golden, who was on duty with the militia at Frankfort, when Goebel was assassinated, has been telling some things that are causing much uneasiness among those who desire to see the assassin and the accessories go unpunished.

IT has been suggested that the Democrats appropriate the flag and the constitution as an emblem for the campaign this fall, as one of their contentions will be that "where the flag goes, there also must the constitution go," while the Republicans will deny this proposition, unless they make another change of front.

"IT is a serious departure from plain principles," says ex-President Harrison of President McKinley's Porto Rican policy. There was no difference of opinion between Mr. Harrison and the President on this subject no longer than last December, if the President's message at that time reflected his opinion on that subject.

KENTUCKY'S candidate for the Democratic nomination for the Vice-Presidency has given his supposed boom another puncture, and it is now totally collapsed, and it is hoped it will never again be resurrected. His action in the recent Senatorial race in Kenton county should eliminate him as a political factor in Democratic councils in the future.

HARBESON, the Democratic nominee for State Senator in Kenton county, won out with ease at the special election held on the 14th inst., his majority over L. L. Creasy, the Republican nominee, being 539 in about half a vote cast in the district composed of Covington and Kenton county. Harbeson was the law partner of William Goebel, and has never taken an active part in politics.

THERE seems to be a difference of opinion as the whether it would be proper to hold a Democratic primary election this fall to nominate candidates to be voted for for county offices in November, 1901. This is a question upon which the county committee will be called to pass, and its action will be in accord with what it conceives to be best for the party, and not to advance the interest of any particular candidate or candidates.

THE special election held for State Senator in Kenton county on the 14th inst., was held under the Goebel election law, and passed off quietly, there being no complaint of fraud, &c. This demonstrates that it was not the Goebel law that produced the trouble complained of at the last November election, but that the trouble was the result of the deliberate efforts of those who were conspiring to make the law odious for political purposes.

FROM Washington the report reaches Chicago that ex-President Cleveland, who, heretofore, has not lent his aid to the candidacy of W. J. Bryan, will probably come out in support of the Nebraskan. If this report proves true, the National Committee may expect a long letter from a would-be leader in Kentucky, protesting against Mr. Cleveland being allowed the privilege of returning to the Democratic fold. Get your pen, Jimmie.

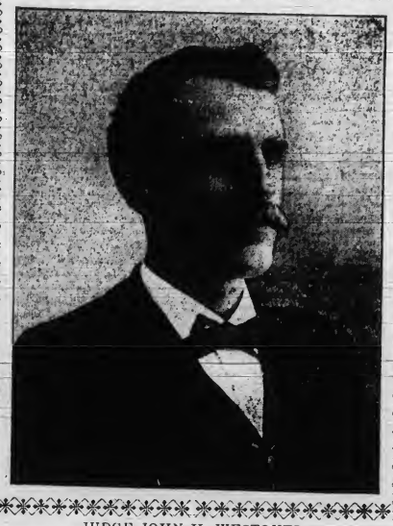
THE discussion of the proposed Porto Rican tariff in the U. S. Senate, brought to the surface some bad blood among the Republican members, last week, and one of the Senators accused another of telling an untruth, which was a shocking display of bad taste in the most dignified assembly of law makers in the world. It seems that U. S. Senators are constituted pretty much the same as are the common people.

ABOUT two hundred gold Democrats met in Indianapolis, one day last week, and adopted resolutions reaffirming their opposition to the free and unlimited coinage of silver, but several of the leaders signified great dissatisfaction with the present administration, saying it is worse than Bryanism. The meeting did not pledge its support to either of the old parties this fall, but it was decidedly more favorable to the Democrats than to the Republicans.

IF the trust prices keep on inflating, the farmers—at least those in the hearing of the Huntsville (Mo.) Herald, will soon be reduced to the condition of "the man with the hoe." Says the Herald: "Hardware men say that farmers who come to buy implements and find the price several dollars higher on every implement simply decline to buy, saying that they will mend up their old plow, or other implement needed this year and try to get along. It is the same in every kind of business. Everybody will scrimp and save with the hope that something will be done to take the arbitrary control of prices out of the hands of the few and let the demand be supplied without let or hindrance."

THE day after the Senatorial election in Kenton county, last week, the following appeared in public print:

"Former Mayor Joseph L. Rhinock, who wanted the nomination which went to Harbeson, exerted his influence to elect Creasey. He was assisted by Judge James P. Tarvin, who aspires to leadership, but their efforts were in vain."



Harbeson being the Democratic candidate and Creasey the Republican candidate for State Senator, what do you suppose Mr. Bryan will think of Tarvin, the would-be tail of his Presidential kite, when he reads the above account of his action in trying to defeat a Democratic nominee with a Republican? Poor Jimmie! he has committed political suicide.

IN this issue the RECORDER presents its readers with a good picture of Judge John H. Westover, of Williamstown, Grant county. Mr. Westover is being solicited by friends in every county in this Congressional district, to become a candidate for the Democratic nomination this fall. Mr. Westover is a Democrat without a flaw in his record, and he has been in the party harness in every campaign, State or National, for several years, and the Democrats of his county, recognizing his ability and party fidelity, elected him as county attorney and afterwards placed him at the head of the county's affairs by making him county Judge, which office he is now holding and conducting to the entire satisfaction of his people.

There are many reasons for believing that Mr. Westover would be a strong factor in the race for the nomination this fall, his acknowledged ability and geographical location being the most weighty. With a record that cannot be assailed from any standpoint, Westover will make the man who defeats him, should he enter the race, realize that he has been in a redhot political campaign. At this early date it can not be said certainly what Boone will do, if she has no candidate of her own, but there is no good reason apparent why she will not stand by her neighbor's favorite son. Mr. Westover is said to be a pleasing speaker, and when the canvass is under way the people of Boone will have a chance, no doubt, to hear him and to form the acquaintance of this most agreeable gentleman for whom party loyalty has been the guiding star through his entire political career.

HERE'S CONGRESSIONAL TIMBER.

Hon. John H. Westover, of Grant County, Likely to Succeed Al Berry in the Sixth District.

JUDGE JOHN H WESTOVER.

Judge John H. Westover, of Grant county, is being urged to make the race to succeed Col. A. S. Berry in Congress. It is understood that Judge Westover will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination, and there are few if any men in the Sixth District who are better qualified for the honor or in better position to secure the nomination. He is well known and popular all over the district with politicians and people. He organized the Sixth District and carried it over all opposition for Bryan and free silver in 1896, and was one of the Goebel leaders in the late State campaign, both before and after the nomination. He made twenty-five speeches for the lamented Democratic leader, and was frequently called to headquarters for consultation.

The Kentucky press gang to a man will pull for Judge Westover in Congress. For ten years he has been connected with journalism, and has figured prominently in the affairs of the Kentucky Press Association, of which he is now President, and probably the most widely popular member. He has been an ornament to the newspaper profession, but has had time to build up a thriving law practice. He is thirty-five years old, was born in the county where he still resides, is happily married, the father of twins, and, it goes without saying, has always been a Democrat. In public capacity he has served one term as Police Judge of Williams town, one term as County Attorney and is now County Judge. As a further illustration of his industry and capacity it may be stated that he has been an active member of the Kentucky League of Local Building Associations, and has contributed much by legislation and other means to putting the associations on a safe and permanent basis.

Personally Judge Westover is a most genial and attractive character, and is famous for his rugged and uncompromising integrity. His word is as good as his bond. He has an absolutely stainless and personal political record.

Are the majority of the Senate afraid of England? Their action when Senator Mason compelled the Senate to take up his resolution, expressing sympathy for the Boers, certainly looked that way. The majority refused to allow the resolution to be discussed in open session, because things would be said that might offend England. This sort of talk in the American Senate, where men who cringed to no foreign friend or for, once upon a time fearlessly expressed their opinion and time after time have spoken in favor of downtrodden people, without stopping to think whether their oppressors would like it or not. Now, as soon as anything affecting England is even mentioned, the majority orders the doors closed. What a picture for the American people to contemplate. Even in secret session, the administration Senators are afraid to allow Senator Mason's resolution to be squarely voted upon. Their programme is to throttle it by having a majority vote to lay it on the table. If the so-called era of friendship with England is to result in squelching our Americanism and our love for liberty, the sooner it comes to an end the better for us as a people.—Kentucky Journal.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier, of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble, purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c at W. F. McKim's, Burlington; J. G. Oelsner's, Florence; M. J. Crouch's, Union.

When the junior members of a well-known law firm got married, about two months ago, he entered into a compact with his bride which was designed as a preventative against conviviality, says the Philadelphia Record. In his bachelor days he was known as a jolly good fellow, which is the same thing as saying that sometimes he was a jolly bad fellow; so when he got married, as a safeguard against the allurements of old comrades, he said to his wife: "Now, my dear, I shall only drink when you do. We shall have liquor refreshments in the house, and as you have no conscientious scruples against moderate drinking, all temptation to drink outside will be removed." So the compact was made and religiously kept until last Tuesday, when some old college friends from New York drifted into the young lawyer's office. Nothing would do but they must go over to the Bellevue and have something. In vain the Benedict protested. His protests grew feebler and feebler, and finally he fell. But he did it in this way: Stepping into the telegraph office he sent this dispatch to his wife: "Have a drink with me." When this reached her she was considerably mystified, but, like a dutiful wife, she did as she was bade. Ten minutes later came another telegram which read: "Let's have another." She took another, wonderingly, a tiny sip of claret. Shortly afterward came another message reading: "One more, and this is the last." But it wasn't. This was followed by still another. "Whoop! Take this with me." By this time the young wife was in tears, which only flowed faster as other telegrams poured in upon her. When her husband came home to dinner in a cab at 6 o'clock she had flown to the sheltering arms of her mother.

Republican Comment On The Kentucky Situation.

[Chicago Post, Rep.]

However strong Gov. Taylor's case may have been originally, he has weakened it materially since he has been in office.

o o o

[Pittsburg Commercial Gazette, Rep.]

What good reason Gov. Taylor can find for calling out the troops can be conjectured. Even if they would obey him, nothing is to be gained by resistance.

o o o

[Des Moines Leader, Rep.]

The crack of the rifle that sent Goebel to his end began the unification of the Democrats and the division of the Republicans, and since, by every act of omission and commission, Taylor has pushed the work along. Kentucky's mountaineer Governor has practically killed his party in his State.

o o o

[Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.]

It is inconceivable that Gov. Taylor and the Republican leaders should waste time in the fruitless endeavor to induce Federal interference in the Kentucky muddle. There is nothing for the National Administration to do in Kentucky save to preserve order in case of riot beyond State control.

o o o

Boston Advertiser, Rep.]

When Taylor says, as he does in his puplic statement of Sunday night, in effect, that he will not submit to the Constitution of Kentucky because the Legislature has wrongly acted under its provisions, and that he will not submit to the decision of the Kentucky courts because the Judges are politically opposed to him, he takes a course which means anarchy.

[Chicago Record, Ind. Rep.]

There would have been time enough for Taylor to issue pardons for the accused after they should have been unfairly convicted. His attack upon the judiciary of his State, in advance of any decisive action on the cases in question, was extraordinary, to say the least. Mr. Taylor seems determined to seat himself in opposition to all lawful authority in a way that is subversive of social order.

[Hartford Courant, Rep.]

The authorities at Washington should lose no time in making it perfectly clear to Mr. Taylor—if, indeed, they have not attended to that duty already—that he is not to plunge Kentucky into civil war, and that there would be neither approval nor help coming to him from the General Government in any such mad enterprise if he should be ill-advised enough and reckless enough to attempt it.

[Providence Journal, Rep.]

Why he should pardon innocent men may seem strange at first thought, but his idea, of course, is to release them, at all events, from the hands of their captors. He does not imply that they are guilty, but seeks merely to leave the Democrats who hold them in their power without the legal right to do so. Thus we have the remarkable spectacle of a partisan official, moved by similar partisanship on the other side, granting official forgiveness to men who have not yet been put on trial.

[Pittsburg Dispatch, Rep.]

In other words, no matter what the proof may be at the trial, Gov. Taylor declares the right to say that the accused shall go unpunished. The crime for which they shall be given immunity irrespective of the evidence is that of political assassination. And the astounding reason for this astounding act is the assertion that the courts of Kentucky, on account of partisanship and the reward of $100,000, are sure to hang innocent men with as little regard to the evidence as Gov. Taylor shows in issuing his pardons.

[New York Press, Ind.]

Gov. Taylor, we must say, does almost everything that he can to alienate conservative supporters outside the State. * * * * After these statements, he submits his course to the judgment of fair-minded people. If he desired a favorable judgment from that quarter, he should have waited until the courts had so acted as to make their iniquity evident. By an appeal which is, to say the least, premature, Gov. Taylor has prejudiced his cause. His future complaints will require corroboration before they can be regarded.

HANDLING MANURE

[Home and Farm]

After all that has been, or can be said, pro or con, in regard to banking, pitting or composing stable and other farm pen manures, the most economical, the easiest and by far the most satisfactory method of handling them, is to carry them direct to the field, in summer or winter, load by load, as they accumulate and need removing. Practice has demonstrated the good effects to soil, of manure spread over the surface, though left for weeks and months, it may be, uncovered by the soil; and it has been further shown that no appreciable part of any of the essential elements of the manure are lost by evaporation, or dissipation through the air. This, no doubt, will seem a strange and questionable assertion to many, but it is true, as everyone may demonstrate for himself.

Take a load of stable manure to any untilled level field, at any period of the year, spread it over a given space and leave it, and watch the result. Though the storms of winter beat upon it, and wash its soluble contents into the earth—or though the fervid suns of July dry, scorch and crisp it—yet the mellowed soil beneath it, and the greener colored and larger weeds in contact with it, will soon show that the manure is having its wonted and desired effect upon the soil.

But, of course, there is no necessity that manure should be thus applied to fallow land. On the contrary, let it be spread direct from the stable upon any growing crop, as winter grain, summer grasses, cotton, tobacco or corn. A very thin application, under such circumstances, will do great good, and prove that the proper method of managing manures is to dispose of them in this way.

This is what we contend for, that farm-pen manures ought to be applied at once to some cultivable level land; and if upon or among a growing crop, all the better; that the manure will suffer no material loss, even though it remains uncovered for many weeks; and that this is the cheapest and most satisfactory way to handle it. It is cheapest because then once handling disposes of the manure once for all, and places it direct where it must go, at least to be of any service; and by this plan all the expense of sheltering it from rain while in bulk is obviated, and all the cost of extra and repeated handling and hauling is saved, and all the incidental losses by combustion, leaching and removing are prevented. Every particle of the first bulk of the manure goes where it will begin at once to do good Here, then, we claim is a way to make a big saving in the routine of the farm management.

Monday was another red-letter day in the criminal history of our county. Forest Hill school house, near Berlin, was the scene of a bloody battle between neighbors and as a result one young man was killed, another mortally wounded, while others engaged in the fight were seriously cut or beaten with clubs. Monday afternoon marked the close of the school at the above named place, and as is customary the term was closed with an entertainment by the pupils, which was attended by a large number of the patrons of the district. Among those present were Harve Moran and two sons, Arthur and Harlan, and the three Hamilton brothers—Strawder, Corlis and Morgan. Between the Morans and Hamiltons there was existing a bad feeling owing to an attack on Harlan Moran by one of the Hamilton boys some time ago. When the two factions met at the school house the trouble was renewed and a fierce and bloody fight took place. Pistols, clubs and knives were the weapons used and the telling effect of their use was evident at the cessation of hostilities. The crack of the pistol, the gleam of the knife, mingled with the curses of the enraged men and the groans of the wounded made a scene never to be forgotten by those present. When the fight was over it was found that young Harlan Moran had been shot twice and killed, Corlis Hamilton was mortally wounded while the other Morans and Hamiltons were more or less cut and bruised. Harlan Moran was buried Tuesday. Strawder and Morgan Hamilton were arrested Tuesday at their home by Deputy Sheriffs Breeze and McAtee, and were placed in the Brookville jail.—Bracken Chronicle.

Three years ago William Mannind, of Sergeant, predicted that he would die on a certain day in 1900. On the day he predicted the grim messenger escorted him across the river.

THE RECORDER.

W. L. RIDDELL, Publisher.

BURLINGTON. : : KENTUCKY.

The post office building in Virginia, San Diego county, Cal., is made of an old piano box.

It has been decided that some change must be made by our army in its smokeless powder. Numerous tests have well illustrated the fact that the powder now used is extremely dangerous, being made nearly entirely of nitroglycerin.

A new instance of electric street railways being used for freight purposes is found in Cleveland, O., where stone is being hauled from a quarry eight miles distant. Fifteen thousand pounds capacity freight cars are used and the work is done after the close of the passenger traffic.

Philadelphia's Baptist temple has been placed on the tax list, despite the exemption of church property, because it was giving promiscuous entertainments in the church building, to which admission was had by the purchase of tickets, which were on sale to the public, just as tickets to any other secular entertainment are offered.

There is hardly a ranch in the Panhandle of the western part of Texas that does not have its own private telephone system, and the barbed wires of the pasture fences are used exclusively for the purpose. A number of these private lines are fifty miles long, and messages are sent and received daily that distance without a break.

The loudest speakers in congress are Senator Tillman and Representative Brosius. Mr. Brosius speaks with a long, deep roar, while Senator Tillman, when thoroughly wrought up to his subject, speaks in spasmodic shrieks. Senators Lindsay and Wolcott have powerful voices, but they are more careful of them than the gentlemen named.

Authorities differ as to the rate of growth of the human hair, and it is said to be very dissimilar in different individuals. The most usually accepted calculation gives 6½ inches per annum. A man's hair, allowed to grow to its extreme length, rarely exceeds 12 inches or 14 inches, while that of a woman will grow in rare instances to 70 inches or 75 inches, though the average does not exceed 25 inches to 30 inches.

A Maj. Hook, of the East India Co. service, in London, was entitled by the will of a relative to an annuity of 400 pounds a year until his wife was buried. To fulfill the terms of this important document, after death he caused her body to be embalmed, sealed up in a glass case and placed in the upper chamber of his house, where it remained for thirty years, but no person was ever permitted to enter the room where it lay.

The states of North and South Carolina are having a race in the building of new cotton mills. During the first fifty-seven days of this year 17 new cotton mills were commissioned in South Carolina and two old ones increased their stock. In two months and one day in North Carolina 15 cotton mills were projected. The total capitalization of the 19 South Carolina mills amount to $2,835,000; that of the 15 North Carolina mills reaches $2,070,000.

A girl in Germantown, Pa., had an "unlucky room." No one can enter it without walking under a small ladder. The mirror is cracked and peacock feathers are strewn about in profusion. Directly over the girl's bed is suspended an umbrella, which is never closed. There are thirteen articles of furniture in the room and on the walls are hung thirteen pictures. The girl wears no jewelry except opals, and will only have her room cleaned on Fridays.

Payment of the bicyle tax in France is proved by a small plate affixed to the machine every year, but the government now proposes to issue plates good for four years. The holder must have his name and address engraved at his own expense, but he is supplied with new plates when necessary, on producing the fragments of the old. Should he cease to own a bicycle he must at once deposit his plate, to have his name stricken off the list of persons liable to the tax.

The story that Gen. "Joe" Wheeler is returning from the Philippines to claim as his bride Mrs. George W. Childs, who now resides in Washington, has been revived. It is asserted upon what seems to be excellent authority that the veteran soldier and the widow of the famous Philadelphia editor will wed. It is further asserted that the trousseau of the bride prospective is being completed in anticipation of the happy event, and that the details have been arranged.

One of the good effects of war is that it cures the worst forms of dyspepsia. Many officers, who are the the despair of their medical attendants while spending their days between the club and the barracks, come home from a campaign with a stomach like the ostrich's. This, of course, arises from the exercise, the open-air life, the constant mental employment, and very often the short commons. Another good effect is the rather strange one that war cures nervousness of the ordinary kind, as well as headaches and neuralgia.

ROOT'S TRIP TO CUBA.

The Object of the Secretary of War's Visit Made Known.

Confident That the United States Will Keep Faith With the Cuban People—No Fears of an Uprising Are Felt.

Havana, March 16.—Secretary Root said, when interviewed, that he had come to Cuba for two reasons. In the first place he desired to see for himself the working of the various departments, civil and military, and to investigate, so far as possible, the character of the work accomplished. In the second place, he desired to see as many representative men as possible, including all the business interests, in order to feel that he was in personal touch with the requirements of the island.

He went on to say that he had at all times closely followed all the reports regarding Cuba, but he had always felt assured that, in respect to many matters, definite knowledge called for personal contact. He now felt that the Cubans had done wonders, considering the nature of the strife that had devastated the country for so long a time. Their conduct and amiability had greatly impressed him, and he was satisfied from all that he had seen that they were capable of self-government.

"It is necessary, of course, to prepare for this," said Mr. Root, "by practical experience. Nor should it be a cause for surprise if the first municipal elections should not bring to the surface the best elements of the country. Even in the United States those who would naturally be supposed to take an active interest in politics are found attending to other matters on election day. This work of preparation is deemed necessary even by the most radical Cubans. As soon as the proper explanations are made to them they recognize that time must elapse before a race unacquainted with the simplest forms of government will become able to manage public affairs absolutely without assistance.

"There is no doubt that the United States will keep faith with the Cuban people and the joint resolution of congress will be carried out. But just exactly when it is impossible to say. The municipal elections which will take place on May 1 will prove the first lesson. The object is to give municipalities home rule in the very broadest sense, making each self-supporting and making the elected officers answerable to their own people only for the proper expenditure of funds. It is desirable as far as possible to decentralize all municipalities from Havana control. The American officials would then only have advisory and supervisory duties.

"The city of Havana would then come into the same category with other cities. The military department of the city would be abolished, and this would enable the elected municipal government of Havana to take the necessary steps to refund the debt, to obtain a new loan and to carry out the works of sewerage and paving which are necessary and which should be commenced as soon as possible. Probably this work will commence in the early autumn."

Referring to the reports of possible trouble in the island, Mr. Root said: "These reports are the result of hysteria or are circulated by those who, for personal ends, wish to see turmoil. There is a close analogy between these Cuban agitators who talk about 'taking to the woods' and the American braggarts who insist that the United States will not give up Cuba. Both classes are equally unrepresentative of their countries."

Alluding to conversations he had with many Cubans representing the various industries, he said he thought he had seldom met with people more desirous of learning the methods of government, and that he could see they recognized the difficulty of the task, slace government, like painting, was an art.

Persian Minister Coming.

Washington, March 17.—The state department has been notified that the Persian government is about to send a minister to Washington. For ten years this post has been vacant, the incumbent leaving in dudgeon owing to the merciless ridicule heaped upon him by the American paragrapher on account of his queer name—Hadji Hassan Gooli Khan, with a half dozen additional syllables. The department has not been notified in advance of the name of the new minister.

Will Advance Wages.

Atlanta, Ga., March 17.—The Stove Founders National Defense association, whose representatives have been in session here for two days, with delegates from the Iron Molders' union of North America, agreed to advance the prices paid molders 15 per cent. over the figures in effect in 1898. The result means increased wages to about 40,000 iron molders in all parts of the United States.

Guilty of Manslaughter.

St. Louis, March 17.—The jury in the case of Henrietta Bamberger, the midwife, Friday, returned a verdict of guilty of the charge of manslaughter and fixed her punishment at five years in the penitentiary. It was charged that she caused the death of Wilhelmina Spoeri.

Overdue Vessel Insurance.

San Francisco, March 17.—The reinsurance of the British ship Annie Blooms, 230 days from Carlliff to Iquiqua was advanced in England from 75 per cent. to 80 per cent.

STANDARD OIL CO.

Resolution Introduced in the House Charging a Violation of the Anti-Trust Law.

Washington, March 17.—Representative Fitzgerald, of Massachusetts, has introduced the following resolution:

"Whereas, It appears as a matter of public record that the Standard Oil Co. paid in the city of New York on March 15, 1900, the sum of $17,000,000, this amount being an extra dividend in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of $3,000,000 and,

"Whereas, It is a matter of record that this last dividend is $5,000,000 in excess of the last quarterly dividend paid by this corporation, and

"Whereas, It is also a matter of public record that the price of kerosene oil, the sole means of lighting used by the middle and poorer classes of people, during the period of time between the declaration of these dividends was increased three cents per gallon, constituting a tax on every home in the land, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That in the opinion of congress this action of the Standard Oil Co. is in direct violation of the provisions of the Sherman anti-trust law and therefore punishable by fine and imprisonment and the attorney general is hereby directed in accordance with the provisions of that act to direct the several district attorneys of the United States in their respective district to institute proper proceedings to bring the above named violator of the law to justice."

MONEY BY MAIL.

An Easy and Inexpensive Way May Soon Be Provided By an Act of Congress.

Washington, March 17.—Senator McMillan in the senate and Representative Lentz in the house introduced bills designed to afford an easy and inexpensive means of transmitting money by mail. They provide that all United States and national bank notes, silver certificates and treasury notes of $1, $2 and $5 denominations shall be replaced by new notes to be known as "United States post check notes." Fifty million of United States notes of denominations above $10 shall be replaced with a like amount of fractional post check notes from 5 to 50 cents. The face and back of the notes are to make them "payable to payee named hereon," in place of the present inscription, "payable to bearer on demand," and the face of the notes shall have a blank space to insert the name of payee, with space for receipt and stamp. The holder of any such post check, by inserting the name of a payee and fixing a postage stamp, may forward the same by mail to the designated payee, and it is redeemable at the post office named. The checks are then to be canceled and new checks issued.

WEST INDIAN TREATIES.

Protocols Signed Extending the Time Allowed for a Ratification of the Agreement.

Washington, March 17.—Secretary Hay and Lord Pauncefote have signed protocols exteading the time allowed for the ratification of the reciprocity treaties between the United States and the British West Indian islands of Jamaica, Turks and Caicos, Bermuda and the British colony of Guiana.

The protocol provides that the ratification shall take place as soon as possible, within 13 months at the utmost. These treaties are now pending before the senate, behind the French reciprocity treaty, and the period allowed for their ratification would expire, in the ordinary course, about the end of the present month.

The extension does not mean that the state department has abandoned the idea of securing action upon the treaties at the present session of congress, but simply marks a precaution taken to guard against unexpected obstacles.

FRUITGROWERS WILL LOSE.

A Cold Wave Strikes Eastern Tennessee and North Georgia—Everything Frozen.

Chattanooga, Tenn., March 17.—The worst to be feared by fruit growers of eastern Tennessee and northern Georgia was realized in the cold wave of Thursday night. Reports Friday morning show that the mercury dropped to 24 and everything is frozen over this entire section. Fruit growers will lose heavily. Johnson City reports nine inches of snow, which by its weight has damaged large tracts of timber.

Boy Shot By His Brother.

Chicago, March 17.—John Evans, a 12-year-old son of Michael P. Evans, of the bureau of identification, was shot through the heart and instantly killed by his elder brother, Emmett, aged 14, while the latter was attempting to wrest a revolver from him when it was discharged.

Confirmation Held Up.

Washington, March 17.—In the executive session of the senate Mr. Fairbanks attempted to secure consideration of the nomination of Hon. W. D. Bynum to be appraiser of the port of New York, but the democrats made objection, and the nomination went over until the next executive session.

Part of a Trestle Burned.

Carlinville, Ill., March 17.—The 100-foot trestle near Macoupin Station five miles south of this city, caught fire from a train, and 34 feet of the structure was destroyed.

ROUTING THE BOERS.

There Will Be But Little Fighting Until British Reach Vaal River.

The Next Important Operations May Be Expected to Take Place in Natal, but Not for Two or Three Weeks Yet.

London, March 18.—The peaceful conquest of the Orange Free State progresses so evenly that it is now believed there will be little or no fighting until Lord Roberts reaches the Vaal river. How soon he intends to start out with this objective is not yet hinted at, but the pacification of the Free Staters seems now engaging all his intention. When the move comes it would doubtless be accomplished with the secrecy and swiftness which have characterized all the British advances since Lord Roberts assumed command.

The revolt of the Cape Dutch in the northeast seems to have had its back broken, and it is likely Gen. Kitchener will soon resume his place beside his chief.

London, March 19.—The news from South Africa is entirely satisfactory to the British public. The relief of Mafeking is not yet announced, but it is extremely probable that this is already accomplished by Col. Plumer's advance. Lady Charles Pentinck, at Cape Town, has received a telegram from her husband in Mafeking, dated March 12, saying that he expected to join her shortly. The actual relief movements have not been publicly developed in detail, but it seems that Lord Methuen only started very recently and is rather engaged in dispersing the Boers of the district than aiming at actual relief.

Col. Peakman has dispersed 500 Boers at Fourteen Streams.

Lord Roberts probably ascertained from Mr. Frazer, the new mayor of Bloemfontein, before dispatching Gen. Pole-Carew southward, that in all likelihood the railway was clear. The next move will be to collect at Bloemfontein by railway sufficient stores for the immense army Lord Roberts will have when the Orange river forces joined him. This will probably occupy from two to three weeks. Therefore the next important operations may be expected in Natal.

The cavalry brigade which Lord Roberts has sent to Thaba Nchu, 55 miles east of Bloemfontein, is desired to cut off some 2,000 Boers who are escaping from the southward.

The Boers are reported to have destroyed the railway in the neighborhood of Kroonstadt.

London, March 19.—The war office has received the following dispatch from Field Marshal Roberts, dated Bloemfontein, Sunday, March 18:

"The guards brigade returned yesterday from Norval's Pont. Several burghers have laid down their arms to Gen. Pole-Carew at Edinburg and elsewhere.

"The officer commanding at Belmont reports that some deserters have come in with a Maxim, a nine-pounder and another gun. Another nine-pounder has been brought into Colesberg. The cavalry brigade has gone to Thaba Nchu in order to reassure the inhabitants of that district and to distribute copies of the proclamation to the people of the Free State. These proclamations are being eagerly sought after.

FIFTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

Washington, March 12.—Senate—During almost the entire session of the Senate Mr. Rawlins, of Utah, occupied the floor in a discussion of the Philippine question. He went deeply into the constitutional phases of the question. His argument was largely legal and technical. He is opposed to holding of the Philippines. Eighty-six private pension bills were passed.

House—For the second time within a week a Democrat was unseated by the House and a Republican seated in his place. R. A. Wise was given the seat hitherto occupied by W. A. Young from the Second Virginia District. The vote was exceedingly close. While none of the Republicans voted with the Democrats, enough were absent unpaired to reduce the Republican majority upon the final vote from 15, the normal majority, to 4. An urgent deficiency bill carrying $1,620,580, was passed.

Washington, March 13.—Senate—Personal explanations were made by Mr. Allen and Mr. Butler of their positions on the financial question. Both announced their belief in the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1. The statements were called out by reports to the contrary which had gained circulation. Mr. Turner, of Washington, began an extended speech on the Puerto Rican bill. He maintained that the pending measure clearly was unconstitutional and expressed his belief that it would be so held if it were passed upon by the supreme court.

House—The last legislative step in the enactment of the financial bill was taken when the conference report on the bill was adopted by a vote of yeas 166, nays 150, present and not voting 10. The senate had already adopted the conference report so that it remains only for president McKinley to affix his signature to the measure to make it a law.

Wasaington, March 14.—Senate—Two arguments were presented to the senate, in which almost antipodal positions were taken by the two senators. Mr. Teller, of Colorado, in a brief speech, maintained that the constitution could not extend over territory acquired by the United States, while Mr. Turner, of Washington, elaborately contended that the constitution extended over the entire territory the very moment the United States took permanent possession of it. Aside from the constitutional question there seemed to be a practical agreement. Both were opposed to the annexation, and both objected to any of the insular territory becoming a part of the United States, or any of its inhabitants entering the United States.

House—The District of Columbia appropriation bill was taken up and under the five minute rule Mr. Meddaugh, of Florida, discussed the Nicaragua canal; Mr. Cowherd, the Utah question; Mr. Howard, the Cuban questions, relating to the Philippines and the "open door" policy in the east; Mr. Hooker, of Missouri, the possibility of electing senators by the people, and Mr. Bentel (Ill.) replied to Mr. Howard. A recognition was adopted setting aside a quarter Fridays for the consideration of private bills reported by the claims and war claims committee. Bills were passed to settle the title to real estate in the city of Santa Fe, N. M., and for the relief of Thomas Paul. The District of Columbia appropriation bill carries $6,620,576.

Washington, March 15.—Senate—For nearly three hours the senate had under consideration the bill appropriating $2,095,000 for the benefit of the people of Porto Rico. The bill had not been disposed of when the day was closed. Mr. Foraker, Mr. Wellington presented an elaborate argument against the reading of Mr. Quay from the remainder of the session was consumed in a running discussion of the constitutional questions involved.

House—The District of Columbia appropriation bill carrying $6,620,576 was passed by the house, and also a bill granting the abandoned Ft. Hays military reservation to the state of Kansas for use as an industrial training station, state normal school and public park purposes.

Washington, March 16.—Senate—After a debate, at times spirited, extending over parts of two days, the senate passed the Porto Rican relief appropriation bill. As passed the measure carries $2,095,000, the president being authorized to use that sum "for public education, public works and other governmental and public purposes," in Porto Rico. Other bills were passed: Relating to the accounts of United States marshals and their deputies in districts courts for the territory of Utah; to amend the Revised Statutes relating to the signing of bills of exceptions.

House—It was the first private bill day in the house under the new rule. About two hours were spent in the discussion of a bill to pay Representative Swanson $1,700 for extra expenses incurred by him in his contest in the last congress but the bill was ultimately abandoned. Bills were passed to pay J. A. Ware $3,750 for extra service in the construction of the Mound City national cemetery; to refer the claim of Jordan Bishop for services as lieutenant commander, United States navy, to the court of claims, and for the relief of several other individuals.

Washington, March 17.—Senate—Not in session.

House—A bill was passed providing for the purchase by the Keeluk Packing Co. of a site for a cannery in Alaska used by the company for the past 29 years. Two more anti-trust resolutions were introduced, one against the American Steel & Wire Co. and the other against the Federal Steel Co. Mr. Burkett presented resolutions in memory of the late Senator Monroe L. Hayward, a senator from Nebraska. Tributes to the deceased paid Mr. Ward's memory and as an additional mark of respect the house adjourned at 1:25 o'clock.

How the Uprorious Hosiery of a Swell Young Man Struck a Hotel Clerk.

There is a young business man who has more hosiery than he knows what to do with. He was quite recently on a business trip, and happened to stop for a couple of days in Philadelphia. He wanted to get some advertising, but he was not fixed to pay for it, and he had read about the "fringe of the dudes" and other freaks who manage to get some brief notoriety because of their antics. He had ten dollars to spare on a scheme, and he accordingly went to a bargain sale at which they had a lot of last summer socks at 50 cents a pair. He spent the money on these things, and he went out of his way to get the most outrageous combinations of color and the most bizarre effects that were in the place. He succeeded wonderfully. He had socks which made the asphalt sidewalks cried as they do under extreme heat. His extremities fairly shrieked. Then he spent the day in the corridors of the hotel sitting in a conspicuous place showing off the socks. He would wear a pair for about 20 minutes, go to his room, change, and, coming down, show off another design for about the same time. He did this for almost ten hours, and naturally attracted quite a good deal of attention. That was what he wanted, but he could not break into the newspapers. The clerk when he was paying his bill said:

"You ought to patent that invention."

"What's that?" asked the sock man with an auto-pulpy smile, as he expected something complimentary about his scheme.

"I don't you do that for cold feet?"—Pittsburgh Daily News.

Was All Face.

The governor general of Canada, while enjoying a drive in the keen, frosty air, met an Indian who was very lightly clad. From mere curiosity he stopped the sleigh when opposite the Indian and asked him how it was he could withstand the cold under so light a covering. The Indian, after a moment's hesitation, answered by asking:

"How your face not cold?"

The governor general explained in his simplest English how it was that, the skin of his face having been exposed to the weather always, it naturally had hardened. The Indian waited till the white man was through, then, with an utterly expressionless countenance, he said:

"Me all face," and went his way.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

AN AMENDED ANSWER.

Kentucky Republicans File One in the Governor Contest Suit.

Powers, Davis, Culton and Whittaker Were Taken From Louisville to Frankfort for Their Preliminary Examination.

Louisville, Ky., March 15.—Warrants have been issued for 30 of the most prominent republicans in Kentucky and also for four Brown democratic leaders, charging them with being accessories before the fact to the murder of William Goebel. Only 12 of these warrants have been given to the detectives, and but four have been served. Only four more will be served at present, the plan being to have the April grand jury of Franklin county return indictments and then the arrests will follow.

Republican Gov. Taylor and United States Senator Deboe are on the list of those to be indicted.

Taylor says he will never surrender until the United States Supreme Court takes action. Beckham is expected to attempt to capture the State house the moment the state court of appeals affirms Judge Field's decision.

Frankfort, Ky., March. 16.—At a conference between the county and district officers here it was determined to have returned here—Secretary of State Powers, Holland Whittaker, W. H. Culton and Capt. Davis, the four alleged accessories to the assassination of Gov Wm. Goebel, and to give them a speedy examining trial.

The order of transfer from Louisville Thursday morning by County Judge Moore, and deputy sheriffs will leave at once to bring the prisoners.

The prisoners will be arraigned separately, and it is thought that bail will be granted to two of them by consent of the commonwealth.

Frankfort, Ky., March 17.—Caleb Powers, John Davis, W. H. Culton and Harland Whittaker were brought here from Louisville Friday in charge of Sheriff Suter and deputies. A special detail of police and deputy sheriffs met them at the train and they were marched to the jail through the streets which were lined with people who anticipated their coming. There was no disorder and the prisoners greeted their friends pleasantly as they went to jail.

The prisoners were arraigned before County Judge Moore at 11 o'clock, and after some argument between the attorneys Hazlip was released on $10,000 bond. Judge Moore set the examining trials for Monday. County Attorney Polsgrove said he did not think the state could get ready for trial by that time and in case they did not would ask a continuance of two days.

Louisville, Ky., March 17.—The amended answer of the republicans in the Beckham-Taylor consolidated suit involving the governorship, was filed with Judge Field in the circuit court Friday. It has been in preparation by ex-Gov. Bradley, Judge Yost and other attorneys since Judge Field's recent decision declaring his court had no jurisdiction in the case and that his court could not review the action of the legislature seating Beckham. The amended answer is made principally to perfect the record before the case is taken to the court of appeals.

As a result of meetings held by a number of prominent citizens of Louisville, it is announced that ex-Gov. John Young Brown has accepted the employment as chief counsel for the men arrested for the murder of the late Wm. Goebel. This action, its promoters say, is taken in order that no innocent man may be convicted through the agency of the $100,000 reward appropriated by the last legislature. Ex-Gov. Brown will be chief counsel, and with him will be associated Hon. George Denny, of Lexington; W. C. P. Breckinridge, of Lexington, Hon. J. C. Sims, of Bowling Green; Hon. A. E. Willson, of Louisville, and several others. These lawyers have been instructed to push the cases to an early trial, and failing in that bring habeas corpus proceedings.

Frankfort, Ky., March 17.—Gov. Taylor is said to have prepared statement making a second appeal to President McKinley. John W. Yerkes of Danville, and other republican leaders were called in conference at the executive mansion and the paper submitted to them. A committee to be headed by Mr. Yerkes, is to be sent to Washington to lay before the president whatever message is agreed on by the conference Friday.

A Double Execution.

Nasville, N. C., March 16.—Robert Fortune and John Taylor, negroes, were Thursday morning hanged at Nashville, N. C., for the murder of Robert Hester, a white farmer, in Nash county. The men waylaid Hester, and after robbing him, shot him to death.

So great was the demand to see the double execution that the Nash county board of commissioners made the hanging public. It is estimated that 10,000 persons saw the hanging.

Berlin Insurrection.

Berlin, March 19.—Sunday being the anniversary of the Berlin insurrection of 1848, the event was celebrated in the usual manner by the socialists and radicals. The weather was very unfavorable.

GIGANTIC STRIKE ON.

All the Machinists in the Entire Country Will Be Called Out Within a Short Time.

Chicago, March 19.—After the conference between representatives of the International Association of Machinists and the administrative council of the National Metal Trades association ended, President James O'Connell, of the union, declared that strikes would be called immediately in all parts of the United States and Canada. Such strikes would involve 100,000 men and cause to be shut down for an indefinite period plants having an aggregate capital of millions of dollars.

Chicago labor troubles are responsible for the disagreement which is expected to precipitate the general machinists' strike. Were it not for the fact that leaders of the machinists' union refused to call off the strikes that now exist in Chicago, Columbus, O., and Paterson, N. J., the manufacturers and the leaders, it is believed, would have come to an amicable agreement and arbitration would have been permanently established between the National Metal Trades association and the International Association of Machinists.

The members of the executive board of the Machinists' union, however, refused to call off the Chicago strike, as they declared that if they did the Chicago local would secede from the International association. When the refusal of the machinists to end the strike was presented to the manufacturers, they issued an ultimatum to the labor leaders, and on their refusal to agree to its provisions all negotiations were broken off.

Before leaving the rooms in which the joint conference was held President James O'Connell, of the International union, declared that the union would begin immediately to call strikes in all parts of the country. The first of these strikes will be called in Cleveland, O. After all the large cities have been tied up strikes will be called in the machine shops of all the railroads in the country.

Cleveland, O., March 19.—The machinists of this city met here, but took no action looking toward a strike. Another meeting is to be held on Wednesday. The men say they are waiting to hear from Chicago.

WITHIN THREE HOURS.

Three Sisters Gave Twins to the World—Four Boys and Two Girls—Surprised Husbands.

Newark, N. J., March 18.—An event medical scientists in this city are inclined to regard as unequaled in the birth record of the world occurred in Meadham, 25 miles from here. Three sisters within a little over three hours each became mothers of twins. All of the mothers are of families well known in the section in which they live.

About 3 o'clock Mrs. J. W. Garrabrant welcomed two boys. An hour later, while her husband was receiving congratulations, a messenger hurried to the house with the news that his wife's sister, Mrs. Chas. Freeman, had just become the mother of two boys. Throwing up his hands in astonishment, Mr. Garrabrant exclaimed: "Who ever saw the like!"

He was, however, to be still more astonished. After the messengers of mutual congratulation had ceased to hurry between the Freeman and Garrabrant home another messenger, all breathless, arrived at the two houses with the news that the third sister, Mrs. Frederick Guerin, had just presented her husband with two tiny girls. All the children are healthy. There will be a sextuple christening.

Cotton Mill Project.

Gainesville, Ga., March 18.—The Pacolet Manufacturing Co., of Pacolet, S. C., bought 850 acres of land two miles from the city, on which will be erected a $1,000,000 cotton mill. The mill will operate 50,000 spindles, and make standard sheeting for export only. Thirty thousand bales of cotton a year will be consumed and 1,400 hands employed. The mill is to be in full operation inside of a year.

Sailed for Guam.

San Francisco, March 18.—The brig John D. Spreckles has sailed for Guam carrying mails and freight. This is the first vessel which has ever left here for the Ladrones with a cargo of merchandise. The bulk of the cargo is for the stocking of a store, to be owned and operated by a company at Guam. There is also a telephone plant on board, which will be put up and operated by the company.

Dewey's Going South.

Washington, March 19.—Adm. and Mrs. Dewey left here for a trip south. They expect to visit Savannah, Macon, St. Augustine, Jacksonville and Palm Beach. The admiral and Mrs. Dewey probably will not return to the city until the latter part of next month, at which time it is said they will sail for Europe, visiting the exposition some time during the summer.

The Coldest in 23 Years.

Detroit, Mich., March 18.—The temperature Saturday stood at two below zero in Detroit, and through southern Michigan, the coldest 17th of March in 23 years. For the amount of snow on the ground the day breaks the record. The St. Patrick's day parade was practically abandoned.

A Million Years Old.

Findlay, O., March 18.—W. H. Henderson, of Springfield, O., was arrested here in a demented condition. He claims he is a preacher, and over a million years old.

ALLEGED CONFESSION.

Wharton Golden Said to Have Made a Remarkable Statement.

The Assassin of Goebel Hired to Fire the Treacherous Shot—A Suspect Now Under Arrest Involved—Astounding Revelations.

Barboursville, Ky., March 19.—It was said here Sunday that Sergt. F. W. Golden, of the local company of state guards, has allied himself with attorneys for the prosecution of the assassins of William Goebel, and has divulged much information concerning the men now in custody at Frankfort. His cousin, Green Golden, of the state guards, returned from Frankfort Saturday night and gave it out that Wharton Golden, the sergeant, had turned to the other side, and that Caleb Powers had told him to keep Wharton from going to Frankfort. But Wharton had left before the arrival of his cousin. Among the men in this section who were present in Frankfort when Goebel was assassinated were Milt Trosber, John Golden and a young man named Ricketts, all of whom reside on farms adjoining that of Caleb Powers father on Brush creek.

Wharton Golden is said to have stated here a few days ago that one of the men now held at Frankfort had offered these three boys $1,200 if they would put Goebel out of the way. He says they refused to take the money. Wharton Golden also said that he was afraid that these boys would tell on the men when the trial came up.

John L. Powers, brother of Caleb Powers, and for whom there is a warrant of arrest, came into town Sunday on the assurance of Sheriff Reese that he would not arrest him. He has been hiding in Harlan county and on his father's farm. Many of the republicans here are very much incensed over the arrest of Caleb Powers, and declare that they will go to Frankfort if necessary and take him out of custody. The majority of these people say that even if Powers had some connection with the assembling of the mob at Frankfort on January 25, he is not guilty of the crime of assassination, because, as they say, he did not fire the shot. It became known to the republicans at Frankfort last week that Capt. J. F. Hawn, of Company D, 2d regiment of the state guards, had informed Mr. Beckham that he would recognize him, and was ready to make whatever disposition he saw fit of the 82 rifles and 3,000 rounds of ammunition in his possession.

Mr. Beckham sent one of his officers to Barboursville, with instructions to have Hawn pack and slip the rifles to Capt. Longmire at Lexington, but before this could be done Lieut. Col. Morow came here with orders from Gen. Collier to Hawn, telling him to turn the rifles and ammunition over to Lieut. Gibson. This Hawn refused to do, whereupon Lieut. Gibson, with an armed force, broke open the arsenal and took the rifles. The ammunition, however, is stored in the vault of the bank of Miller & Miller, who have refused to give it up except on the verbal order of Capt. Hawn. A stenogrpaher in the employ of the attorneys for the prosecution of Powers and others came here from Frankfort to take the depositions of several witnesses who have been summoned to the trials of these men. When his presence and purpose became known a crowd of about 20 wanted to lynch him. He was saved from the mob by Sergt. Wharton Golden, who, under the pretense of becoming the leader of the mob, so arranged matters that the stenographer got away.

Lexington, Ky., March 19.—For several hours Sunday Thomas C. Campbell, of New York; Robert B. Franklin, commonwealth's attorney, and James Polsgrove, county attorney, of Franklin county, and E. W. Golden, Barboursville, were in consultation at the Phoenix hotel. The first named three are attorneys for the prosecution in the case of those accused of complicity in the assassination of William Goebel, and Golden is a sergeant in the Barboursville company of mountain militia, of which John L. Powers is the captain.

At 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon Campbell went to Cincinnati and a couple of hours later Franklin and Polgrove returned to Frankfort. Golden left Sunday night on the eastbound C. & O. train. At the depot he was asked by a militiamen as to his mission here. It is stated that his reply was: "I am saving myself from a term in the pen, and maybe the gallows."

He refused to talk to newspaper men at all.

Increased Five Times.

Washington, March 18.—The house committee on militia directed a favorable report on the bill of Representative Marsh, of Illinois, increasing the appropriation for the national guard and militia of the country from $400,000 to $2,000,000 annually.

Ordered to Observe the Sabbath.

Washington, March 14.—The president has sent instructions to United States Commissioner General Peck at the Paris exposition to see that the Sabbath is observed as far as possible in the American section during the progress of the exposition.

President of the Association.

Washington, March 14.—It is stated here that Robert Young, the son of Nick Young, the league president, will be the president of the new American association of baseball clubs.

FILIPINOS ACTIVE.

Rebels Furnished Arms and Ammunition By Spanish Residents—Treason of Municipal Presidents.

Manila, March 19.—Gen. Otis considers Manila the most troublesome center in the situation. The insurgent junta here, in conjunction with that in Hong Kong, is growing active. The military authorities have been forced to put a stop to Malini's intercourse with the public. The local and foreign press consider his recent utterances calculated to incite the Filipinos to a continued revolt and prejudicial to American control.

Flores, who has just arrived here, says he comes trusting to American leniency, and that he would not have dared come to Manila if Spain were yet in control. He cherishes the hopes and aspirations which actuated him when in the field, and desires to watch congressional action upon the question of the Philippines. The insurgents, he says, do not expect to vanquish the Americans, but are maintaining a resistance with the idea of forcing congress to accord them the best possible terms.

A number of representative insurgent leaders from different parts of Luzon have recently been in conference in Manila. Some have been placed under arrest, but the others thus far have not been interfered with.

Reports are current here of active rebel organization in the province of Moronga, where the insurgent leaders are said to be assisted by prominent Spanish residents. Inhabitants of this district who are in Manila have been advised not to return to their homes, but to remain under the protection of the Americans.

It is also reported that the rebels are reorganizing in the province of Zambanles under Masserado. Brigands are committing atrocities in the province of Nueva Ecija, where they have murdered 20 natives and Chinamen. Eight other murders have been committed near Tarlac. The Nueva Ecija insurgents are heavily taxing local traders and farmers, with the result that business is paralyzed and there is a general scarcity of food.

The funds for maintaining this guerrilla warfare are collected from the various towns of the island, whether occupied by the Americans or not even including Manila.

In the province of Albay the insurgents have ceased harassing the Americans owing, it is reported, to a lack of ammunition, but they continue ravaging the country by burning and looting. The natives are tiring of this sort of thing and threaten to turn against the marauders. Already the townspeople of Legaspi, Albay and Donzol are slowly returning to their homes.

Gen. Kobbe has opened 20 ports in the southern part of Luzon and in the islands of Samar and Leyte, the result of which is to stimulate trade there, although only temporarily, as the country is non-productive and apparently non-consuming. Owing to the political conditions of the last 12 months, products accumulated during the blockade. These will be shipped to Manila, and then the ports will be empty.

Evidence accumulates of the treason and perfidy of the municipal presidents in the provinces of Gen. McArthur's district. The presidents of several towns in Lepanto and Union provinces have declined to continue in their positions, saying that they do not desire any further identification with the Americans.

MASSING AN ARMY.

Russia Reported to Have Gathered 160,000 Soldiers in Different Departments of the Empire.

Berlin, March 18.—The Constantinople correspondent of the Tageblatt telegraphs the following, which he claims to have acquired from a very good source:

"During the last five months 160,000 soldiers have been thrown into different departments of Russia, both on this side and across the Caspian Merv. Tuschkend and Samarkand are veritable war camps, and only the impossibility at the present season of the year of building new barracks or harboring men in tents has delayed the advance of further troops. A decisive manifestation against England may be expected before long."

The correspondent adds under reserve that Russia has actually acquired a harbor on the Persian gulf outside the Straits of Ormuz.

Statements still more sensational are published by the Munich Neueste Nachrichten, one of the best informed papers in Germany, which affirms, among other things, that Great Britain has consented to co-operate with Germany for the purpose of upsetting Russian plans in Asia Minor.

Killed in a Boxing Bout.

Santa Cruz, Cal., March 19.—Frank Cass, 18 years old, was killed at Levin Lakes in a friendly bout with Bert Whidden. In the eighth round Whidden struck Cass with a six-ounce glove on the left side of the neck. Death resulted in half an hour. Cass weighed 170 pounds, being 20 pounds heavier than Whidden.

Another Gift to Yale.

New Haven, Ct., March 18.—At a meeting of the Yale corporation just held here the gift was announced of $130,000 to Yale to found a school of forestry. The doners are Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Pinchot, of New York city and their sons, Gifford Pinchot, Yale '89, and Amos R. E. Pinchot, Yale '98.

Cold Wave in Louisiana.

New Orleans, March 18.—The weather in this city and throughout Louisiana continues cold, and the local bureau sends out a prediction of frost. Snow fell and ice formed.

INTERESTING STATE NEWS.

SKELETONS UNEARTHED.

They Are Supposed to Be Those of Tennessee Traders Murdered at an Old Inn in Kentucky.

Guthrie, Ky., March 17.—Eight skeletons were unearthed by laborers employed to build a switch on the Henderson division of the Louisville & Nashville railroad, near town. A close examination of the skeletons indicated that they were the remains of individuals who had been killed. The chief of police was notified, also several medical men, and the latter announced that the skeletons were doubtless the remains of men who had been buried at least 20 years. Four of the skulls were crushed in as though having been dealt blows with some heavy instrument. The other four had holes in different portions of the skull, as though a large caliber bullet had been fired at close range.

Forty years ago, in a hollow where the skeletons were exhumed, stood an inn, the proprietor of which had a shady reputation. The inn was conducted by a man named Gregory, who was also noted for illicit traffic in whisky.

Traders from Nashville and vicinity passed through this section on their way to St. Louis to dispose of stock and other products. Gregory's inn was the only stopping place, and was a popular resort for traders.

In the spring of 1832 a company of traders, eight in number, led by Chas. Percival, left Nashville for St. Louis with a large drove of cattle. They disposed of the stock, and a few days later started upon their return home. In vain did the members of the families await the coming of the loved ones. Nothing more was ever heard of them, although they were traced to this section.

The skeletons discovered are believed to be those of the long lost men, and relatives of the men have been notified and will transfer the remains to various burial grounds. The bodies were found near where the old inn used to stand.

The proprietor, Gregory, at the breaking out of the civil war, joined a guerrilla band under the leadership of the famous Sue Mundy, and was killed.

Sue Mundy was born and reared near Guthrie, in Logan county.

Middlesboro, Ky., March 16.—On petition of City Judge J. W. Bosworth the circuit court has granted an order restraining H. M. Rhorer from acting as city judge. It is said the city government will refuse to recognize Judge Bosworth, so the city will practically be without a city tribunal until the matter is adjudicated. Both Rhorer and Bosworth are prominent Kentuckians, Bosworth being a brother of Sheriff Henry Bosworth of Lafayette county. Rhorer is an ex-senator and representative, and a long, hot legal fight is expected.

Walton.

It was stated in the news from this place, last week, that the performances on the 16th and 17th inst, would not be under the auspices of the Masonic Lodge of this place. This was a mistake, as it was generally understood by the brethren and Mr. Reed that the performances would be a continuation of the arrangement. It was not formally acted upon in the Lodge.

Last Friday night was more disagreeable than any one we have had this winter, and there was, consequently, a small attendance at the Opera House. But Saturday was a gloriously bright day in this the "winter of our discontent," and a good attendance witnessed a very fair rendition of the "Heroic Dutchman of 1776."

The performers acted with more vim and all acquitted themselves most handsomely. Miss Ethel Waltz made her first appearance, and fully did she come up to the expectation of her friends. She was au fait in her part and became a favorite from the start.

Miss Lottie Holder sustaind her previous brilliant reputation. Dr. J. L. Adams, another first appearance, was at home in his part and was warmly applauded. Dr. B. F. Metcalfe, in the costume of the 18th century, bore a strong resemblance to Geo. Washington. Harry Eskew is all of the stage villian and can be depended upon to have the dislike of the audience at once, and keep it up to the end. The other characters were ably represented. Joe Reed, as the Dutchman, and Ed Mann as the darky, were almost ideal in their personifications. On the whole Walton has as good an amateur dramatic club as there is in the country.

Your Petersburg correspondent fired a lot of balderdash at us in the last issue of the RECORDER, which could only amuse the simple and entertain the ragtime politicians and street corner loafers, with whom he associates. In it he tries to make us out a sorehead and Republican. We ask for space to show some of his political capers in the famous campaign of last year, and let the public decide whose acts, his or mine, were the most open to suspicion that they were influenced by the desire for office. When the name of Wm. Goebel was first mentioned in connection with the Governorship of Kentucky, he took decided grounds against him, declaring he was the coldest man he ever met—colder than an iceberg, and that he would not vote for him for any office—emphasizing it with many cuss words. He continued in this line until a short time previous to the mass convention at Burlington. It was reported to us on Saturday preceding the aforesaid convention that he was about to go over to the Goebel camp. We went to see him late in the afternoon of the next day and told him it would not do for him to go over to Goebel at this late hour, after he had antagonized him so long and hoped he would remain loyal to Hardin, attend the Convention and vote for him. His reply was, "Oh! I will go and vote for him." He did go and vote, but, the "him" he voted for was Wm. Goebel. We saw at a glance that he was trying to deceive us and are firmly of the opinion that when he was talking to us his communication for the next issue of the RECORDER, in which he showed his hand for Goebel had already been penued and ready to go out in the morning mail. For his apostasy he was placed on the election board. Thus encouraged he is now striving for another office. Where did the office seekers go in the recent contest?—to the Goebel camp, every one of them, for that seemed to be the most direct road to office.

As to his charge that we have sworn allegiance to the Republican party, there is no more in it than in his promise to us that he would vote for Hardin, or his catamount yarn.

The devil despises a turn-coat—so do we, and emphatically refuse to be read out of the Democratic party by one. Anti-Goebel Democrats are familiar with being called Republicans by galloots and statesmen who dance all hands round the grocery stove as they were during the campaign, of hearing the cry of bolter and L. & N. R. R. What kind of ties did the gentleman drink and what was it sweetened with that caused this sudden and violent change in his political course? We, as many others do, think it was Goebel tea sweetened by a strong decoction of the essence of office—the same as is imbibed by hundreds of others throughout the State.

Most any man felt like cracking his heels together those nice, warm days and exclaiming with the poet, "Come, gentle spring, etherial mildness, come," but if he says it got here the 16th, he's a leather headed hyrocimus with ears two feet long and no mistake.

That was a real nice bouquet of daisies the Richwood Cor. placed in the button hole of our best Prince Albert, last week, and we shall ever keep it sown from the upper shelf of our memory a tablet and inscribe thereon the following lines: "May the goddess of friendship with her pen dipped in sunlight of inseperation trace in letters of gold upon every leaf of our memory kind thoughts of the Richwood correspondent."

Mrs. Bettie Smith, whose illness was mentioned in last week's paper, died at 9:15 o'clock Wednesday night. Mrs. Smith was a quiet, unassuming christian woman that everybody held in the highest regard and esteem. Her life was spent in continuously ministering to others comfort and pleasure in that unselfish manner characteristic of the real christian. Elder Moore conducted the funeral services at Sardis, Friday at 10 o'clock in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends.

The year 1900 has brought your correspondent in contact with some very pleasant people in a business way and none have been more pleasant than Messrs. Henley Smith and Walker Tolin of your town. We have spent many enjoyable days in Burlington and know the people to be as clever as can be found in Kentucky. They do not make a funeral procession of life, put on long faces and look sanctimonious, but enjoy life in all sorts of innocent fashions. We heard a man say (and he is a man who knows too) that "Burlington is all right." There was a volume of meaning in these words coming from the source they did, and we are fully convinced that Burlington is all right and no mistake.

Since writing up clubs has become a dangerous business in some localities, we would hesitate to do so only under the most favorable conditions. Our friend, J. W. Kennedy, gave us a kind invitation to be present at a meeting of the "Excellsior Club," to be held at his house Friday evening, and only engagements at the capitol of Boone prevented our accepting. Then we have been requested by one of the club's most accomplished and handsome members, a young lady, to write up the affair, so there certainly cannot be any crimination or recriminations grow out of the matter coming from "hen-pecked husbands" (for there were none present we know) or wrathful wives in defense of said "h p h's." "Maple Hill," the elegant home of Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy, was brilliantly lighted up and presented a most hospitable and inviting panorama in anticipation of the Club's meeting. Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy welcomed the members to the hospitalities of their home with their usual frankness and courtesy that soon placed everyone at ease. Recitations by Misses Janey Davis and Marietta Riley, piano solos by Miss Annie Aylor; vocal solos by Mrs. Sam C. Hicks; violin solos by Mr. Dick Thompson was the Club's program for the evening. After usual bible reading and prayer as opening exercises the program was carried out with credit to all concerned. As a closing exercise Supt. Voshell addressed the Club and with other interesting things said he advised the members to be prompt and cheerful in responding to their duties as members and if they had anything to say, get up and say it without invitation. After program had been carried out refreshments were served and a good social was enjoyed. Club adjourned to meet with Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Hughes.

ELECTION NOTICE.

The stockholders of the Burlington and Florence Turnpike Co., will hold its annual election for President and four Directors on Saturday, April 7th, 1900, at Burlington Deposit Bank.

ROBT. ROUSE, President.

will make the season of 1900 at my stable near Big Bone Church, and will be permitted to attend 15 or 20 approved mares at $15 to insure a colt to stand up and suck.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE:

Dandy Cristo is a dark bay, 5yrs-old, 16 hands high, heavy mane and tail, and weighs 1,050 lbs.

Dandy Cristo by Black Cristo; he by Monte Cristo, 50; first dam by Black Squirrel, 56; 2d dam by Mambrino Time; 3d dam by Blue Bull.

Monte Cristo by Montrose; he by Diamond Denmark, he by Black Denmark, he by Denmark, thoroughbred, the great 4 mile race horse, he by Imported Hedgeford. Monte Cristo's 1st dam by Black Williams, she by Brown's Highlander; 2d dam by Whips' thoroughbred.

Dandy Cristo's dam by Virginia Morgan and Spark's Gren Berry. Grand dam—by Black Squirrel, great-grand dam, Highlander and Blades' famous saddle horse, Regulator, from Bracken county.

This breeding has produced the best saddle and harness horses ever in the Blue Grass section, and it is to be hoped that the breeders in this section will take advantage of it and raise a higher grade of horses, when it can be done so cheap.

Remember that a fancy saddle horse commands as high price as ever, whilst common horses are too cheap to give away.

Dandy Cristo took first premium in general purpose ring at Florence Fair in 1899; has made two shows and took first each time.

R. LEE HUEY.

A CARD.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

I write occasionally for your paper for my own amusement. I have scrupously endeavored to act the gentleman in all my communications. I cannot recall a single instance in which I permitted any of the baser elements of frail humanity to predominate and direct my pen. I have never criticised in any way any communication from any of your contributors. I have my peculiar style of writing and claim the right to exercise it. I grant other contributors to your paper the same inalienable right to practice any style of writing they choose.

Last week a short communication appeared in your paper in which the writer made a most unpardonable attack upon me personally. I feel honor bound to notice this communication so far as to let your readers know that I enter a protest to the ungentlemanly or unlady-like effusion of the unknown writer—I have not the remotest idea who the author may be, and I hope I may never know. I am fully convinced that whoever he or she may be they never wrote a newspaper article before. There are certain rules to be observed in literature as well as in society that enables one to command the respect of their fellow creatures. The golden rule is to be courteous and respectful in all their dealings with their fellowmen or women and mind strictly their own business.

Week before last I sent you a humorous sketch, in rhyme, of the Ladies' Cooking Club. I had been requested by a few of the club to attend the session to be held at my daughter's home, and write up the meeting. I showed my communication before sending it in to four of the most prominent members of the club. They approved it and gave their consent to my having it published. Had I been cognizant of the self-important "Friend of the Club," I should certainly have paid my respects to the said consequential party and asked his or her permission to have it published.

If the self-coustituted "Friend of the Club," wishes any further recognition from me, let him or her sign their name to any attack they wish to make upon me so that I may realize that I am not in danger of literary assassination. As to the silly lines the writer attributes to me, I will say that I made no such quotation. Very unexpectedly I was called upon for a quotation. Having devoted my life to the cultivation of the creative at the expense of the retentive faculty of my mind, I had no quotation at hand, and attempted to improvise a verse suited to my feelings and the occasion, so the the following lines flashed across my mind:

"Here I stand on two little chips,
Trembling from my feet to my hips;
I pray you, ladies, one and all,
To excuse me before I fall."

After repeating the first line I trembled so and felt so feint I sat down.

I would suggest to the "Friend of the Club," that he or she use with moderation or leave off altogether condiments in his or her food. At least I would leave out vinegar, pickles and horse radish. Their action on the digestive organs may become injurious. Indigestion often produces sour stomach, sour stomach often generates sour temper, and sour temper sometimes causes a person to make sour speeches. I suppose that was what was the matter with the "Friend of the Club."

G. C. GRADDY.

A few days ago Mr. J. W. Duncan paid out a $10 gold piece for $5. This coin paid several debts as a V, finally coming to the hands of D. E. Castleman as a five, and owing Mr. Duncan that amount he went to his office and threw down the money, saying "there is that five dollars I owe you." Mr. Duncan picked up the money and discovered that it was ten instead of five dollars, and handed it back to Castleman, who started out to find the person from whom he got it. The coin was started on the return trip, and in a few hours it was again in possession of Mr. Duncan who had put it in circulation as a five instead of a ten dollar piece. When it came back it required no argument to induce Mr. D. to correct the mistake.

I congratulate the manufacturers of an honest medicine." For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington; Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg; O. N. Grant, Grant, aud C. S. Baisly, Bullittsville.

THE DRAMATIC ART.

Dr. Talmage Gives His Views of the Theater.

Says the Drama, Rightly Directed, Is a Source of Good—Should Be Purified, Not Suppressed—Good and Bad Plays.

At a time when the whole country is in controversy as never before concerning the theater, and some plays are being arrested by the police, and others are being patronized by Christian people, this sermon of Dr. Talmage is of much interest. The text is I Corinthians vii., 31: "They that use this world as not abusing it."

My reason for preaching this discourse is that I have been kindly invited by two of the leading newspapers of this country to inspect and report on two of the popular plays of the day—to go some weeks ago to Chicago and see the drama "Quo Vadis" and criticise it with respect to its moral effect and to go to New York and see the drama "Ben-Hur" and write my opinion of it for public use. Instead of doing that I propose in a sermon to discuss what we shall do with the dramatic element which God has implanted in many of our natures, not in 10 or 100 or 1,000, but in the vast majority of the human race. Some people speak of the drama as though it were something built up outside of ourselves by the Congreves and the Goldsmiths and the Shakespeares and the Sheridans of literature and that then we attune our tastes to correspond with human inventions. Not at all. The drama is an echo from the feeling which God has implanted in our immortal souls. It is seen first in the domestic circle among the children three or four years of age playing with their dolls and their cradles and their carts, seen ten years after in the playhouses of wood, ten years after in the parlor charades, after that in the elaborate impersonations in the academies of music. Thespis and Aeschylus and Sophocles and Euripides merely dramatized what was in the Greek heart. Terence and Plautus and Seneca merely dramatized what was in the Roman heart. Congreve and Farquhar merely dramatized what was in the English heart. Racine, Corneille and Alfieri only dramatized what was in the French and Italian heart. Shakespeare only dramatized what was in the great world's heart. The dithyrambic and classic drama, the sentimental drama, the romantic drama, were merely echoes of the human soul.

I do not speak of the drama on the poetic shelf, nor of the drama in the playhouse, but I speak of the dramatic element in your soul and mine. We make men responsible for it. They are not responsible. They are responsible for the perversion of it, but not for the original implantation. God did that work, and I suppose He knew what He was about when He made us. We are nearly all moved by the spectacular. When on Thanksgiving day we decorate our churches with the cotton and the rice and the apples and the wheat and the rye and the oats, our gratitude to God is stirred. When on Easter morning we see written in letters of flowers the inscription: "He Is Risen," our emotions are stirred. Every parent likes to go to the school exhibition with its recitations and its dialogues and its droll costumes. The torchlight procession of the political campaign is merely the dramatization of principles involved. No intelligent man can look in any secular or religious direction without finding this dramatic element revealing, unrolling, demonstrating itself. What shall we do with it?

Shall we suppress it? You can as easily suppress its Creator. You may direct it, you may educate it, you may purify it, you may harness it to multipotent usefulness, and that it is your duty to do. Just as we cultivate the taste for the beautiful and the sublime by bird-haunted glen and roistering stream and cataracts let down in uproar over the mossed rocks, and the day lifting its banner of victory in the east, and then setting everything on fire as it retreats through the gates of the west, and the Austerlitz and Waterloo of an August thunderstorm blazing their batteries into a sultry afternoon, and the round, glittering tear of a world wet on the cheek of the night—as in this way we cultivate our taste for the beautiful and sublime, so in every lawful way we are to cultivate the dramatic element in our nature, by every staccato passage in literature, by antithesis and synthesis, by every tragic passage in human life.

Now, I have to tell you not only that God has implanted this dramatic element in our natures, but I have to tell you in the Scriptures He cultivates it. He appeals to it, He develops it. I do not care where you open the Bible, your eye will fall upon a drama. Here it is in the book of Judges, the fir tree, the vine, the olive tree, the bramble—they all make speeches. Then at the close of the scene there is a coronation, and the bramble is proclaimed king. That is a political drama. Here it is in the book of Job: Enter Eliphaz, Bildad, Zophar, Elihu and Job. The opening act of the drama, all darkness; the closing act of the drama, all sunshine. Magnificent drama is the book of Job!

Here it is in Solomon's Song: The region, an oriental region—vineyards, pomegranates, mountain of myrrh, flock of sheep, garden of spices, a wooing, a bride, a bridegroom, dialogue—intense, gorgeous, all suggestive drama is the book of Solomon's Song. Here it is in the book of Luke: Costly mansion in the night! All the windows bright with illumination. The floor a quake with the dance. Returned son in costly garments which do not very well fit him perhaps, for they were not made for him, but he must swiftly leave off his old garb and prepare for this extemporized levee! Pouting son at the back door, too mad to go in, because they are making such a fuss! Tears of sympathy running down the old man's cheek at the story of his son's wandering and suffering and tears of joy at his return! When you heard Murdock recite "The Prodigal Son" in one of his readings, you did not know whether to sob or shout. Revivals of religion have started just under the reading of that soul revolutionizing drama of "The Prodigal Son."

Here it is in the book of Revelation: Crystalline sea, pearly gate, opaline river, amethystine capstone, showering coronets, one vial poured out incarnadining the waters, cavalrymen of Heaven galloping on white horses, nations in doxology, hallelujahs to the right of them, hallelujahs to the left of them. As the Bible opens with the drama of the first Paradise, so it closes with the drama of the second Paradise.

Mind you, when I say drama I do not mean myth or fable, for my theology is of the oldest type—500 years old, thousands of years old, as old as the Bible. When I speak of the drama at the beginning and the close of the Bible, I do not mean an allegory, but I mean the truth so stated that in grouping and in startling effect it is a God-given, world-resounding, Heaven-echoing drama. Now, if God implanted this dramatic element in our natures, and if He has cultivated and developed it in the Scriptures, I demand that you recognize it.

Because the drama has again and again been degraded and employed for destructive purposes is nothing against the drama, any more than music ought to be accursed because it has been taken again and again into the saturnalian wassails of 4,000 years. Will you refuse to enthrone music on the church organ because the art has been trampled again and again under the feet of the lascivious dance?

Rev. Dr. Bellows, of New York, many years ago, in a very brilliant but much criticised sermon, took the position that the theater might be renovated and made auxiliary to the church. Many Christian people are of the same opinion. I do not agree with them. I have no idea that success is in that direction. What I have said heretofore on this subject, as far as I remember, is my sentiment now. But to-day I take a step in advance of my former theory. Christianity is going to take full possession of this world and control its maxims, its laws, its literature, its science and its amusements. Shut out from the realm of Christianity anything, and you give it up to sin and death.

If Christianity is mighty enough to manage everything but the amusements of the world, then it is a very defective Christianity. Is it capable of keeping account of the fears of the world and incompetent to make record of its smiles? Is it good to follow the funeral, but dumb at the world's play? Can it control all the other elements of our nature but the dramatic element? My idea of Christianity is that it can and will conquer everything. In the good time coming, which the world calls the golden age and the poet the elysian age and the Christian the millennium, we have positive announcement that the amusements of the world are to be under Christian sway. "Holiness shall be upon the bells of the horses," says one prophet. So, you see, it will control even the sleigh rides. "The city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof," says another prophet. So, you see, it is to control the hoop rolling and the kite flying and the ball playing. Now, what we want is to hasten that time. How will it be done? By the church going over to the theater? It will not go. By the theater coming to the church? It will not come. What we want is a reformed amusement association in every city and town of the United States. Once announced and explained and illustrated, the Christian and philanthropic capitalist will come forward to establish it, and there will be public spirited men everywhere who will do this work for the dramatic element of our natures. We need a new institution to meet and recognize and develop and defend the dramatic element of our nature. It needs to be distinct from everything that is or has been.

I would have this reformed amusement association having in charge this new institution of the spectacular take possession of some hall or academy. It might take a smaller building at the start, but it would soon need the largest hall, and even that would not hold the people; for he who opens before the dramatic element in human nature an opportunity of gratification without compromise and without danger does the mightiest thing of this century, and the tides of such an institution would rise as the Atlantic rises at Liverpool docks.

There are tens of thousands of Christian homes where the sons and daughters are held back from dramatic entertainment for reasons which some of you would say are good reasons and others would say are poor reasons, but still held back. But on the establishment of such an institution they would feel the arrest of their anxieties and would say on the establishment of this new institution which I have called the spectacular: "Thank God, this is what we have all been waiting for."

Now, as I believe that I make suggestion of an institution which wiser men will develop, I want to give some characteristics of this new institution. this spectacular, if it is to be a grand social and moral success. In the first place, its entertainments must be compressed within an hour and three-quarters. What kills sermons, prayers and lectures and entertainments of all sorts is prolixity. At a reasonable hour every night every curtain of public entertainment ought to drop, every church service ought to cease, the instruments of orchestras ought to be unstrung. What comes more than this comes too late.

On the platform of this new institution there will be a drama which before rendering has been read, expurgated, abbreviated and passed upon by a board of trustees connected with this reformed amusement association. If there be in a drama a sentence suggesting evil, it will be stricken out. If there be in a Shakespearean play a word with two meanings, a good meaning and a bad meaning, another word will be substituted, an honest word looking only one way. The caterers to public taste will have to learn that Shakespearean nastiness is no better than Congrevean nastiness. You say: "Who will dare to change by expurgation or abbreviation a Shakespearean play?" I dare. The board of trustees of this reformed amusement association will dare. It is no depreciation of a drama, the abbreviation of it. I would like to hear 30 or 40 pages of Milton's "Paradise Lost" read at one time, but I should be very sorry to hear the whole book read at one sitting. Abbreviation is not depreciation.

On the platform of this new institution this spectacular, under the care of the very best men and women in the community there shall be nothing witnessed that would be unfit for a parlor. Any attitude, any look, any word that would offend you seated at your own fireside in your family circle will be prohibited from that platform. By what law of common sense or of morality does that which is not fit to be seen or heard by five people become fit to be seen or heard by 1,500 people? On the platform of that spectacular all the scenes of the drama will be as chaste as was ever a lecture by Edward Everett or a sermon by F. W. Robertson. On the platform shall come only such men and women as you would welcome to your homes. I do not make the requisition that they be professors of religion. There are professors of religion that I would not want in my parlor or kitchen or coal cellar. It is not what we profess, but what we are. All who come on that platform of the spectacular will be gentlemen and ladies in the ordinary acceptation of those terms, persons whom you would invite to sit at your table and whom you would introduce to your children and with whom you would not be compromised if you were seen passing down Pennsylvania avenue or Broadway with them.

On that platform there shall be no carouser, no inebriate, no cyprian, no foe of good morals, masculine or feminine. It is often said we have no right to criticise the private morals of public entertainers. Well, do as you please with other institutions, on the platform of this institution we shall have only good men and good women in the ordinary social sense of goodness. Just as soon as the platform of the spectacular is fully and fairly established many a genius who hitherto has suppressed the dramatic element in his nature because he could not find the realm in which to exercise it will step over on the platform, and giants of the drama, their name known the world over, who have been toiling for the elevation of the drama, will step over on that platform—such women as Charlotte Cushman of the past, such men as Joseph Jefferson of the present.

The platform of that new institution, of that expurgated drama, occupied only by these purest of men and women, will draw to itself millions of people who have never been to see the drama more than once or twice in their lives, or never saw it at all.

As to the drama of your life and mine, it will soon end. There will be no encore to bring us back. At the beginning of that drama of life stood a cradle, at the end of it will stand a grave. The first act, welcome. The last act, farewell. The intermediate acts, banquet and battle, processions, bridal and funeral, songs and tears, laughter and groans.

It was not original with Shakespeare when he said: "All the world's a stage and all the men and women merely players." He got it from St. Paul, who, 15 centuries before that had written: "We are made a spectacle unto the world and to angels and to men." A spectacle in a coliseum fighting with wild beasts in an amphitheater, the galleries full, looking down. Here we destroy a lion. Here we grapple with a gladiator. When we fall, devils shout. When we rise, angels sing. A spectacle before gallery above gallery, gallery above gallery. Gallery of our departed kindred looking down to see if we are faithful and worthy of our Christian ancestry, hoping for our victory, wanting to throw us a garland, glorified children and parents, with cheer on cheer urging us on. Gallery of the martyrs looking down—the Polycarps and the Ridleys and the McKails and the Theban legion and the Scotch Covenanters and they of the Brussels market place and of Piedmont—crying down from the galleries: "God gave us the victory, and He will give it you." Gallery of angels looking down—cherubic, seraphic, archangelic—clapping their wings at every advantage we gain. Gallery of the King, from which there waves a scarred hand and from which there comes a sympathetic voice saying: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Oh, the spectacle in which you and I are the actors! Oh, the piled up galleries looking down!

Scene: The last day. Stage: The rocking earth. Enter: Dukes, lords, kings, beggars, clowns. No sword. No tinsel. No crown. For footlights: The kindling flames of a world. For orchestra: The trumpets that awake the dead. For applause: The clapping floods of the sea. For curtain: The Heavens rolled together as a scroll. For tragedy: "The Doom of the Profligate." For the last scene of the fifth act: The tramp of nations across the stage, some to the right, others to the left. Then the bell of the last thunder will ring, and the curtain will drop!

McKINLEY BOSS RIDDEN.

The President Has Mortgaged His Chances for a Second Term to the Combine.

Secretary Dick, right bower to the mighty Hanna, has sent to the chairman of the Texas republican state committee a hint that "it is deemed advisable that, so far as practicable, delegations to the coming national convention should be composed of those not holding federal appointments." The Chicago Times-Herald is thereupon moved to remark:

"There will be no excuse for a repetition of the monumental folly of 1892. The contest at Minneapolis was a struggle between the federal office holders and the determined followers of a man who had been a popular idol for 20 years. No one denies that the administration of President Harrison was able and patriotic, and that it commanded the confidence and admiration of the people. By common acknowledgment of all fair-minded people he was entitled to another term. It was unfortunate, therefore, that his relations with his secretary of state should have precipitated a struggle that made a grand rally of the office holders at Minneapolis necessary to secure his renomination.

"How far the presence and the strenuous labors of office holders in the Minneapolis convention may have contributed toward the defeat of Mr. Harrison at the polls is a question upon which there will always be wide diversity of opinion among politicians. But upon the question of the advisability of avoiding a repetition of the folly of '92 there can be no difference of opinion among intelligent republicans."

It was not President Harrison's relations with Mr. Blaine, but his lack of relations with the political bosses in various states, that precipitated the struggle in the convention of 1892. The opposition seized upon Blaine's name, believing that it had power to charm the convention away from the cold and unmagnetic Harrison. Many of the leaders of that opposition were Blaine's lifelong enemies, not his "followers," and some of his truest friends held aloof and protested against the use of his name.

President Harrison—to his infinite credit be it said—had declined to become a mere registering clerk to record the will of the six bosses like Platt, of New York, and Quay, of Pennsylvania. They tried to prevent his nomination, and, failing in that, in the opinion of many, sold him out at the polls.

There is no chance of a repetition of the conditions that prevailed in 1892. There is no need for a rally of federal office holders to save McKinley from a combine of managing politicians. He has given to every one of them more than his pound of flesh. His hopeless second term is mortgaged to the eyes with pledges to the bosses. McKinley can well afford to assume a virtue, thought he have it not, by keeping the federal office holders at home. His renomination is bought and paid for, at the sacrifice of whatever backbone he once had.—Albany Argus.

A Cowardly Policy.

As if the 15 per cent. and two years' limit in the Porto Rico tariff measure were not sufficiently apologetic, the president came along yesterday with a recommendation to congress that the $2,000,000 collected on importations from the island since the Spanish evacuation be applied to the relief of the Porto Ricans by the United States. Next to the performance of a "plain duty," the president seemed to think the two millions would serve. The republican majority, stimulated by sharp home messages of disapproval of Wednesday's work, lost no time in joining Mr. McKinley in his conscience fund. The Porto Ricans asked for a loaf; they get a stone. Instead of admitting this territory to its constitutional rights under the flag, and giving its people the opportunity of working out their own industrial salvation through fair and rational trade privileges, the president and his party in congress prefer to procrastinate and temporize and patch up provisional laws.

It is a cruel and cowardly policy from first to last.—Detroit Free Press.

——Mr. McKinley can truthfully say that it is no fault of his if the democrats do not elect the next president.—Albany Argus.

WHAT GOVERNS?

Repudiation of the Constitution at the Dictation of the Trusts.

Congressman McCall, of Massachusetts, struck the keynote of the Porto Rican tariff bill discussion when he said in congress the other day: "The question is not 'does the constitution govern Porto Rico?' but 'does it govern us?' Can congress, which is the creature of the constitution, do those things which the constitution prohibits?"

The American people must not blind themselves to this simple and significant truth. It may seem a matter of little consequence whether or not the tariff syndicates are allowed to tax the Porto Ricans as they see fit. The Porto Ricans will suffer and the tariff trusts will profit—and there, some might say, the matter ends. Why bother about it?

But before this tax can be imposed, before the profit of the tariff trusts and the tribute-paying of the Porto Ricans begins, an American congress must declare its authority superior to that of the American constitution. It must do a thing which the constitution distinctly prohibits. Having thus violated the constitution, its act of violence must receive the official approval of the president of the United States—who will approve it despite the fact that in his message to congress he took a stand against it.

This repudiation of the constitution at the dictation of the tariff trusts will be ominous indeed to the future of this country. What has been compelled once may be compelled again. A wrong done to one element of the American people furnishes a precedent for wrongs to other elements of the same people. And the Gargantuan greed of the tariff syndicates, sure of their grip on the American government and people, is not likely to be satisfied with the Porto Rican tribute as the full profit accruing from such power.

Does the American constitution or the trust system govern the American people these days? This is the question to be answered by the action of congress on the Porto Rico tariff bill. —St. Louis Republic.

——The president's message recommending the appropriation of 2,095,455.08—the amount of tariff duties collected under the Dingley act on imports from Porto Rico since October 18, 1898—and of future duties on such imports to the expenses of the Porto Rican government is in the nature of a public acknowledgment of the enormity of beckoning a helpless people into the United States with one hand and shutting the door against them with the other. The president's heart seems to be all right; but he has lent his head to the trusts.—Philadelphia Record.

THE PLACE FOR A POOR MAN.

Alameda, N. W. T., Canada, Dec. 22rd, 1899.

Mr. B. Davies, Canadian Government Agent, St. Paul, Minn.:

Dear Sir—As I promised you about two years ago that at some future time I would let you know what I thought of Western Canada and the chances of a poor man making a start and supporting a family at same time, so will write a few facts concerning my own experience the past 21 months, and what I have done, any able-bodied man can do, provided he will work.

I left Tyrone country, March 20th, 1898, landed in Alameda at noon the 21st, with $3.55 in my pocket, a stranger and among strangers, and when my family came in Oct., 1898, my wife had nearly $10, or barely enough to pay freight on her stove, sewing-machine and clothes and beds. I commenced work March 28th, also made entry for homestead same day (the man I started work for loaning me $15 to pay entrance fee), and I have earned or at least received $478.10 in wages since then, and have been idle at least 2 months of the 21 since I came. The homestead I took had 12 acres broke by a former occupant. I paid $20 to have it reploughed in July, '98, and the seed wheat for it cost me $8.25. I let it to a neighbor for ½ in elevator clear of all expense except the seed, and this fall I received $70.10 for my part of the crops off of the 12 acres, so my total receipts the past 21 months has been $548.10, and my expenses besides living for self and family have been as follows:

Entrance fee ($5.00 being paid for cancellation)	$ 15.00
Summer fallowing 12 acres	20.00
Seed for same	8.25
Cost of house, besides my own labor on same	75.85
20 acres of breaking and double discing same	60.00
	$179.10
My half of wheat	70.10
Net expense on homestead	$109.00

We moved on our homestead July 10th, 1899, have 32 acres in good shape for crops in 1900. My wife joins with me in sending best wishes to you and yours.

You can truly say to any poor man who pays a big rent to get a farm (somebody else's land) or works for wages to support a family, that I have personally tried both in Minnesota and tried hard to make a success of it, but found to my sorrow that after working hard a poor living was all I could get out of it, and after nearly 2 years of Western Canadian life I will say that I am very thankful to you for helping me to decide to try it in Canada.

Yours respectfully,
W. H. KINKADE.

RELEGATED THE HASH.

The Landlady Could Not Withstand the Onslaught of the Free-tions Feeders.

In a certain boarding house, where variety was not the spice of life, and where hash was so frequent an occurrence that it would have been advertised for if it had come up missing, lived six boys, who were battling with a cold world and a colder landlady.

This perpetual hash grew monotonous, and the boys determined to banish it from the table, by fair means or foul. Accordingly, when they filed into the dining-room on Monday morning and recognized the Sunday's roast served up in hash the first boy made a low bow and said:

"Why, good morning, sir; I think I've met you before!"

The second shook his head mournfully and exclaimed: "The last and state of Mr. Beef!"

"Ah, yes," said the third, "the poor fellow is all cut up."

"The remains of a close friend," sighed the fourth.

"Yes, closer than a brother," assented the fifth.

"The victim of a terrible grind!" finished the sixth, as they took their places at table.

The landlady wore a haughty don't-know-what-you-mean air, but hash has no more been seen in their midst.—Memphis Scimitar.

Missing Commandments.

The other afternoon while he was waiting in the drawing-room of a beautiful Cass-avenue residence for the delayed appearance of Elsie's mamma he was entertained by the little daughter herself. Taking her upon his lap, he began a review of the church lessons that had been given to a little maid of five.

"Can you tell me, Elsie, how many commandments there are?"

"Yes, sir; seven are eight."

"Oh, no, dear; there are ten."

"Yes, I know, there used to be, but I heard papa tell mamma once that you had broken two or three of them at least, and that would leave only seven or eight, you know."—Detroit Free Press.

NOTES FROM WASHINGTON.

Items of Interest on Important Issues for Democratic Readers.

The wage workers all over the country are watching with great interest the investigation by congress of the Idaho mining troubles. It will be remembered that last spring a mine was blown up near Wardner, and the whole Coeur d'Alene district has been under martial law since that time.

The ostensible reason for the proclaiming of martial law was that there was a state of insurrection and the civil authorities were unable to enforce the laws.

The investigation is being conducted by the house committee on military affairs of which Representatives Hull and Dick are members. Representative Lentz, who offered the resolution, is really conducting the case of the complainants and under considerable difficulty, owing to the desire of the republican majority of the committee that the real facts shall not be brought out. Representatives Sulzer, Jett and Hay seem to agree with Representative Lentz that the responsibility for the outrages of the bull pen should be placed where it belongs.

This is one of the cases where the newspaper reports of what has happened in Idaho really fell far short of the facts. To ascribe the loathsome conditions of the bull pen adequately would be difficult. A few of the facts that are clearly established may be noted. It has been proved beyond question that no state of insurrection existed which justified a declaration of martial law. There had been no resistance to civil authority.

Gen. Merriam and his colored troops seized hundreds of men in no way connected with the blowing up of the mines and confined them in the bull pen for months.

The guilty parties were permitted to escape and the atrocities perpetrated by the military authorities seem to have had another object entirely.

The real reason why martial law was declared and the rights of the citizens of Idaho so taken away, may not transpire in the course of the investigation. But the ex-prisoners of the bull pen, who are giving testimony before the congressional committee, do not hesitate to say that they believe that the Standard Oil interests control the Coeur d'Alene mines and that these interests desired to so terrorize the miners once and for all that they would never dare to rebel against any sort of servitude that might be enforced upon them.

The wage workers throughout the country have their representatives at the hearing and they declare that this is the most dangerous infringement of the liberties of the American workman that has happened since the Homestead trouble. If the outrages perpetrated by United States troops under martial law in Idaho are unrebuked by this administration, workmen expect to see a repetition of them elsewhere.

When congress convened the republicans talked with considerable assurance about a colonial department of government. It was intimated that congress would keep its hands pretty well off the insular acquirements and that President McKinley would institute his colonial department to carry out his imperial policy when he got ready. A change has come over the spirit of the dream. One factor had been overlooked in the programme. The administration forces forgot that there was a possibility that the people of the country would demand a voice in the settlement of so important a question.

Well, the people have been heard from. The republicans in Washington are looking at each other in consternation and wondering what will happen to them when they get home.

The Porto Rican tariff bill did it. And the attempt to placate the sentiment by letting President McKinley have $2,000,000 to spend for Porto Rico only made the matter worse.

"Washington is usually a dead center around which the political storms of the country revolve and leave us at peace here," said a republican congressman who voted reluctantly for the Porto Rican tariff. "It is different this time. I am simply deluged with letters from influential republicans of my district, abusing me for having voted for the bill and promising to remember it at the polls this fall."

This congressman only voices the experience of his colleagues. The senate is being bombarded with letters of the same sort. The people of the country demand that they be consulted if the constitution is to be set aside. The republicans have tried to keep the constitutional principle involved out of sight as far as possible, but it comes to the front and dwarfs every consideration of expediency which has been urged. The northwestern states especially are clamoring for free trade for their flour and wheat, and asking what their representatives at Washington mean by prating about the "open door" with China and then putting up a tariff around our own possessions.

The republicans must face the responsibility of declaring a policy for the insular possessions. The platitudes about "the flag" and philanthropy and giving strange people the benefits of our freedom must be defined in statute law.

The republicans sadly admit that the Porto Rican tariff is only the beginning of trouble. The Philippines present an appalling problem. Aguinaldo and his followers have not been subjugated. Gen. Otis has stopped sending reports, which causes much uneasiness. The New England states are clamoring to know how much longer our soldiers are to be sacrificed in that tropical climate, and what the sacrifice is for.

The trust interests, which thought the insular acquirements such a promising field, are beginning to think that they don't want them, if their possession is to mean free trade and the breaking down of the protective tariff barriers between the United States and the rest of the world.

The democrats are not saying "I told you so" to their republican brethren as often as they might. But they have from the first questioned the desirability of imperial expansion, and they now insist that the constitution must go where the flag goes.

The industrial commission lacks the prefix "republican," but the democrats say that it should be so labeled in order that the country may not be misled as to the character of its reports. It has sent its report on trusts to congress. Senator Kyle wants 100,000 copies printed for distribution throughout the country. Senator Pettigrew proposes to show that the testimony of witnesses has been "edited" and that the commission has become merely an adjunct of the republican campaign committee. The character of the report bears out the contention that the commission is very wary of expressing any views about trusts which might embarrass the administration. The Standard Oil trust is very deftly handled and made to appear as a beneficent combination for cheapening production.

Against Imperialism.

The republican majority in the house have undertaken to impose upon trade between Porto Rico and the United States 15 per cent. of the regular schedules of the Dingley tariff, and all the people from all parts of the country, and of all shades of political opinion, have let out a roar such as has probably never been heard before in opposition to any legislation since the reconstruction period. Now, what does this mean? Does it mean that the people are indifferent to the rights and interests of their new possessions? Does it mean that "imperialism," which signifies the exploiting of a people that has come under our authority, is to be indorsed or supported by the people of this country? Not by a long shot. On the contrary, it is conclusive evidence that "imperialism" is impossible, and more clearly than ever a bogey set up to scare timid people by certain political leaders, who have no better claim upon the indorsement of the public. It is conclusive evidence that it would be fatal to the chances of any political party to attempt to utilize or employ the people of the new territories for the benefit of any number of people or any set of interests in this country. It is conclusive evidence that whatever party, republican or democratic, has control of congress or of the executive power, must use its power generously, justly and wisely with respect to these possessions over which our national authority has recently been extended.—Minneapolis Journal (Rep.).

McKinley's Pitiable Plight.

No one can read the press reports of the proceedings of the republican conference at Washington on the subject of the proposed Porto Rico tariff without a sense of pity. Rarely has so abject a spectacle been presented by a national administration as that which has just been witnessed. And if there be one feature of the strange occasion more worthy of contempt than another it is that furnished by President McKinley. The shifty, evasive, insincere and indecisive character of the man is there revealed. How complete a tool must such a man be in the hands of the unscrupulous cabal who all but publicly avow their ownership of him. Taking a stand at the outset which won the public approval, and among many evoked admiration, his appearance before that conference is that of a political coward who feels that he is unworthy of trust by his friends or of serious hostility by his opponents.—St. Paul Globe.

It Will Insure Defeat.

This was a grievous blunder committed. How grievous and fraught with dire possibilities, not only to the republican party but to the country, neither congress nor the president could have foreseen. But they must realize now that the tariff section in the Porto Rico bill has aroused a storm throughout the country that will not down. If congress and the president persist in their present course nothing can save the republican party from defeat next November. It will surely cost them the house of representatives and it may cost them the presidency.—Chicago Times-Herald.

——While imperialism, trust aggression and a violation of the constitution will cause a large and respectable segment of the republican organization to refrain from supporting the dominant faction of that party led by Hanna and McKinley, there is no likelihood whatever of schism or division in the democratic ranks. While the democrats who wandered away are coming back, there is no diminution of the allied forces of populists and silver republicans. This is a democratic year.—Kansas City Times.

——The brazen attitude of the protected interests toward the Porto Rican and Hawaiian bills indicate such a disregard, even contempt, for the public's opinion or welfare that a strong reaction is sure to follow. They may feel that by keeping the republican party under financial obligations to them they can safely defy the people at large. But the republicans may throw off this obligation, or, if they don't, the people may throw them out of power.—Indianapolis Press.

WHY AMERICANS WIN.

When They Climb a Ladder They Don't Require Anyone to Hold It.

One of the many reasons why American manufactures are so successful competing in foreign markets is to be found in the following episode, which occurred recently: An American manufacturer of steam specialties was showing an English firm which made similar goods. A certain article which both firms made was under discussion.

"What is your price on this thing?" asked the American.

"Well, in your money, about $10," replied the Englishman. "What does it cost you?"

"I'll deliver at your door all you want at seven dollars apiece," said the American.

"How in the world do you do it?"

"Well, I'll illustrate," answered the American. "Look out of that window and across the street. See that man painting a sign?"

"Yes."

"He's on a ladder, isn't he?"

"Yes."

"See that other man sitting on the sidewalk holding the foot of the ladder?"

"Yes."

"Now, in America we have ladders that stand up by themselves—don't need a man to hold 'em. So, you see, in this instance we divide your cost of labor exactly by —2."

"I see," remarked the Englishman.—Electrical Review.

New Use for Wireless Telegraphy.

Wireless telegraphy has had a new demonstration for usefulness by the captain of a lightship, who used it after ordinary signals had failed to notify the shore authorities of danger. In a like manner Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the famous dyspepsia cure, acts when all other medicines fail. Its superiority is quickly felt in the removal of strength. It regulates the bowels, improves the appetite, and cures indigestion. Try it.

Shorthand Talk.

The courtroom was filled with people. The witness was a foreigner and was paving volubly and at length in his native tongue to the queries of the lawyers.

While this was going on a young wit entered the proceedings and stood listening for a minute to the witness' answers. Then he remarked, drily: "Say, what's he doing, talking shorthand?"—Detroit Free Press.

The Chief Justice of Samoa Says Peruna is The Very Best Catarrh Cure.

Court Room Scene where Judge Chambers maintained the supremacy of the United States in Samoa.

In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., Chief Justice Chambers says the following of Peruna:

"I have tried one bottle of Peruna, and I can truthfully say it is one of the best tonics I ever used, and I take pleasure in recommending it to all sufferers who are in need of a good medicine. I can recommend it as one of the very best remedies for catarrh."

ALABASTINE Is a durable and natural coating for walls and ceilings, made ready for use by mixing with cold water. It is a cement that goes through a process of setting, hardens with age, and can be coated and recoated without washing off its old coats before renewing. Alabastine is made in white and fourteen beautiful tints. It is put up in five-pound packages in dry form, with complete directions on every package.

ALABASTINE Should not be confounded with kalsomines, as it is entirely different from all the various kalsomines on the market, being durable and not stuck on the wall with glue. Alabastine customers should avoid getting cheap kalsomines under different names, by insisting on having the goods in packages properly labeled. They should reject all imitations. There is nothing "just as good."

ALABASTINE

Prevents much sickness, particularly throat and lung difficulties, attributable to unsanitary coatings on walls. It has been recommended in a paper published by the Michigan State Board of Health on account of its sanitary features; which paper strongly condemned kalsomines. Alabastine can be used on either plastered walls, wood ceilings, brick or canvas, and any one can brush it on. It admits of radical changes from wall paper decorations, thus securing a freshness at small cost, and the best effects. Alabastine is manufactured by the Cincinnati Tobacco Market.

[Western Tobacco Journal.]

The tobacco market during the week was unsteady, prices varying from day to day and from house to house. While some shippers were more than pleased with their sales, others had to reject. Old stood, more than New, was affected by this uncertainty, and the grades of these, for which owners expected 12 and 13 cents, sold at only about 11 and 12 cents. Holders are not inclined to let go, however, unless their figures are reached. They are strengthened in their position by the very light stocks of these goods and it looks reasonable that there should be a stronger demand for them as they grow scarcer.

In new tobacco the best grades seemed to have the best market this week. The highest price paid was $19 25. The average price was not much changed. The condition, so far, gives little cause for complaint. The weather has continued favorable for packing, and sales in consequence are of good size.

The 677 hhds old offered averaged $9 42 per hundred. pounds, a s against $10 35 for the 777 hhds for the previous week, and $9 73 for 461 hhds for the corresponding week of last year. The daily averages were as follows: Tuesday $9 24 Wednesday, $9 50; Thursday, $9 15; Friday, $10 08.

Crop and Stock.

There seems to be very little rhyme or reason in the relative position of cattle, hog and sheep values. While hogs are $1 higher than a year ago, sheep fully $1 higher and lambs $2 higher, the bulk of the beef cattle are now $1 to $1.25 lower than they were the high point of the season, and lower than they were a year ago. The best cattle so far this month have sold at $6.10, best hogs at $5, best sheep at $5.40 and best lambs at $7.20. The bulk of the beef cattle are now selling at $4.60 to $5.25 and buyers are acting in a very bearish manner.—Farmers' Home Journal.

Verona.

The required amount has been subscribed for the T. J. Hughes telephone line to be run to this place, and if the weather permits will be completed by April 15. O. K. Whitson will take charge of the station in his dry goods store. Those who have rented 'phones are: Craven Bros., E. E. Fry, M. L. Myers, D. B. Roberts and Dr. J. F. McCormac. This will connect Verona with the outside world, and when everything is in working order we would like to know who is the Governor of Kentucky.

"We like the people of Verona and neighborhood—but oh, those roads!" is an expression often heard by citizens of other parts of the county. And is it not a true expression? For their industry and hospitality, they are difficult to excel. They have good schools, good churches and a great part are in good circumstances financially—"but oh, those roads." For two or three months of each year they are absolutely impassible. Almost every plan imaginable has been thought of and discussed, but so far none has been effective. However, we firmly believe it will not be long before we will have pikes, and good ones too. There is not much talk about it now, but a great deal of thinking, and between now and next December there will have been done much work. Three among the best farmers on the road leading west have promised to haul rock 26 days each; with four-horse teams; others have said they will do as much as any other person. If every one who could would haul, and those who could not, would break rock or help grade, it would not be longer than two or three years till a pike would extend along every farm. How much work will you do to help us out—of the mud?

THE proposition to compel Porto Rico to pay a duty on the goods she places on the market in this country, while the United States is to have free access to her markets, is not in accord with the President's recent declarations that "it is our duty to abolish all customs tariffs between this country and Porto Rico," but when this policy was proclaimed the President had not heard from the Sugar trust nor the Tobacco trust, each of which is expected to make liberal contributions to the Republican campaign this fall. The President has reached a point from which to back is dangerous, and to press forward is sure destruction.

J. M. Lassing tells the people through the Kentucky Post, from Frankfort, that Capt. W. H. Baker, of Erlanger, will probably enter the race for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this district this fall. It is presumed that Mr. Lassing knows whereof he speaks when he makes this announcement. Now, if Capt. Baker intends entering the race, his friends want absolute assurance of the fact at an early date, as many of them have others friends for whom they desire to root if he is not in the field.

The examining trials of several of those under arrest at Frankfort, charged with being accessories to the assassinatiog of Goebel, are set for Friday.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 28, 1900. NO. 23.

THE examining trial of Caleb Powers, charged with being accessory before the fact of the assassination of Gov. Goebel, was concluded in Frankfort, Tuesday, and resulted in the holding over of Powers without bail.

THERE are said to be at least two Democrats in Boone who will desire to fill the vacancy in the office of State Senator, when Dr. Furnish resigns. It may be some time before the Governor calls an election to supply the vacancy.

GEN. WALLACE of Indiana, can't see how the administration can disregard the teachings of the constitution, in regard to Porto Rico, and the same is true of a great many other prominent Republicans who do not believe in permitting the trusts to control every interest in the land.

THE report comes from Frankfort that Coulton and Youtsey, who are under arrest as accessories to the assassination of Goebel, have been making statements to the attorneys for the prosecution that corroborate Golden's testimony. If this be true the whole conspiracy will soon be developed.

JUDGE FIELDS of Louisville, concluded the hearing of the election cases before him last week, and rendered a judgment entirely in favor of the Democrats, and the cases will now go to the Court of Appeals. Judge Field was the one particular Judge the Republicans were anxious to get the cases before.

W. S. SWOOPE, clerk of the Owen county court is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for sheriff of Owen county. Besides being very popular at home Mr. Swoop has many friends out in the State who will be glad if he land the nomination. He has taken an active part in many of the district and State conventions in the past, and has always proven faithful to the nominees.

IN regard to the approaching contest for the Democratic Congressional nomination in this district, Capt. Baker, of Erlanger, told the RECORDER the other day that his health was not such as would permit him to enter the race. That his health was the first consideration with him. If the Captain was in a condition to enter the field he would make a winning race.

IN case Dr. Furnish resigns the Senatorship to accept the Superintendency of the Lakeland Asylum, another nice Senatorial contest will be precipitated in this district composed of the counties of Boone, Gallatin and Owen, and Boone will probably have 2 or 3 politicians who will contest for the Democratic nomination. According to a resolution adopted at the last Senatorial convention held in the district, Gallatin and Owen will have no voice in the selection of the candidate to fill the vacancy.

DR. FURNISH will resign as State Senator to accept the superintendency of Lakeland Asylum, tendered him by Gov. Beckham. He expects to go to Lakeland as soon as he can get his business here in shape to leave it. The Doctor is a splendid physician, to whom the people here are very much attached, and they will be sorry to see him leave, at the same time recognizing that he is doing the best thing for himself. The position is worth $2,000 a year and everything furnished. The Governor has certainly made a wise selection for Superintendent of the Lakeland institution.

Many of our Republican cotemporaries, though of the strict party faith, have shown high character and independence in advising the President to return to the position he took in his annual message in favor of free trade with Puerto Rico. They have taken high ground for justice, and many of them have been sound and direct on the constitutional aspect of the question. Several times, when there has been a hope that their influence might prevail, and when Congress has seemed on the verge of reversal, the tariff barons and the trust agents have stepped in and warned the executive and legislative establishments of their impending wrath.—Enquirer.

Editorial Paragraphs.

John Bull has suddenly been struck by the idea that the Irish are good people to conciliate when there is fighting to be done.

o o o

And now Senator Beveridge has agreed to hold his free trade resolution in abeyance. Another case of "plain duty" gone wrong.

o o o

Well, after all, it might have been worse. The Porto Ricans can comfort themselve with the old adage "Wait, horse, till spring, and you'll get grass."

o o o

The war in the Philippines is over, of course. We know this because the administration told us long ago that it would be by this time. But ambuscades, casualties, captures and so on, continue with distressing frequency.

o o o

Great Britain fears a Russian coup in China. Consequently the United States fleet has been ordered to Chinese waters in preparation for antagonizing it. No harm is to be allowed to come to British interests there on account of the anti-liberty war in South Africa, if President McKinley can help it.

o o o

The long and short of the matter is that expansion in the Republican sense is not possible without imperialism. No one wants free intercourse with the Philippines, and unless Congress has the power to regulate this we must get rid of these islands by means of a protectorate or something of that sort.

o o o

In the opinion of the Supreme Court, Texas manages to manage the trusts without any particular difficulty. Yet the Republicans tell us that the United States is powerless to do so without an amendment to the Constitution, which will postpone all real consideration of the question until after the election this fall.

o o o

The platform of the Nebraska Democrats is generally accepted in Washington as the platform of the National Party, and is approved by nearly all the leaders. There is some slight objection to the referendum provisions, but nobody is particularly interested in this anyhow. Trusts and imperialism are the great features this fall, and on these the platform will commend itself to nearly all Democrats.

A case of pure extortion was recently crushed by a combination of western consumers. The binding twine trust put up prices on its commodity on the same excuse that the supply was short owing to the Philippine situation. But the consumers refused to buy at the increased price, and after a while the trust came down, reducing its rates 2 cents a pound, thus proving that it had tried to practice extortion.

Now it turns out that the United States Consul-General in South Africa, acting at the instance of President Kruger and Steyn, cabled to President McKinley previous to the Boer war, asking him to use his good offices to prevent hostilities, and that our noble President, who is so solicitous about unnecessary bloodshed, absolutely ignored the communication. It seems about time for Mr. Hay to explain.

The Foraker resolution forbidding the granting of franchises in Cuba, ought to have been extended to Alaska. Secretary Root has been granting exclusive franchises, under which the gold miners can be ousted from their claims along the beach at Cape Nome in favor of department pets. When the assertion was made in the Senate, even Republicans found it impossible of belief. But the Secretary confesses it.

THE junior Senator from Indiana heard from his constituents on the President's last Porto Rican policy, and he returned to the advocacy of the President's position set out in his "plain duty" message.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The Gasburg correspondent in his last communication to the RECORDER, got ugly and made just the kind of remarks you would expect of a man of his political temperament. If you can not see things his way you need not see them at all, but as he don't amount to anything in politics, very little attention is ever paid to him, and that causes him to vent his spleen on the late Gov. Goebel and his followers in this precinct.

We expect to show to the Democrats of Boone county that one Elijah, whose sir name is Parker, voted for the Republican candidate, Taylor, for governor at the last election, and that a number of years ago he voted for the Republican nominee for County Judge in preference to the regular Democratic nominee. To do this we will have to go back some 15 or 20 years, for he has been a chronic office seeker ever since we can recollect. But this particular time we want to call attention to, is when the Gasburg correspondent and the late L. H. Dills made the race for county clerk, and (as is usual with Parker when a candidate) Dills got nearly all the votes at the primary. This aroused Parker's political animosity towards Dills, and he waited for a time when he could even up with him for snowing him under so badly. The time came. After Dills' term of office expired as county clerk, he became a candidate for county judge and was the nominee of the Democratic party for that office. The Republican party nominated Mr. G. G. Hughes, a good lawyer and a clever gentleman. The records show that the Gasburg correspondent voted for Mr. Hughes, the Republican, against Mr. Dills, the regular Democratic nominee. This was before the secret ballot became a law. At the last election for State officers, when the Gasburg correspondent stepped outside the voting place Mr. J. M. Thompson said, "Well, you voted did you?" "Yes," said he, "I put in one for Taylor." A number of other persons standing around heard this remark, We have heard Mr. Parker say that he has no recollection of making this remark. We will give him the benefit of the doubt and let the public draw its own conclusions.

My being a rampant Hardin man originated in his disordered imagination, and if I ever in my life, denounced Goebel or any other Democrat, I have no recollection of it. This is a free country and every person has a perfect right to run for office, even the Gasburg correspondent. Probably at that time he had me mesmerized and in which event we were not responsible. He says he went to see me on Saturday before the mass meeting at Burlington, and I showed signs of weakening, in regard to what he imagined and thought was true. It he had stayed at home he would have had better luck. We wont follow after a leader whose banner is trailing in the mud. We do remember of his telling us that evening that there would be six or eight four-horse omnibuses along by our door on the morning of the mass meeting to haul the Hardin men to Burlington. They havent got here yet.

We never have said anything detrimental to Mr. Parker nor his party (Brown nor Taylor both the same), but on the contrayr, he is persistently denouncing the Democratic party and its followers in this precinct, and he invited this discussion two or three different times in the past.

A man's Democracy is measured by his steadfastness to the party, and it makes no difference whether I was for Goebel, Hardin or Stone in the mass meeting, I supported the nominee of the party. Did Bro. Gasburg do that? He says "no." Then he is a bolter—a Republican convicted by his own testimony, and from the tone of his article one would judge he has taken a course of political economy in some feeble-minded institute.

"The devil despises a turn-coat," says Elijah. If he knows that to be true he knows the opinion satan has had of him for the last 15 years or more. So far as "despising a turn-coat" is concerned, the devil and the Democratic party are in accord on that, Elijah, hence neither is in love with your political inconsistencies.

The Gasburg cor., knows, if he knows anything at all, that he is the little end of nothing whittled down to a sharp point, and should govern himself accordingly.

PETERSBURG COR.

EFFORTS to induce President McKinley to take a hand in the Kentucky muddle have so far failed most signally.

How to Grow Corn.

One wants to break the sod as early in the spring as the weather will permit. I think it will grow better corn if it is subsoiled. It is better not to plow it over six inches, if you do get the richest ground too far below to do much good to the corn. Then you should disk it once and harrow. This puts the ground in very fine order for corn. I can raise better corn that way than any I know. But good timber soil is just about as good for corn as sod, but it will not raise quite as much to the acre.

I think from the 1st to the 15th of May is the best time to plant corn, because the ground has become warm and there are no cold nights generally to keep it from growing. Of course we do have frosts in May but not very often. The warmer the weather the better corn grows. It should be planted from one to three inches deep, according to dampness of the ground. It should be checked as straight as possible so it can be plowed both ways. The corn should not be plowed over three times and those plowings done well. The first plowing you should plow as close to the corn as possible, and the first should be the deepest. The second plowing you should not plow quite so deep. The second plowing you should plow cross way of the field. The third plowing you plow the straight way and not very deep nor very close to the corn. I think the eagle claws are the best to plow corn with all the time, because they do not plow deep and tear the roots of the corn, and they do not ridge the rows up so they dry out. When you plow deep you give the water a chance to wash the dirt away from the roots, and often spoils the soil so it won't be good for corn. Corn should not be plowed when it is large.

I raise a kind of corn that is small cobbed and small stalked and extra large grains. It matures in from ninety to one hundred and ten days. The grain reaches the cob when you break an ear in two. The stalk does not grow over eight feet high and will produce two ears both of which together will yield from one to two thousand grains. The largest ear I ever raised had 1,600 grains on it. I can crib my corn ten to twenty days earlier than my neighbors can their big cobbed and large stalked corn.—Ex.

BEATS RURAL DELIVERY

The postmaster was hard at work at his desk when a slight noise caused him to raise his eyes, and he discovered a blushing maiden of 16 with a money order which she wanted cashed. She handed it with a bashful smile to the official, who after closely examining it, gave her the money it called for. At the same time he asked her if she had read what was written on the margin of the order.

"No, I have not," she replied, "for I cannot make it out. Will you please read it to me?"

The postmaster read as follows: "I send you $5 00, and a dozen kisses." Glancing at the bashful girl, he said. "Now I have paid you the money, I suppose you want the kisses?"

"Yes, she said. "If he has sent me any kisses, I want them too."

It is hardly necessary to say to those who are acquainted with Uncle Sam's officials that the balance of the order was paid in a scientific manner.

On reaching home the delighted maiden remarked to her mother: "Mother, this postoffice system of ours is a great thing, developing more every year, and each new feature seems to be best. Jimmy sent me a dozen kisses along with a money order, and John gave me 20. It beats the special delivery system all hollow."—Mardus News.

It has cost the nation more than $3,000,000 for President McKinley's special commissions, envoys, investigators, experts, secret emissaries and other strange and fearsome things since he came into office, and the end is not yet.

Some of them were necessary, and all have proved a most satisfactory method of paying off political debts. Nearly all of them have given excuse for fine junkets for something like a hundred favorites and the perquisites have made salaries very comfortable.

The Monetary Commission came first, which gave Senator Wolcott and his colleagues a pleasant European tour at a cost of $75,000, showing that they must have enjoyed themselves.

Most people have forgotten about William J. Calhoun, of Indiana, who appointed a Special Commissioner to Cuba during the last days of the Weyler regime, and who succeeded in spending $10,000, if he accomplished nothing else.

The Queen's Jubilee Commission cost $60,000, because General Miles and the others felt that a rich nation should spend money royally while attending a royal function.

Moses P. Handy's eloquence as Special Commissioner to the Paris Exposition cost $20,000.

As special adviser in treaties John A. Kasson has secured $30,000 from the Treasury, and he is still in office and able to draw money.

The first Philippine Commission cost the Government $200,000. Congress had no voice in the appointment of the three men who spent this large sum of money. Just try and think of what they accomplished. They brought back a map and some reports, of course.

Then came Charles A. Hamlin, who wanted to go to Japan, so he was sent to find out about the sealing controversy, and he spent $15,000.

"Calico Charley" Foster, of Ohio, did better. He took the Russian end of the sealing business, and held on until he had drawn $30,000 from the Treasury and was made a member of another commission, with a salary of $10,000 year.

The Peace Commission that negotiated the Spanish treaty cost $200,000, although only two members drew salaries as Commissioners.

It cost a little matter of $150,000 to coat Secretary Alger with whitewash.

The Cuban and Puerto Rican Evacuation Commission cost $50,000.

Comparatively cheap was the cost of the commission that represented the United States in the Peace Congress at The Hague, for the bills amount to only $35,000.

The Samoan Commission cost $50,000.

Less expensive was the Hawaiian Commission to report on a code of laws for the islands, still it cost $30,000.

Up to date the Joint High Commission to make a treaty with Canada has cost $200,000, and it is still drawing money, with the end not in sight.

The most expensive commission thus far is that appointed to investigate the Nicaragua Canal. It has spent $250,000, and discovered that while the canal can be built for $118,000,000, it should not be built just yet.

There is an Insular Commission, appointed at the request of Senator Allison, of Iowa, Senator Mark Hanna and Senator McMillian, that may have done something besides spending $50,000.

Robert P. Porter received $10,000 for going to Cuba as a tariff Commissioner.

Now the President has placed Judge William Taft, of Cincinnati, at the head of a second Philippine Commission that is likely to cost $200,000.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier, of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could hot stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble, purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c at W. F. McKim's, Burlington; J. G. Oelsner's, Florence; M. J. Crouch's, Union.

THE RECORDER.

BURLINGTON, : : KENTUCKY.

Boys in Nebraska carry, when hunting, a coil of hose about an inch in diameter, which they pay out down a rabbit hole until the bottom is reached, meanwhile drawing the mouth of a sack over the hole. A cheerful shout down the hose brings the rabbit out at his best pace, plump into the sack.

One of the latest German inventions is beer lozenges. These are made of the powder obtained by evaporating lager beer, and contains all the ingredients of this popular beverage. The only needful thing to turn them into a sparkling ale is to dissolve them in some water to which some carbonic acid gas has been added.

A porcelain factory in Graefenthal, Germany, has received an order from England for 5,000 dozen figures representing a wounded British soldier, with bandaged head, standing up erect, gun in hand, ready to face the approaching enemy despite his wounds. A second order is for a number of British sailors standing by their guns pointed at the enemy.

The care that the watches of railway men receive is shown in the regulations recently adopted by a western railway for its employes. Seventeen-jeweled watches are required. They must be inspected every three months and must be submitted to the inspector once a week for registration. No employe is permitted to set his watch or to change its movements unless it should chance to run down.

So rigorous is the news censorship in South Africa that one might easily believe Lord Roberts has adopted the plan chosen by Gen. Moltke during the Franco-Prussian war. The general one morning sent for a well known English correspondent and said: "Mr. Blank, on such and such a day the German army will make such and such a movement. If this appears in the paper you represent you will at once be shot!" The correspondent took the hint.

M. Picard, commissioner general of the 1900 exhibition, has been informed by the president of the jewelry section that an enormous diamond from Kimberley will be exhibited in the jewelry pavilion. The stone was found shortly before the war. It has been insured for $2,000,000, and will be exhibited in a show case guarded by four policemen. The new diamond is said to be finer than the Regent, the Shah, the Grand Mogul and the famous Koh-i-noor.

Over 100 miles of beach has been prospected at Cape Nome, Alaska, and yet no man may say where the golden sands begin or end. The formation of this beach country is precisely the same as that of the "bogs" in Ireland and Scotland. It is called the "Tundra." All along the surface is the marsh, filled with matted moss, which the Scotch and Irish call peat, and which may be dried and used for fuel, an important matter where timber is so difficult of access.

Among the wounded soldiers who arrived at Southampton the other day from South Africa was Private O'Leary, whose case was remarkable. He was shot in the head during the battle of Colenso. The bullet lodged in his brain, rendering him speechless, sightless and paralyzed. His life was despaired of, but Sir William MacCormac, president of the Royal College of Surgeons, who was acting as volunteer surgeon with the British army in South Africa, removed a portion of the wounded man's brain extracted the bullet, and O'Leary has since practically recovered.

American capital is very much in evidence in Mexico, and has been for some years, but not until a few weeks ago has any American ever had any voice in the government of the City of Mexico, where a large part of American capital is centered. The last elected to the city council is George Braniff, son of Thomas Braniff, reputed to be the wealthiest American in the republic of Mexico. The Yankee councilman is but 25 years of age, and is a large dealer in machinery. He was placed by the president of the council at the head of the committee of conches.

Judging from the reports of the registrar general of New Zealand, that fine martial race, the Maoris, is going the way of all aborigines whose country has been colonized by the whites. They may not become absolutely extinct for a few more decades, but their doom is sealed. Among the causes officially assigned for the thinning of their numbers are the high infantile mortality resulting from improper food, exposure and the want of ordinary care, constitutions debilitated by past debauchery, and the belief in native doctors and the neglect of the sick.

The Venture corporation, of London, has just made final payment to W. S. Stratton for his Independence mine, Cripple Creek, by a check for $6,500,000. A year ago, while in London, Stratton sold his mine for $10,000,000, of which $3,500,000 was paid down. The mine was staked by Stratton on July 4, 1891. The price of the company's stock places the value of the mine at $15,000,000. Stratton regards the sale of the mine as a mistake, believing he might have realized more than twice that sum from the output.

YELLOW FEVER PRECAUTION.

The State Board of Health of Florida Can Maintain an Independent Quarantine.

Washington, March 26.—The marine hospital officials are confident there need be no serious trouble growing out of the decision of the Florida state board of health to maintain an independent system of inspection and quarantine of vessels arriving from Cuba or other ports to prevent the introduction of yellow fever. The states have the right to impose such additional precautions as they may deem fit and proper to those prescribed by the national government to prevent the introduction of diseases, and this, it is presumed, will be the course adopted by the state of Florida if the decision of the board of health is carried out.

The disinfection and inspection of the marine hospital service, it is said, is complete and thorough, and the officials assert there is no basis for the allegation that the yellow fever epidemic of last summer was due to its negligence.

The point is made here that if the Florida board of health declines to receive certificates of inspection and disinfection issued by the marine hospital service and imposes additional restrictions of this character the state itself will be a sufferer by delays of shipments in its commerce and much embarrassment may result.

THREE FIREMEN KILLED.

First Floor of a Burning Factory Building Broke Down and the men Precipitated to Cellar.

New York, March 25.—Through the breaking down of the first floor in the factory building at 213 and 215 East Forty-fourth street, which was totally destroyed by fire Saturday, three firemen were killed and two injured. The men were precipitated into the basement, in which was about six feet of water, and pinned under the debris. It is supposed they were drowned.

The accident which caused the death of the men occurred two hours after the fire had been put out. The men, with about fifteen others, were engaged in washing down the walls on the first floor, on which was stored tons of machinery, tin, heavy timbers and pig lead. The great weight on the floor made it give way, and the men went down into the basement, in which was about six feet of water.

SEALERS RETURNING.

The Catch This Season Promises to Be the Largest Within the Past Twenty Years.

St. Johns, N. F., March 26.—The sealing steamer Leopard, which took shelter at Wesleyville, Saturday, in consequence of the storm, is due here, and other steamers are expected to arrive within the next few days.

Judging from reports thus far received, the total number of seals actually taken by the fleet is about 295,000, and the prospect is that, as four weeks of the fishing season have yet to run, this total will be increased by some 60,000.

As the entire catch last year was only 247,000, this year's figures promise to be the best within 20 years.

A DOUBLE LYNCHING.

O'Grady, a White Man, and Cotton, Colored, Murderers, Put to Death By Mobs.

Richmond, Va., March 25.—The negro who, with a white man, killed Justice of the Peace Saunders and Mr. Welton, at Skippers, Thursday, was, after an all-night chase, captured at Stoney Creek, Sussex county. He confessed to the shooting of Saunders and Welton and to several robberies. He is the notorious negro, Cotton.

The negroes of Granville Saturday lynched O'Grady, the white man who was with Cotton, the negro, when he killed Saunders and Welton. Cotton was lynched earlier in the day by a mob of white men.

Was Not Treated Discourteously.

City of Mexico, March 24.—El Tiempo, clerical organ, in a vehement article, denies that the Mexican episcopate showed any discourtesy toward the papal delegate, Archbishop Averardi, who recently left here with, as his friends asserted, a determination not to return.

Damages for Injuries.

Scranton, Pa., March 23.—John T. Martin, of Easton, Pa., in the United States district court was awarded damages of $55,500 against the Delaware & Hudson Railroad Co. for permanent injuries received by him in a railroad accident on April 4 last.

Secretary Long Dined.

Boston, March 25.—John D. Long, secretary of the navy, was the guest of the Middlesex club at the American house, which was observed as "veterans' night." Nearly 200 members of the club were present.

Brakeman Shot By a Tramp.

Brookhaven, Miss., March 26.—John Perkins, a freight brakeman, was shot and killed near this place by Moses Angeline, a tramp who was stealing a ride. Angeline is under arrest. Feeling runs high, and it is feared that a lynching will take place.

Will Increase Wages.

Charleston, S. C., March 26.—The York cotton mills, of Yorkville, this state, have announced that they will on next pay day take three per cent. from the annual dividend and add it to the wages of the operatives.

THE BOERS RALLYING.

Bloody Will Be the British Advance on the Transvaal Capital.

Their Army Has Been Weeded of the Half-Hearted Burghers—Latest From the Seat of the South African War.

London, March 25.—News from South Africa is most meager. Both sides, apparently, are preparing actively for the Transvaal campaign. It is evident that the Boers have rallied and regained some of their old spirit. It is believed their army has been weeded of half-hearted burghers. The Boers will probably fight to the last ditch, and the way to Pretoria, as a consequence, will be sanguinary.

A dispatch from Springfontein says a couple of the spirit which dominates the Boers. The dispatch reports that Commandant Vanderpost, with 500 Free Staters, is holding Fauresmith and has refused to surrender to a superior force of British troops. He sent word that he would resist to the death.

Commandant Olivier, with 3,000 men, is being pursued through the Southern Free State by the British. He may join Vanderpost.

It is estimated that 300 Boers still remain in the Southern Free State.

London, March 25.—Lord Roberts telegraphs to the war office from Bloemfontein, under date of March 23, evening, as follows:

"There is no special news to report. The country south of this place is generally settling down. Numbers of arms have been delivered up and the people are beginning to recognize the advantage of bringing in supplies for sale. The movement of the troops in the western district is being attended with good results."

Advices received here announce the death in the Maoi hospital Friday of Gen. Sir Edward Woodgate, who was wounded in the engagement at Spion Kop on January 24.

London, March 26.—Except for the "unfortunate occurrence," as Lord Roberts calls it, which resulted in the killing of Lieut. Lygon and the wounding and capture of Lieut. Col. Crabbe, Lieut. Col. Codrington and Capt. Trotter, the campaign presents no new features. The mishap to the guards officers is a testimony to their bravery, but not to their discretion. They met a party of five Boers whom they tried to capture. The Boers took refuge on a kopje where three of their comrades were hidden, and within five minutes every member of the British party was hit.

Apparently little progress is being made toward the relief of Mafeking. A private telegram from a lieutenant at Kimberley, dated Wednesday, March 21, announces that he was on the point of starting for Mafeking, presumably with the relief column. Gen. Sir Forrestier Walker and Prince Alexander of Teck have left Cape Town for Bloemfontein. It is reported from Ladysmith that Van Renan's Pass bristles with guns.

The total British losses, exclusive of the invalids sent home, are 16,413 in killed, wounded and missing.

London, March 25.—The Daily Mail publishes the following from Mafeking, dated Wednesday, March 14:

"We are still being heavily shelled. There have been several casualties. Skirmishing continues in the trenches. The native food question is becoming a difficulty. The Boers have broken the arrangement to respect the Sabbath by not firing, and have seized the opportunity to extend their trenches.

"We have received news of the relief of Ladysmith, but it serves to increase our disappointment, as there is no prospect of our relief. The town remains closely invested. The Boers are reported to be very numerous and strongly entrenched between us and Col. Plomer's force. Some of the natives are dying of starvation, owing to their prejudice against horseflesh."

Barkly West, March 24.—Griqua town was reoccupied Thursday by 400 Boers. A column left Kimberley yesterday afternoon to drive them out. It is reported that all the loyalists there, including two men, have been imprisoned.

An Overdose of Medicine.

Chicago, March 25.—E. H. Jones, who was found unconscious in an alley in the rear of 163 Dearborn street, and who died soon afterward at the county hospital, has been partially identified as a tobacco salesman from Pineville, Ky. No new facts as to the cause of his death have been learned. It is believed by the police that an overdose from a bottle of medicine, which was found in one of Jones' pockets, resulted fatally.

Berlin, March 26.—A combination of all the German zinc rolling mills has been formed here, and under the arrangement all goods are to be sold through a common agency.

RAILROADS IN CUBA.

A Canadian Syndicate Proposes to Get Control of All the Mileage and Make It Into One System.

Chattanooga, Tenn., March 25.—President T. G. Shaughnessy, of the Canadian Pacific railroad, accompanied by Directors R. B. McDougall, R. B. Angus, and C. R. Hosmer, are here en route home from Cuba. While here it was learned that these magnates have been in Cuba inspecting the railroads of the island with a view to obtaining control of all the railroad mileage and consolidating it into one system.

Sir William Vanllorne, of Montreal, it is said, has been conferring with Secretary Root about the proposed deal, and President Shaughnessy thinks it will be effected. In the event the deal is consummated, it is proposed to extend railroad lines through rich agricultural and mineral regions of the island, to fit up resorts for tourists, equip roads with new and modern rolling stock, and quicken the schedules.

Havana, March 26.—Gov. Gen. Wood has recently had interviews with persons of influence who have strenuously urged the taxation of valuable properties, rather than on each bag of sugar, as it is manufactured. Those who hold this view contend that under the present system improvements are throw in the way of production.

They point out that many valuable estates have been lying idle and unproductive for years, some even having complete sugar plants. The owners, who are rich men, are living in Paris, Madrid and other European cities, quite untaxed for their property in Cuba.

Gen. Wood feels that if these properties are taxed their owners will be forced either to sell or to make them productive.

FIFTY-FIVE LIVES SAVED.

Thirty Stranded Colonists and 25 Shipwrecked Seamen Landed in New York.

New York, March 26.—Among the passengers who arrived on the steamer Olinda from Cuban ports were 30 stranded colonists from Jatiboria and 25 shipwrecked seamen. Twenty of the latter are from the Norwegian steamer Frannes, which was swept ashore by currents on Hog Sty reef in the Bahamas on the night of March 21 and became a total loss as already reported. The crew landed on the reef with provisions and the chief officer and four seamen put off in a boat to go to Inagua for assistance. They were picked up by the steamer Adm. Schley and landed at Fortune island. The shipwrecked men were forwarded to this port by the Norwegian consul. Capt. Thorbjornsen stayed at Fortune island to look after the owners' intrests.

The other five shipwrecked seamen embarked at Nuevitas. They were from the American schooner Hattie Godfrey which was lost on Pomane reef while on the voyage from Baracoa to Havana. The schooner was a total loss.

REBELS AGGRESSIVE.

The American Forces Garrisoning the Town of Namaga Pacan Attacked By the Filipinos.

Manila, March 26.—La Patria and El Liberal, Spanish organs of the extreme Filipino party, have recently been publishing articles inimical to the military government. Gen. Otis has suppressed the former journal for sedition and imprisoned the editor, at the same time issuing a warning to the members of the extreme party that they should observe greater moderation.

Senor Paterno, at one time president of the so-called Filipino cabinet, having received permission from the authorities to come to Manila, is expected to present himself this week at San Fernando, province of Union.

The rebels in Gen. Young's district are becoming aggressive. The American battalion garrisoning the town of Namaga Pacan was attacked on four consecutive nights recently. Reinforcements are now arriving there. Gen. Young purposes to pursue the rebels aggressively before the rainy season sets in.

Horse Show in Chicago.

Chicago, March 25.—The National Horse Breeders', Dealers' and Exhibitors' association, now holding their annual meeting in this city, unanimously decided Friday night to revive the horse show in Chicago. The date will either be the last week in November, immediately after the New York horse show, or during the first week in December.

Unconscious When Found.

Chicago, March 25.—A man supposed from papers found in his pocket to be E. H. Jones, well dressed, and with $85 in his pocket, was found unconscious from the effects of supposed opium poison in the rear of a billiard academy on Dearborn street. He died without regaining consciousness.

Miners' Wages Advanced.

Washington, March 26.—Extensive preparations are being made at the United States naval observatory for photographing and observing the total eclipse of the sun, which occurs on May 28.

FIFTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

Washington, March 19.—Senate—Two measures of national importance were passed by the senate. The legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, carrying more than $25,000,000, was passed without debate. The measure providing for the appointment of a commission to adjudicate and report the claims of people of the United States growing out of the war with Spain was also passed without opposition. The Porto Rican government bill was then taken up and discussed until adjournment.

House—The house refused to concur in the senate amendments to the Porto Rican relief bill. The democrats supported a motion to concur in the senate amendments, but it would avoid further delay in extending relief to the inhabitants of the island. But the republicans stood firmly behind Chairman Cannon in his demand that the house should insist upon its original provision to appropriate not only the money collected on Porto Rican goods up to January 1, but all subsequent moneys collected or to be collected. The remainder of the day was devoted to District of Columbia business.

Washington, March 20.—Senate—Discussion of the Porto Rican government and tariff bill was resumed. Mr. Morgan, of Alabama, preceding a speech dealing with some of the constitutional phases of the measure, declared that, as a result of the treaty of Paris a part of the land it was impossible for the United States to abandon either Porto Rico or the Philippines. He held also, that the constitution extended to a certain extent at least over the acquired territory, and that the inhabitants of Porto Rico were citizens of the United States.

House—The house entered upon the consideration of the Lovering bill to restrict the character of publications entitled to pound rates as second class mail matter. The bill has been before congress for several years. Mr. Loud defended the bill in a brief speech. Before the bill was taken up Mr. Sulzer delivered a denunciation of the administration in connection with his resignation of inquiry calling upon the war department for information as to what fortifications Great Britain was erecting on the Canadian border. The committee on military affairs submitted a reply of Adjt. Gen. Corbin saying such information was secret, but that Great Britain was erecting no works which threatened our rights. The committee recommended that the resolution lie upon the table. The house sustained the committee's recommendation by a vote of 110 to 97.

Washington, March 21.—Senate—Upon the authority of the governor of Alaska, Mr. Turner made the statement that concessions for gold mining in the bed of the sea near Cape Nome, Alaska, had been granted by the secretary of war and upon that statement he based a resolution of inquiry. The resolution was agreed to. In a few minutes and without discussion the additional urgent deficiency bill was passed, with one or two other measures of no importance.

House—The entire session was taken up discussing the Lovering bill relating to second class mail matter. Mr. Loud has agreed to accept two amendments, one to preserve the sample copies which newspapers can send out at second class rates from 500 to 1,000 and the other to limit the sections requiring newspapers to separate their mail to those having in excess 5,000 circulation. These are all the concessions he will make. It is said the debate has strengthened the bill and he believes it will pass.

Washington, March 22.—Senate—Almost the entire session was spent in the discussion of the conference report upon the Porto Rican appropriation bill. Democratic senators manifested a disposition to criticise the restoration of the house provision covering future collections of revenue, professing to find in this action the desire to continue the Dingley tariff.

House—After a spirited discussion, extending over three days, the Loud bill relating to second class mail matter was recommitted to the committee on post offices by a vote of 148 to 96. The majority in favor of the motion to recommit was so decisive that it is regarded as unlikely that the measure will appear again during the present congress. Mr. Loud said after the vote was announced that this was the third time and out, so far as he was concerned.

Washington, March 23.—Senate—The senate adopted the conference report on the Porto Rican relief bill by a vote of 25 to 15, practically a strict party expression. No democrat voted for the report but Mr. Stewart voted with the republicans. The time of discussion was consumed principally by Mr. Tillman who made a fierce attack upon the measure as agreed upon by conference.

House—The house passed 142 private pension bills. Late in the day Mr. Talbert raised the point of no quorum. The attendance was small at the time but a quorum was finally secured, however, after a call of the house. The conference report on the Porto Rican relief bill was presented and 1 p. m. Saturday set as the time for voting on it.

Washington, March 24.—Senate—A bill was passed authorizing the president to appoint a commission to study and make full report upon the commercial and industrial conditions of Cuba and Porto Rico and appropriating $75,000 for the payment of the expenses of the commission. Mr. Fairbanks then presented a resolution accepting a statue of oliver P. Morton from the state of Indiana. Mr. Fairbanks then addressed the senate upon Mr. Morton's relations, his eloquent tribute to Gov. Morton being listened to with close attention by his colleagues and by many visitors in the galleries. Among those in the executive gallery were Mrs. Oliver P. Morton, relict of the dead statesman, and other relatives.

House—The conference report on the Porto Rican relief bill was passed by a vote of 225 to 87. A number of democrats voted for the report. The bill turned over to the president over $2,000,000 of customs receipts to be expended in Porto Rico. A bill was passed appropriating $10,000 for designs for a suitable memorial in Washington to Ulysses S. Grant, this being the first step in a movement to secure an arch similar to the Arch of Triumph in Paris, commemorating the Napoleons, soldier-statesman. A resolution was passed asking the secretary of state for information on the open door. The house then devoted itself to eulogies to the late Representative Epes, of Virginia. Resolutions of respect and eulogy were passed, and at 5:05 p. m., as a further mark of respect, the house adjourned.

He is a Nashville boy, and a son of the confederate general, B. F. Cheatham.

How a Little Boy Was Saved.

Washington, D. C.—"When our boy was about 16 months old he broke out with a rash which was thought to be measles. In a few days he had a swelling on the left side of his neck and it was decided to be mumps. He was given medical attendance for about three weeks when the doctor said it was scrofula and ordered a salve. He wanted to lance the sore, but I would not let him, and continued giving him medicine for about four months, when the lump broke in two places and became a running sore. Three doctors said it was scrofula, and each ordered a blood medicine. A neighbor told me of a case somewhat like our baby's which was cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. I decided to give it to my boy and in a short while his health improved and his neck healed so nicely that I stopped giving him the medicine. The sore broke out again, however, whereupon I again gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla and its persistent use has accomplished a complete cure." MRS. NETTIE CHASE, 47 K St., N. E.

One of Glen McDonough's Jokes.

In one of his farces Glen McDonough had written two or three lines to be spoken by a chorus girl. The lines were given to a green, heavy amateur, who looked well and would do. At the rehearsal the girl made her way to McDonough, who held the book, and said: "Mr. McDonough, I have a line in the first act and one in the third. Couldn't you write me one for the second act, too?" McDonough thought a minute, looked at the girl and said: "Yes; in the banquet scene you enter and say: 'Here is the ham.'" "Oh, do I bring the ham on with me?" "No, my dear; it is not a speech, it is a confession."—Chicago Chronicle.

GOLDEN'S TESTIMONY.

He Swears Secretary Powers Summoned Mountain Feudists.

Such Men Were to Be Brought Who Would Stand Up in the Legislative Hall and Kill Off the Democrats.

Frankfort, Ky., March 24.—The preliminary examination of Secretary of State Culch Powers, charged with aiding and abetting in the assassination of William Goebel, was begun before Judge Moore. The little, old-fashioned court house in which the examination took place was guarded inside and out by militia from Lexington and scores of deputy sheriffs armed with Winchester rifles to prevent possible interference from mountaineers, who were reported [illegible] way to Frankfort, but their presence was unnecessary, as the mountaineers failed to appear and no disorder occurred.

The witnesses heard included Warden Eph Lillard, of the state penitentiary; Detective Dee Armstrong, Sheriff Bosworth, of Fayette county, who arrested Secretary Powers and Capt. John Davis while the latter were attempting to escape from Frankfort, and Silas Jones, who is now under bonds, charged with complicity in the murder. The testimony given tended to show that the shots came from that section of the executive building in which Secretary Powers' office is located, although no one would swear that the shots were fired from the secretary's office.

Frankfort, Ky., March 25.—Secretary Powers was the only one of the defendants brought in court Saturday morning. Capt. Davis and Culton remained in jail. J. Wharton Golden, of Barbourville, was sworn as the first witness. He said he had known Secretary Powers for 17 or 18 years, also knew Mr. Culton. He was also acquainted with Gov. Taylor and Capt. John Powers. He said he was a good friend to all of the defendants. He was in Frankfort in January and February, and saw Secretary and John Powers nearly every day. He was in Frankfort on January 14, and went to Harlan county on the 16th, then went to Laurel county for two or three days, from there returning to Frankfort.

"When did you have a conversation with Secretary Powers?"

"When Mr. Powers and I left here together. Col. Powers told me to go to Harlan county and tell Postmaster John Hirst to send down ten witnesses in the contest case."

"He told me to go to Harlan county and tell Mr. Hirst to send down ten men who were regular mountain feudists.'

"Did he understand what you meant by that, and if so, what was your understanding of that request?"

Objected to, but overruled.

"I won't answer that," said Mr. Golden.

After some parley, Golden said: "Well, men who would stand up, and if necessary, go into that legislative hall and kill off enough to make it in our favor. I did not see Mr. Hirst. I saw Hamp Howard. I told him we wanted ten regular mountain feudists for witnesses. We wanted men who had good Colts forty-fives."

"When did you see Caleb Powers?"

"I saw him on Tuesday. I got on the train at Ferris station, Laurel county. He had a couple of men on the train named Pease and Locket. He told me to take care of them. I next saw Powers in Frankfort. I don't remember what conversation we had then."

"Who selected the men who came from Harlan county?"

"Hamp Howard. He selected 30 men besides the ten. Caleb Powers, I think, selected the men from Knox county. There were about 70 or 80. Jim Sparks, county attorney in Laurel county, selected the men from Laurel county."

"Who informed you they were wanted?"

"Caleb Powers. I saw him in London. Caleb said he wanted a regular army to come to Frankfort."

In answer to further questions, Golden said Powers gave him $100 to give to Judge Bingham in Bell county.

The witness identified a receipt for $50 given by Bingham. Witness also said he gave Mr. Howard $73.80 for ten tickets to Frankfort and return. He knew some of the men from Bell county. The men in good many of them were mountain feudists. In all about 1,200 or 1,500 men were brought to Frankfort. They were fed back of the state house, Capt. Davis and Charley Finley providing the provisions. Continuing, Golden said: "We sent most of them back that night. By 'we,' I mean myself, Caleb Powers, Capt. Davis, Bill Culton and Gov. Taylor. Finley, Taylor and Powers decided to send them back, all except ten or fifteen from each county. I selected the men to be kept from Knox county, 12 of them, well armed. Deputy Marshal George Thompson selected the men from Laurel county. About 175 men of the mountaineers brought to Frankfort remained here to see that we got justice."

"Did you have any further conversation with Powers regarding the work of to be done by the men remaining here?"

"No, sir; we understood what they were kept here for. We knew that those men were here to go into that legislative hall and if necessary clean out those fellows."

"What fellows?"

"The democrats; enough to make a majority on our side."

Golden said he was in the executive building on the day before the shooting. He met Caleb Powers in Gov Taylor's anti-room. Powers asked him to go to Louisville that day. He told John Powers that he was going to Louisville with Caleb Powers. During a lengthy argument over a technical point, Golden became ill and court was adjourned.

Golden resumed his testimony at the afternoon session. He said John Powers and a black-red moustached man had a talk concerning the closing of Secretary Powers' office during the latter's absence.

"I had my back turned," said Golden, "but when I turned I saw John Powers give the key to the man. John Powers said to me 'Goebel is going to be killed this morning.' I said, 'This must not be done.' He said, 'Don't get excited, I gave that man the wrong key.' I said, 'We must go and see Culch.' John Powers saw him, I did not."

"We all went back to the state house; I did not go to Louisville that morning, I can't say why."

"Did you have any talk with Caleb or John Powers about Dick Coombs?"

"No, but they had two negroes there to kill Goebel. John Powers told me so. They were Hockersmith and Dick Coombs. I saw Dick Coombs at the drugstore near the depot every morning for a week or so previous to the shooting. Coombs talking to a man named Wallace in my presence, said: "I—— him, I know him as far as I can see him and I can kill him as far as I can see him.' He was talking of Goebel. This conversation was in the adjutant general's office. He also said: 'I know his every movement, and I can hit him with this as far as I can see him.' He carried a Colt's 32 that shoots a Winchester cartridge, six or eight inches in the barrel. Coombs was in the assistant adjutant general's office on the morning of the shoting with Hockersmith and Jim Wallace. I saw the man who got the key from John Powers this morning. The fellow was a little man. When we (Caleb and John Powers and myself) went back there, he said: 'You have given me the wrong key.' I don't remember what John said to him. The rest of the day I was around town. No reference was made to the key the rest of the day. The key was to Caleb's office.

"On Tuesday did you meet Caleb and John Powers?" asked Attorney Campbell.

"Yes, I did. I saw them in Caleb's office. I got a letter from Blakeman that morning asking me to come to Louisville. Caleb said he was going with me, but said he might want me to go to the mountains. He was talking to Walter Day and Gov. Taylor. R. J. Howard, of Harlan county, came up and he talked to Taylor. He insisted on Taylor calling out the militia. Taylor said: 'My God, you people must do something first,' adding 'I can get the militia quick enough. You fellows must not first.' By that understand we fellows must raise a riot in the senate chamber. Goebel was there. As I told you this morning, we would clean out enough of that legislature there to make it our way."

"What do you mean by that?"

"Why, kill 'em."

After Taylor was through talking I urged Powers to get the train with me, as it was due. "I learned that Senator Goebel had been shot at Lagrange. We continued on to Louisville. I do not know why Mr. Powers went to Louisville. Both John and Caleb Powers were along. We left for Frankfort that afternoon and went directly to the state house. I never saw Mr. Powers again that day."

Attorney Cumphell then took the witness back, and Golden told of a conversation he had with Caleb Powers on the train in Laurel county previous to the shooting. "Caleb said," continued Golden, "d—— them, we've got them." I understand by that remark that we had democrats down here and we could do as we pleased after we got here."

Counsel for the defense strongly objected to this line of examination and the commonwealth withdrew it and announced that it was through with the witness. Golden, who was very weak from his hemorrhage, begged to be allowed a few minutes rest and he was accordingly taken out by a deputy sheriff.

Golden's illness proved more serious than at first thought and after half an hour's delay an adjournment was taken until 10 a. m. Monday.

Frankfort, Ky., March 26.—Notwithstanding troops recognizing the dual governors are quartered within two squares of each other, the republican troops at the state house, under orders from republican Gov. Taylor, and the democratic troops at the court house, guarding Prisoners Powers, Culton and Davis, under orders from democratic Gov. Beckham, there has been no clash. Republican Adjt. Gen. Collier and democratic Assistant Adjt. Gen. Murray were together for some time in conference. Gen. Collier called to disclaim responsibility for the mine which some of the soldiers made a pretense of laying, but it is understood their talk took on a wider scope and that they discussed and mutually agreed upon plans to avoid the possibility of any sort of clash between the troops.

The examining trial of republican Secretary of State Caleb Powers will be resumed. Sergt. F. Wharton Golden, who, it is alleged, turned state's evidence, will continue on the witness stand for cross-examination, his direct testimony having been completed Saturday. When he is through, Mrs. Golden, his wife, will be introduced as a witness for the prosecution, and it is reported that she will corroborate her husband's testimony on many important points.

STATE NEWS ITEMS.

POLITICIANS WORRIED.

Suit Was Brought to Decide a Bet, and the State Took all the Stake Money.

Williamstown, Ky., March 23.—Suit was brought in the grant quarterly court by B. H. Vest, Thomas A. Vest, Melvin Sams and Lucian Beach to recover an election bet made during the late campaign with Tobe Greenwell, D. A. Franks, Dr. J. F. Tomlin and others. The plaintiffs alleged that they had money to the amount of $110 wagered on the election of Goebel, and that the stakeholders, who were republicans, Dr. J. F. Tomlin being the principal one, had turned the money over to the republicans.

In his decision Judge Westover declared that the plaintiffs could not recover the money bet, but declared that all the money bet was forfeited to the state. The republicans, who had the money, immediately turned it all over to the court. He also informed all those connected with the wagers that they were liable to indictment at the next term of the grand jury.

Several parties in the case are quite prominent. Ben B. Vest was democratic candidate for county clerk at the last county election; Beach is a constable and D. A. Franks ran on the republican ticket for representative two years ago. Dr. Tomlin is one of the leading citizens of Mt. Zion.

The decision hes caused a good deal of comment here, as several other parties have been talking of bringing suit to recover election bets.

Longmire in holding the Lexington armory under Beckham's orders, has returned. In reference to the situation he said: "Since the regiment is not in action, I am not on duty and have received no orders. As long as only a battalion is under arms, orders must be issued direct to the major in charge. Maj. Morrow is in command."

As to Longmire's action Col. Williams said: "He is certainly acting without orders. His position is one of his own making. The contending governors must both recognize me as being in command of the 2d regiment, subject to orders from the adjutant general. I never received any orders from either of the adjutants general."

According to Col. Williams, Longmire's action was without authority, and a court-martial seems certain.

UNION, - - - - - - - - - - KENTUCKY.

VERONA, KY., March 24, 1900.
To the Editor of the Recorder:

To reply to J. H. Craven of March 3d. will you be kind enough to allow me space in your valuable paper? In the State of Kentucky we have at present 82 Elders, 600 members and are still adding to that. The president of our church issued a manifesto in 1890 that no more marriages should be solemnized of that kind. In 1893 it became a law in the United States, and in 1896 Utah was admitted in the union. As for us believing in many gods—read in Gen. 1:26-44, that He is the father of all; and as for Adam and Eve rejoicing, we find in Gen 3 "they went and hid from God in the garden, when they heard Him coming." So they did not rejoice very much when He (God) come in. Gen. 3:17-20, "man and woman was cursed, also serpent, Gen. 3:14. The 8th article of our faith says, "We believe the bible to be the Word of God as far as it is translated correctly." Where ever we find a contradiction there is one, are the others wrong? So in Matt. 27:5, Act. 1:18, Act. 9:7, Act. 22:9, and God is not the author of confusion. Many others could be referred to, but space will not allow it. We believe the Book of Mormon to be the Word of God, because it teaches the same doctrine as the bible speaks of it and if of the bible we ask no one to accept of false doctrine. But like our Master, "by our fruits judge us," as we are the youngest State in the union, and stand second in education and our Salt Lake choir, we think the best, took the second prize at the World's Fair, the first was taken off by the famous Welsh singers. If Mormonism is so corrupt, how is it, it prospers under persecutions? We bid you all investigate for yourselves our side, and then you can better judge, as Daniel says, "It is an unrighteous judge that will judge a matter before he hears both sides," and be like Paul "prove all things, hold fast onto that which is good."

Elder O. K. FREEMON.

Circuit Court.

Warsaw Independent:—W. T. Riddell vs L. E. Thomas, dismissed without prejudice.—James Harris, the negro who set fire to the barn of W. E. Crouch on Dry Creek, Christmas eve last, pleaded guilty and a jury fixed his punishment at six years in the penitentiary. This is his third term.—W. E. Crouch vs Jennie Peak continued. The cases of Oscar Smith, &c., and W. P. Crouch vs Jennie Peak were dismissed without prejudice. These cases are suits for damages sustained by the burning of the barn of W. E. Crouch, which they allege was instigated by Miss Peak.—F. F. Borchett, of Ohio, who robbed the store of Harvey Beall at Sugar Creek, was found guilty and a jury fixed his punishment at four years in the penitentiary. This is the second time he has been sent to the penitentiary, the previous time going for fourteen years from Ohio for horse stealing for which he was arrested in this county.—The case of the Commonwealth vs Myrix J. Castleman for killing Dr. George W. Ferrill at Glencoe, October 9th, was called and the Commonwealth made a strong effort to secure a change of venue to another county owing to the popularity of Mr. Castleman in this county, but the motion was overruled and the case was continued until the July term.

A Good Cough Medicine for Children.

"I have no hesitancy in recommending Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says F. P. Moran, a well known and popular baker, of Petersburg, Va. "We have given it to our children when troubled with bad coughs, also whooping cough, and it has always given perfect satisfaction. It was recommended to me by a druggist as the best cough medicine for children as it contained no opium or other harmful drugs." Sold by W. F. McKim, Burlington, Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, O. N. Grant, Bellevue, C. S. Baisly, Bullittsville.

The Burlington euchre club, which has been enjoying tri-weekly meetings since the first of last December, closed the season last Saturday night in a very appropriate and delightful manner with a banquet given at the Boone House.

The proprietor, and his assistants, demonstrated that they are equal to such occasions and served in excellent style a menu of four courses. The tables were handsomely decorated in pink and green.

About 8.30 the tables were arranged and 28 enjoyed the game until the hour of adjournment, when the voice of one expressed the sentiments of all: "I wish this were the beginning instead of the ending."

Those present were, Judge C. C. Roberts and wife, Sidney Gaines and wife, C. C. Hughes and wife, J. M. Lassing and wife, M. L. Riddell and wife, J. S. Clutterbuck and wife, Roy Clutterbuck and wife, S. W. Tollin and wife, Misses Inez Gaines, Olga Kirkpatrick, Mary Furlong, Katherine Furlong, Messrs. Hubert Gaines, M. T. Garnett, J. M. Eddins, J. A. Duncan, Kirb Tanner, A. B. Rouse, Hal Blanton, Glenn Dendall, B. B. Allphin, J. R. Clutterbuck, James L. Clore, Jack Sandford, Edwin Gaines.

One evening last week a bale of hay fell off of Bentler & Blyth's wagon between town and Houston's tollgate, as it was coming from the city. The bale was found next morning behind a brush pile in the hollow at the northwest corner of the cemetery. Some one was evidently taking advantage of the occasion to provide some provender for a cow or horse.

One of W. C. Brown's livery horses died very suddenly, last Sunday. Stant Kirtley, colored, was riding the mare, and when near Richard White's on the Bellevue pike he noticed something was the matter with her, and he dismounted, and the animal was dead in a few minutes. Mr. Brown had but recently purchased the mare from James A. Duncan.

A considerable quantity of neighborhood news on tap this week. Some of it will be found on the eighth page. A synopsis of Sageant Golden's testimony on the examining trial of Caleb Powers, at Frankfort, will be found on an inside page.

Hear that A. W. Smith is on a trade for Sam Hind's drug store in Walton. He has had considerable experience in that business, and is a good druggist.

A large area of this county is under canvass, and one would suppose that tobacco plants will be plentiful.

The sheriff and his deputy are hustling up their business for the next term of circuit court.

DUTIES OF PARENTS.

Dr. Talmage's Advice on the Bringing Up of Children.

The Dangers and Temptations Which Surround the Young—Necessity of Wise Training—Responsibility of Mothers.

This discourse of Dr. Talmage will interest young men, while it is full of advice and encouragement to parents who are trying to bring up their children aright; text, Proverbs, 10, 1: "A wise son maketh a glad father; but a foolish son is the heaviness of his mother."

In this graphic way Solomon sets forth the idea that the good or evil behavior of children blesses or blights the parental heart. I know there are persons who seem to have no especial interest in the welfare of their children. The father says: "My boy must take the risks I took in life. If he turns out well, all right; if he turns out ill, he will have to bear the consequences. He has the same chance that I had. He must take care of himself." A shepherd might just as well thrust a lamb into a den of lions and say: "Little lamb, take care of yourself."

Nearly all the brute creation are kind enough to look after their young. I was going through a woods, and I heard a shrill cry in a nest. I climbed up to the bird's nest, and I found that the old bird had left the brood to starve. But that is a very rare occurrence. Generally a bird will pick your eyes out rather than surrender her young to your keeping or your touch. A lion will rend you if you come too near the whelps; even the barnyard fowl, with its clumsy foot and heavy wing will come at you if you approach its young too nearly, and God certainly intended to have fathers and mothers as kind as the brutes.

Christ comes through all our households to-day, and He says: "You take care of the bodies of your children and the minds of your children. What are you doing for their immortal souls?" I read of a ship that foundered. A lifeboat was launched. Many of the passengers were in the water. A mother with one hand beating the waves and the other hand holding her little child out toward the lifeboat, cried out: "Save my child!" And that impassioned cry is the one that finds an echo in every parental heart in this land today. "Save my child!" That man out there says: "I have fought my own way through life. I have got along tolerably well. The world has buffeted me, and I have had many a hard struggle. It doesn't make much difference what happens to me, but save my child." You see, I have a subject of stupendous import, and I am going, as God may help me, to show the cause of parental solicitude and then the alleviations of that solicitude.

The first cause of parental solicitude, I think, arises from the imperfection of parents on their own part. We all somehow want our children to avoid our faults. We hope that if we have any excellencies they will copy them, but the probability is they will copy our faults and omit our excellencies. Children are very apt to be echoes of the parental life. Some one meets a lad in the back street, finds him smoking, and says: "Why, I am astounded at you. What would your father say if he knew this? Where did you get that cigar?" "Oh, I picked it up on the street." "What would your father say and your mother say if they knew this?" "Oh," he replies, "that's nothing. My father smokes." There is not one of us to-day who would like to have our children copy all our example. And that is the cause of solicitude on the part of all of us. We have so many faults we do not want them copied and stereotyped in the lives and characters of those who come after us.

Then solicitude arises from our conscious insufficiency and unwisdom of discipline. Out of 20 parents there may be one parent who understands how thoroughly and skillfully to discipline; perhaps not more than one out of 20. We, nearly all of us, err on one side or on the other. Here is a father who says: "I am going to bring up my children right. My sons shall know nothing but religion, shall see nothing but religion, and hear nothing but religion." They are routed out at six o'clock in the morning to recite the Ten Commandments. They are wakened up from the sofa on Sunday night to recite the Westminster catechism. Their bedroom walls are covered with religious pictures and quotations of Scripture, and when the boy looks for the text of the month he looks for it in a religious almanac. If a minister comes to the house, he is requested to take the boy aside and tell him what a great sinner he is. It is religion morning, noon and night.

Time passes on, and the parents are waiting for the return of the son at night. It is nine o'clock, it is ten o'clock, it is 11 o'clock, it is 12 o'clock, it is half-past 12 o'clock. Then they hear a rattling of the night key, and George comes in and hastens upstairs lest he be accosted. His father says: "George, where have you been?" He says: "I have been out." Yes, he has been out, and he has been down, and he has started on the broad road to ruin for this life and ruin for the life to come, and the father says to his wife: "Mother, the Ten Commandments are a failure. No use of Westminster catechism. I have done my very best for that boy. Just see how he has turned out." Ah! my friend, you stuffed that boy with religion. You had no sympathy with innocent hilarities. You had no common sense. A man at midlife said to me: "I haven't much desire for religion. My father was as good a man as ever lived, but he jammed religion down my throat when I was a boy until I was disgusted with it, and I haven't wanted any of it since." That father erred on one side.

Then the discipline is an entire failure in many households because the father pulls one way and the mother pulls the other way. The father says: "My son, I told you if I ever found you guilty of falsehood again I would chastise you, and I am going to keep my promise." The mother says: "Don't. Let him off this time."

Now the father and mother are waiting for the son to come home at night. It is 12 o'clock, it is half-past 12 o'clock, it is one o'clock. The son comes through the hallway. The father says: "My son, what does all this mean? I gave you every opportunity. I gave you all the money you wanted, and here in my old days I find that you have become a spendthrift, a libertine and a sot." The son says: "Now, father, what is the use of your talking that way? You told me to go it, and I just took your suggestion." And so to strike the medium between severity and too great leniency, to strike the happy medium between the two and to train our children for God and for Heaven is the anxiety of every intelligent parent.

Some go to work and try to correct all this, and the boy is picked at and picked at and picked at. That always is ruinous. There is more help in one good thunderstorm than in five days of cold drizzle. Better the old-fashioned style of chastisement if that be necessary than the fretting and the scolding which have destroyed so many.

There is also a cause of great solicitude sometimes because our young people are surrounded by so many temptations. A castle may not be taken by a straightforward siege, but suppose there be inside the castle an enemy, and in the night he shoves back the bolt and swings open the door. Our young folks have foes without, and they have foes within. Who does not understand it? Who is the man here who is not aware of the fact that the young people of this day have tremendous temptations?

Some man will come to the young people and try to persuade them that purity and honesty and uprightness are a sign of weakness. Some man will take a dramatic attitude, and he will talk to the young man, and he will say: "You must break away from your mother's apron strings. You must get out of that puritanical straightjacket. It is time you were your own master. You are verdant. You are green. You are unsophisticated. Come with me: I'll show you the world. I'll show you life. Come with me. You need to see the world. It won't hurt you." After awhile the young man says: "Well, I can't afford to be odd. I can't afford to be peculiar. I can't afford to sacrifice all my friends. I'll just go and see for myself." Farewell to innocence, which once gone never fully comes back. Do not be under the delusion that because you repent of sin you get rid forever of its consequences. I say farewell to innocence, which once gone never fully comes back.

Oh, how many traps set for the young! Styles of temptation just suited to them. Do you suppose that a man who went clear to the depths of dissipation went down in one great plunge? Oh, no! At first it was a fashionable hotel. Marble floor. No unclean pictures behind the counter. No drunken hiccough while they drink, but the click of cut glass to the elegant sentiment. You ask that young man now to go into some low restaurant and get a drink, and he would say: "Do you mean to insult me?" But the fashionable and the elegant hotel is not always close by, and now the young man is on the down grade. Further and further down, until he has about struck the bottom of the depths of ruin. Now he is in the low restaurant. The cards so greasy you can hardly tell who has the best hand. Gambling for drinks. Shuffle away, shuffle away. The landlord stands in his shirt sleeves, with his hands on his hips, waiting for an order to fill up the glasses.

The clock strikes 12—the tolling of the funeral bell of a soul. The breath of eternal woe flushes in that young man's cheeks. In the jets of the gaslight the fiery tongue of the worm that never dies. Two o'clock in the morning, and now they are sound asleep in their chairs. Landlord comes around and says: "Wake up, wake up! Time to shut up!" "What?" says the young man. "Time to shut up?" Bush them all out into the night air. Now they are going home. Going home! Let the wife crouch in the corner and the children hide under the bed. What was the history of that young man? He began his dissipations in the barroom of a Fifth avenue hotel and completed his damnation in the lowest groggshop.

Sometimes sin does not halt in that way. Sometimes sin even comes to the drawing-room. There are leprous hearts sometimes admitted in the highest circles of society. He is so elegant, he is so bewitching in his manner, he is so refined, he is so educated, no one suspects the sinful design, but after awhile the talons of death come forth. What is the matter with that house? The front windows have not been opened for six months or a year. A shadow has come down on that domestic hearth, a shadow thicker than one woven of midnight and hurricane. The agony of that parent makes him say: "Oh, I wish I had buried my children when they were small!" Loss of property? No. Death in the family? No. Madness? No. Some villain, kid-gloved and diamond-oil, lifted that cup of domestic bliss until the sunlight struck it and all the rainbows played around the rim and then dashed it into desolation and woe, until the harpies of darkness clapped their hands and all the voices of the pit uttered a loud "Ha, ha!"

The statistic has never been made up in these great cities of how many have been destroyed and how many beautiful homes have been overthrown. If the statistics could be presented, it would freeze your blood in a solid cake at your heart. Our great cities are full of temptations, and to vast multitudes of parents these temptations become a matter of great solicitude.

But now for the alleviations. First of all, you save yourself a great deal of trouble, O parent, if you can early watch the children and educate them for God and Heaven. "The first five years of my life made me an infidel," said Tom Paine. A vessel puts out to sea, and after it has been five days out there comes a cyclone. The vessel springs a leak. The helm will not work. What is the matter? Is it not seaworthy? Can you mend it now? It is too late. Down she goes with 250 passengers into a watery grave. What was the time to fix that vessel? What was the time to prepare it for the storm? In the drydock. Ah, my friends, do not wait until your children get out into the world, beyond the Narrows and out on the great voyage of life. It is too late then to mend their morals and their manners. The drydock of the Christian home is the place. Correct the sin now, correct the evil now.

Begin early with your children. You stand on the banks of a river and you try to change its course. It has been rolling now for 100 miles. You cannot change it. But just go to the source of that river, go to where the water just drips down on the rock. Then with your knife make a channel this way and a channel that way, and it will take it. Some one and another on the banks of your child's life when it was 30 or 40 years of age, or even 20, and try to change the course of that life. It is too late! It is too late! Go farther up at the source of life and nearest to the mother's heart, where the character starts, and try to take it in the right direction. But, oh, my friend, be careful to make a line, a distinct line, between innocent hilarity on the one hand and vicious proclivity on the other. Do not think your children are going to ruin because they make a racket. All healthy children make a racket. But do not laugh at your child's sin because it is smart. If you do, you will cry after awhile because it is malicious. Remember it is what you do more than what you say that is going to affect your children. Do you suppose Noah would have got his family to go into the ark if he stood out? No. His sons would have said: "I am not going into the boat. There's something wrong. Father won't go in. If father stays out, I'll stay out." An officer may stand in a castle and look off upon an army fighting, but he cannot be much of an officer, he cannot excite much enthusiasm on the part of his troops standing in a castle or on a hilltop looking off upon the fight. It is a Garibaldi or a Napoleon I. who leaps into the stirrups and dashes ahead. And you stand outside the Christian life and tell your children to go in. They will not go. But you dash on ahead, you enter the kingdom of God, and they themselves will become good soldiers of Jesus Christ. Lead if you would have them follow. Have a family altar. Do not with long prayers wear out your children's knees. Do not have the prayer a repulsion. If you have a piano or an organ or a melodeon in the house, have it open while you are having prayers. If you say: "I cannot construct a prayer; I am slow of speech and never could construct a prayer," then take Matthew Henry's prayers, or take the Episcopal church prayer book. There is nothing better than that. Put it down on the chair, gather your children about you and commend them to God. You say it will not amount to anything. It will, long after you are under the soil. That son will remember father and mother at morning and evening prayers, and it will be a mighty help to him. And above all, in private commend your children to God. Say: "Here, Lord, I am—all my imperfections of discipline and government—here are these immortals—make them thine forever. The angel that redeemeth us from all evil, bless the lads."

Are your children safe? I know it is a stupendous question to ask, but I must ask it. Are all your children safe? A mother when the house was on fire got out the household goods, many articles of beautiful furniture, but forgot to ask until too late: "Are the children safe?" When the elements are melting with fervent heat and God shall burn the world up and the cry of "Fire, fire!" shall resound amid the mountains and the valleys, will your children be safe?

I wonder if the subject strikes a chord in the heart of any man who had Christian parentage, but has not lived as he ought? God brought you here this morning to have your memory revived. Did you have a Christian ancestry? "Oh, yes," says one man, "if there ever was a good woman, my mother was good." How she watched you when you were sick! Others wearied, if she got weary, she nevertheless was wakeful, and the medicine was given at the right time, and when the pillow was hot she turned it. And, oh, then when you began to go astray what a grief it was to her heart!

All the scene comes back. You remember the chairs, you remember the table, you remember the doorsill where you played, you remember the tones of her voice. She seems calling you now, not by the formal title with which we address you, saying: "Mr." this or "Mr." that or "Honorable" this or "Honorable" that. It is just the first name, your first name, she calls you by this morning. She bids you to a better life. She says: "Forget not all the counsel I gave you, my wandering boy. Turn into paths of righteousness. I am waiting for you at the gate." Oh, yes. God brought you here this morning to have that memory revived, and I shout upward the tidings. Angels of God, send forward the news! Ring! Ring! The dead is alive again, and the lost is found!

MR. M'SWAT AS A COOK.

Notwithstanding Explicit Instructions He Makes a Dismal Failure of It.

The McSwat household was thrown into temporary confusion by the sudden adjournment, sine die, of the kitchen lady, a young woman of great force of character, who had learned of a place where the hours of work were shorter and the afternoons out longer and more frequent, and had gone to fill it.

"Now, Lobella," said Mr. McSwat, as they were preparing to retire for the night, "if your headache isn't any better in the morning don't you hurry about getting up. I can manage the breakfast."

"You!" exclaimed Mrs. McSwat, with the contempt that every experienced housewife feels for the meddlesome masculine being who seeks to thrust himself into the affairs of the domestic cook-shop. "You! Why, Billiger, you don't know any more about cooking a breakfast than an old hen!"

"I'll show you," he retorted. "We have buckwheat cakes every morning, don't we? Well, you tell me how to manage them, and if I don't turn out as good an article of buckwheat cake as you ever put into your system I'll eat the griddle. What is the first thing you do?"

"Well, if you are bound to try your hand at it—but you've got to promise one thing. Will you do exactly what I tell you?"

"Of course I will. What do you take me for?"

"Then the first thing you do after you have got your fire all ready is to prepare the batter. It's in the stone jar on the kitchen table. There's always some left over after breakfast, and it leavens the batter for the next morning. Understand that?"

"Anybody can understand that. Go on."

"Well, I've fixed it for to-morrow morning. All you will have to do will be to thin it, put in a little soda, salt, and New Orleans molasses—"

"What is the molasses for?"

"To make the cakes brown nicely, stupid."

"Don't you call names, madam. What else?"

"Have your griddle on the fire. You'll find the greaser in the little saucedish by the batter jar. Don't use too much grease—"

"How do I thin the batter?"

"I hadn't forgotten that. You take a cup of warm water—not hot, remember—stir in a small teaspoonful of soda, about the same quantity of salt, pour it in the batter, stir it slowly a minute or two, add the molasses—that's in a fruit jar in the pantry—and then bake a trial cake. If it lacks anything you can tell what it is from the way it tastes. Can you remember all that?"

"Remember all that!" said Mr. McSwat, with crushing disdain. "Do you call that anything to remember?"

"There's one thing more. You'll need the cake turner. It's in the drawer of the kitchen table. Now do you think manage it?"

His only reply was a soft snore.

About 6:30 the next morning Mr. Billiger McSwat might have been seen in his great act of getting the breakfast.

He lighted the gas range, hunted up the griddle, put it over the fire, and approached the jar of batter.

Rolling up his sleeves he contemplated it in silence a moment, and then began business.

The first thing he did, after hunting up the necessary groceries in the pantry and greasing the griddle, was to fill a teacup with water from the boiler, which, providentially, was still warm, and stir in a heaping tablespoonful of soda.

"I think that's the quantity she prescribed," he said, cheerfully. "If it isn't enough I can put in more."

Then he added a tablespoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of the New Orleans molasses and poured the mixture into the batter jar.

He stirred the batter fiercely. It foamed up at once and ran out over the top of the jar.

"She mixed up too much of the blamed stuff," he muttered, stirring it still more vigorously.

By this time the kitchen was filling with smoke.

Concluding that the griddle was hot enough he hastily lifted the jar, carried it to the stove and poured a quantity of the batter out on the smoking griddle through the spout on the side of the jar.

There was a tremendous sizzle.

"You bet it's hot enough!" he exclaimed. "Now where's the blooming cake turner?"

He could not find it.

"Never mind," he said. "I've seen my mother use a caseknife."

When he had secured a caseknife it appeared to be high time to turn the cake. On the upper side it looked dry and yellowish. But the cake stuck. He sawed the knife under it with desperate haste, however, and finally got it over in sections—a blackened, frazzled, discouraging semblance of a buckwheat cake.

"I don't believe it needs any cooking on that side," he said, scraping it off the griddle and slapping it on a plate.

"This," he continued, with a ferocious grin, "is the trial cake' she was talking about."

He tasted it.

"Ye gods!"

It was all he said.

And then Mr. McSwat took that jar of buckwheat batter, carried it out to the alley and emptied it into the garbage box.

Five minutes later he appeared at the foot of the stairway running up from the front hall.

"Lobella," he yelled, "that batter of yours got spoiled last night! I'm going to the meat market for a steak."—Chicago Tribune.

THE PRESIDENT'S POLICY.

Attitude of the Administration Towards Our New Possessions.

Mr. Henry Loomis Nelson is so well known as a careful, conscientious and intelligent journalist that his "interpretations" of the president's "colonial" policy in the Sunday Post-Dispatch may be accepted as authoritative. Mr. McKinley talked freely, wisely choosing this as the best way of getting his views before the country.

The president's announcement is the most important political utterance since the establishment of the government, except, perhaps, the emancipation proclamation. It is revolutionary.

"The president believes that congress has plenary power over Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippines."

That is, in governing the colonies, congress is not restrained by any constitutional limitations. It is absolute.

Further, congress "may refuse to the natives (of Porto Rico, Hawaii [illegible] and to the American citizens who may go to our colonies the right of jury trial, the right of free speech, the right to bear arms, the right of peaceable assemblage and of petition."

The president's conclusions are not the result of legal inquiry or judicial study. They are the product of partisan necessity.

"Our new possessions must not be permitted to injure any of our protected interests."

This doctrine, though revolutionary, is not new or strange. The Roman republic conquered foreign peoples and governed them for the benefit of Rome and Romans. Mr. McKinley proposes to do the same thing—to govern the people of Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Filipinos without reference to their welfare, but primarily for the commercial benefit of Americans, and in order to accomplish this he proposes to repudiate every principle of American policy and give the lie to every American principle.

What will the people of this country say to this?—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

FARMERS AND TRUSTS.

The Issue That Most Concerns the Producers of Our Necessaries.

That the trusts directly affect the producers of the country, particularly the farmer, is so plain that a blind man can perceive it. This is the way Judge George W. Beeman, of Indiana, puts it:

"The farmers of this country are the people who are most and more directly affected than any other proportion of the electors.

"The farmer is affected as a producer and as a consumer. He goes to bed at night with prices about as follows: Wheat, 70 cents; corn, 25 cents; pork, $4.50 per hundred; barb wire, two dollars; nails, two dollars per hundred; and well pipe 2½ cents per foot.

"He awakes in the morning with prices about as follows: Wheat, 65 cents; corn, 23; pork, $4.25; barb wire, five dollars; nails, four dollars; well pipe, 20 cents.

"His house has not been burglarized, but he has been robbed by trusts which are a multiple of thieves by robbers, and there is something strange about the report of prices; if the price of wheat goes down it travels by telegraph, if the price goes up the report goes by canal, but the farmer regardless of party affiliation, if properly educated as to the effect of trusts on his interests, will make it possible to return to the legislatures and congress a majority of representatives who will be honest and patriotic enough to enact laws that will control the trusts and we will be safe in leaving the manner of control and regulation of trusts in the hands of such chosen representatives.

"Only the blind can fail to realize what the real issue now is, whether the trusts and corporations should rule the government or the government regulate and control trusts and corporations."

McKinley and Lincoln.

On Lincoln day, 1900, William McKinley sent the following congratulatory dispatch to the Chicago imperialists:

Each succeeding year our citizens have seen with clear vision how great was Lincoln's contribution to the forces which make for the welfare and perpetuity of the nation, and every occasion which commemorates his life is an incentive to patriotic service. Accept my best wishes for a most successful and inspiring meeting this evening.

WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

In 1865, just after the civil war, Abraham Lincoln uttered the following prophecy, which is being fulfilled by William M. Kinley and his imperialistic followers:

"I see in the near future a crisis arising that nunerves me and causes me to tremble for the safety of my country. As a result of the war, corporations have been enthroned, and an era of corruption in high places will follow, and the money power will continue to sway by appealing to the prejudices of the people, until all wealth is aggregated in a few hands and the republic destroyed. I feel more anxious for the safety of my country than ever before, even in the midst of the war."

——It is to be remarked, by the way that the republicans these days, with their subsidy steal scheme, with their proposition to tax Porto Rico without representation and to erect a tariff between that island and the rest of the country, with their plan to admit the unsavory Quay into the senate, in violation of the precedents of a century, with their cowardly sop to bimetallism in the financial bill, and with their neglect to take any position on the trust question, are making lots of capital for the democrats.—Indianapolis News (Ind.)

PHILANTHROPY MISDIRECTED.

Strained and Revolutionary Interpretation of the American Constitution.

The nation is flooded with a deluge of moral advice from the pulpit, the academy and the writing itch of reformers. Everybody holding a salaried office, and possessing an influence of any kind from a policeman up to the president is wrested with, advised, and crammed with large doses of duty to morals, fellowmen, heathen, cats, dogs, and horses, etc., but all of it is useless, a waste of breath, jaw muscle and general physical energy. What boots all this moral and philanthropic overflow of cranky empiricism, or, may be, well directed and honest effort to abate human ills and lift man out of his wallow? "Suppose," says the Springfield Republican, "that Lyman Abbott favored free trade with Porto Rico, would his protest against the present policy avail anything? The Independent, as godly and benevolent of militant imperialists, pronounces the proposed Porto Rican tariff a wicked thing, but what does the Independent amount to now that the real power behind the throne of empire has spoken in tones that made a whole government retrace its course like some toy pulled by a string?"

In all this the country is witnessing a remarkable display of the grip which the overwhelming power of trade interests, of money, has upon the United States government. There is nothing, apparently, which it cannot do, short of establishing an hereditary monarchy upon the ruins of the old republic. Philanthropy could never have compelled this discrimination between Hawaii and Porto Rico; nor have forced the administration party to set up a strained and revolutionary interpretation of the scope of the American constitution. But the syndicates can."

RAMPANT IMPERIALISM.

How the Administration Proposes to Deal with the Philippine Acquisitions.

Representative Charles Henry Grosvenor, of Ohio, is the president's particular friend, so close to him in fact that he is Mr. McKinley's mouthpiece. This is the way Mr. Grosvenor throws overboard the people of the United States as of no account in the imperial policy: He spoke in the house and it is fair to say that he was very much annoyed at the trend of certain decisions by the supreme court against the president's policy:

"We have got the Philippines on our hands," said he, "and I will tell you what we shall tell the people of this country. We will say we have acquired title to the Philippines and Porto Rico. We did not go after them, but they came to us and we could not help ourselves.

"We have got them and the duty is upon us, and we are going to take care of them.

"We are going to make all the money out of the transaction we can by enlarging our trade with the Oriental countries, and we are going to embalm the doctrines of the Declaration of Independence upon the statute books of the Philippines, just as quick as we think the time has come to do it, and we are not going to do it one minute before, if all the democrats on God's earth go howling that we have got to do it now."

When Representative Neville, of Nebraska, asked if the republican party "expected to embalm the Filipinos along with the Declaration of Independence in the Philippines," Mr. Grosvenor became so mad he had to sit down.

PARAGRAPHIC POINTERS.

——It was something similar to our treatment of Porto Rico that led to a tea party in Boston a great many years ago.—Rochester Herald.

——If the "protection principle is to be preserved," why not levy a little tariff on Hawaiian products just for an object lesson?—Indianapolis News.

——Mr. Hanna doesn't know what to make of the fuss the republicans are kicking up over Porto Rico. And, in point of fact, he doesn't care one way or the other, so long as he can keep the senate in line.—Atlanta Constitution.

——Between his free-trade Porto Rican message to congress and his confidential pressure on congressmen to make them vote for a Porto Rican tariff tax, President McKinley stands in a sorry light before the people.—St. Louis Republic.

——"Trusts, imperialism, militarism, national bank notes instead of the money of the constitution, gold and silver, these are the issues being presented to the country by the republican party. Democracy is ready to meet them and to beat them. Mammon won the last time, but it will not be so easy to do so again.—Kansas City Times.

——When administration organs come forward courageously to tell us that "the war is over" they probably mean that it is over in the Philippines. It has been over there ever since McKinley purchased it from Spain—but there will be some of it in the United States along about the first Tuesday in November.—Columbus (O.) Press-Post.

——The national administration claims it has not surrendered to Great Britain, but there are several things that look as though it had. Great Britain dictates our financial policy. She dictates our colonial policy. She opens the mail of some of our consuls. She will not allow us to fortify our Nicaragua canal, and the administration agrees to it. There isn't much else to surrender, but the lovely British administration at Washington will no doubt hasten to surrender everything it can and that has not been surrendered.—Joplin (Mo.) Globe.

Teeth Made from Paper.

Teeth of papier mache are the latest in dentistry. By a peculiar process they are rendered better than any other material. Paper teeth may be fine, but we will venture that most people prefer their own, and this may best be accomplished by keeping the stomach healthy with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The condition of the stomach invariably affects the teeth. The Bitters will strengthen your stomach, cure dyspepsia and biliousness.

No Wonder He Smelled It.

A commercial traveler whose wife is one of those women who borrow trouble indiscriminately had occasion to make a trip east recently.

His wife was very anxious about him and felt certain that he would fall a victim to smallpox, which was reported to be prevalent in the city to which he was going. She begged him to carry a little lump of asafetida in his pocket to ward off contagion.

Naturally he objected and positively refused to be made the permanent abode of such a persistent odor.

When he came home from his trip he said to his wife:

"It is wonderful, the power of the imagination. Why, don't you know I imagined that I smelled asafetida the whole time I was gone!"

"It wasn't imagination at all," quietly replied the wife. "little woman. I sewed a bit of asafetida in the corner of your coat before you went away!"—Memphis Scimitar.

LIGHT.

The very first requirement of the primitive man is food, the next, clothing, the next shelter and then he passes from the requirements of the purely animal body to those of a little higher, plane and demands light and heat and companionship. In the process of evolution the very first evidence of a development beyond the animal stage, in which man was a carnivorous beast of prey, killing and devouring, raw, animals less strong than himself, was the employment of fire for heat, for light, and later for cooking.

It is strange that nature should have so fashioned adult man that he cannot pass as much of the time in sleep as she has given over to darkness, and it is to correct this fault in his structure that for all time man has devoted a large part of his energies towards prodneing means for artificial illumination which would lengthen the day and shorten the night.

The demand for light is as natural a demand as that for food. An evidence of the fact that this is a natural demand, is the rapidity with which any industry supplying a satisfactory light grows. Perhaps the largest industrial concern in the world are engaged in the work of dispelling the darkness after the sun has ceased to shine.

A marvelous new chemical compound which when brought in contact with water would give off a gas possessing fifteen times the illuminating value of ordinary gas, was discovered by accident at a small North Carolina village on May 4th, 1892. Nothing was done with the discovery until 1895, when a company to exploit it was formed. Since then its growth and development has been without parallel in the industrial history of America.

The new substance "Carbide" in appearance resembles dark granite and as ordinarily crushed the pieces average about the size of egg coal. Carbide is inert, will not burn, is non inflammable and can be handled in any quantity with perfect safety. Calcium Carbide is produced by the fusion and reduction in an electric furnace of a mixture of finely ground and intimately mixed lime and coke.

There have been passed and pronounced safe by the Boards of Fire Insurance over eighty different kinds of generators for producing Acetylene from the union of Calcium Carbide and water, and the sales of Calcium Carbide for a single day have been in excess of 300 tons.

When it is considered that less than four years ago there was not an Acetylene generator on the market and the very name Acetylene itself was unknown outside of technical chemical laboratories, this progress seems truly marvelous and is explainable only by the fact that Acetylene is truly an extraordinarily brilliant, cheap, safe and satisfactory light, that it possesses many advantages not common to any other artificial illuminant, and that it reaches and appeals to a class of isolated consumers in villages and on farms, away from gas and electric mains and supplies—a long and sorely felt want.

Acetylene is produced by the simple combination of calcium carbide and water, the former is now procurable readily and at small cost. Any mechanic can install the generator. Any member of the family can manipulate it. It causes no odor, soot, or smoke. The flame from the Acetylene is clear and brilliant, the very essence of light. Owing to its richness it is consumed in very small burners. An Acetylene flame the size of a thumb nail gives as much light as an ordinary flame from city gas thirteen times as large.

Significant Signal.

"I was much amused," said Cawker to Cumso, "at what a returned Klondiker told me of the customs of the gold mines."

"Interesting and funny, were they?"

"He said that in his shanty six men slept together. They all lay in a row, like spoons in a case, facing one way, to keep warm. When one of them became tired of lying on one side he would call out 'Lawyer,' and they would all turn at once."

"Why did they use the word 'lawyer?'"

"That meant 'Lie on the other side.'"—Judge.

It is not always the most successful fisherman who can tell the most catchy story.—Star of Hope.

PRESIDENT HARPER'S JEST.

Head of Chicago University Tells Alumni He Has Never Asked for Money.

Amid shouts of laughter from 50 alumni of the University of Chicago, President William R. Harper declared the other night that he had never solicited one penny for that institution. The occasion was the second annual banquet of the University of Chicago Alumni club, and, although the head of the Midway institution spoke with apparent seriousness, his reiterated statements that all of the university's millions came unsolicited only served to further stir the mirth of the former students.

After preliminary remarks alluding to the remarkable growth of the university, President Harper said that he wished to disclaim the reputation of a beggar which had been given him, and for the university that of a begging institution. Never, said Dr. Harper, in the history of the university, has a penny of the generous donations been asked for. When John D. Rockefeller first wrote Dr. Harper he willingly went to Cleveland, but did not ask for money. Mr. Rockefeller had, however, seen a want of the Chicago school, and had availed himself of an excellent opportunity to fill it. None of Rockefeller's later gifts had been solicited, but, stated Dr. Harper, the opportunity had continued, and Mr. Rockefeller had continued to avail himself of it.

Stilling the expressions of uproarious mirth which his statement had produced, the speaker said: "I'm not joking, gentlemen; this is true. Of course, when President Eliot, of Harvard, said the same thing he was jesting, but you all know that I do not jest."

TO EXPLORE CUBA.

Representatives of Smithsonian Institution to Gather Specimens of Fauna of Island.

A dispatch to the New York Times from Havana says: Students of natural history are likely to derive some profit out of Cuba. Spaniards would not permit its exploration, and only accounts of what may be found picked up here and there by searchers before the Spanish authorities heard of what they were doing and stopped them have been published.

William Palmer, chief taxidermist of the Smithsonian institution, with J. H. Riley, also of the Smithsonian force, have just started into Pinar del Rio province on an exploring trip. Their purpose is to gather specimens of the fauna of the island for the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo. They expect to dive into the wilds of the western portion of the island and work eastward until October. Should their discoveries warrant a return they or others will complete the exploration next year.

The Smithsonian visitors will live in a tent, moving it daily. They are authorized to hire guides and pack animals, and they are equipped with full paraphernalia for preserving the specimens they gather.

HIS WEALTH HIDDEN.

Aged Ohio Farmer on His Deathbed Reveals the Location of the Treasure.

Hezekiah Williams, an aged farmer in Troy township, O., was taken suddenly ill the other day, and thinking that he was going to die called his two sons, Carl and James, to his bedside and told them that if thy would go to the old log house near by, in which the family formerly lived, they would find an oaken box containing $2,600 in silver and gold. The sons followed the old man's directions and brought the treasure that had been hidden for many years to the house.

The family sat about the bedside and counted out the money, and when they announced the amount the old man nodded his head in assent and died. Mr. Williams was a thrifty farmer and none of his relatives knew or even suspected that he had any money. The treasure is all that is left to the family besides the little tract of land on which they live.

THE TEEMING WEST.

The Prairie Lands of Western Canada Being Filled with Excellent Settlers.

The salient fact that presents itself in taking a bird's-eye view of the Canadian West, is that of intense activity in every department. Whether the glance be turned upon the district east of Winnipeg, the Red River Valley south or north, the Dauphin and M. & N. W. district, the Southwestern, or whether it take in the great central division along the main line of the C. P. R. stretching away ont to the Rockies and from there bending north and south to Prince Alberta and Edmonton, Meleod and Lethbridge—whether the examination be made in any of these directions the same activity, growth and hopefulness is observable.

The Canadian west is not only a good place to locate permanently, but it is also a good place to invite the relatives and friends to come to. This is the spirit that seems to animate the west at the present time and its effects are to be seen on every hand. To enumerate the towns where handsome and substantial blocks and residences have gone up this year would be simply to give a list of the towns and villages along the railway lines. And this movement has not been confined to these centers of population, but in many cases it has been overshadowed by the improvement in farm buildings.

So far as one can see, this is no passing phase, no repetition of any temporary boom following a period of good crops and fair prices. It is a movement more spontaneous, more general, more marked than anything that has gone before, and seems to indicate that the Great West, like Samson, bursting the encompassing bands, has awakened to a period of activity and development that will surpass anything we have known in the past and which will only be paralleled by the opening out of some of the most fertile of the western states of the union.

Look at some of the figures. Over a thousand schools in Manitoba and the number going up by leaps and bounds. Something like five hundred schools in the Territories. Winnipeg as representing the gateway of the west, the third city in the Dominion in regard to bank clearings, postal business and probably in regard to customs; the Boston return at Winnipeg running about thirty to forty per cent. greater month by month than in the fiscal year of 1897-8, the largest previous year for actual business entries, when over $900,000 was paid through the Winnipeg office for duty. The C. P. R. and Canada Northwest land sales together running over $1,500,000 for the year. These, and a thousand more signs show how the west has leaped into new life.

This is an inspiring and cheering spectacle, but it brings with it great responsibilities. The business men realize this, the banks realize it, and have spread their agencies through every bustling little town clear out to the coast, the churches realize it, and one denomination alone has opened an average of about thirty new stations in each of the past two years, and with increase this in the year now entered upon, the government departments realize it, and there is talk of redistribution and additional members. The educational branches realize it and new schools are springing up everywhere. Over 12,000 settlers came in from the United States alone last year, and these with the people who came in from the east prove the most rigorous Westerners. They lose no time in developing their farms, in filling their grazing lands with stock and in every district is to be found evidences of thrift and prosperity.

Heathen Gratitude.

An amateur philanthropist took charge of a Sunday school class of Chinamen on the East side. The members were zealous to learn, and the intelligent responses of his favorite pupil caused the teacher to glow with pride. After some months this pupil began walking part of the way home with the teacher, and one Sunday afternoon, in a burst of confidence, he said, earnestly: "I want to thank you for you kind to poor heathen. I know English now pretty good. I got place to work as interpreter gambling house. I put you on good thing!"—N. Y. Mail and Express.

Milt Kendall and his sons were indicted by the Jessamine county grand jury for the murder of Eugene Cassell and held to bail in the sum of $3,000.

The famous trotting mare, Maud S., 2:08¼, died in New York. She was twenty-six years old and was sired by Harold, dam Miss Russell, and was bred in Woodford county. She made her record in 1885. The mare was owned by the late Robt. Bonner.

The last Kentucky agricultural report reported that the average condition of the growing wheat crop is ninety-seven per cent. About 21 per cent. of the old crop is still held by farmers, and the average price was sixty-seven cents. The corn crop shows thirty two per cent.

One of the reasons why it is hard to make hens set regularly in winter is found in feeding them to often. A hen called off from her nest three or four times a day is likely to make some ventures of her own to get food or drink. Until the hen is thoroughly set on setting, she should be fed only once a day, and that early in the morning. If it is a close room, where she cannot get out, the hen will go back to the nest again and set contentedly. She takes no exercise and needs only food enough to sustain life and heat.

It is about the time of year for the farmer to stick a quid of tobacco in the back end of his mouth, whittle a stick or two around the old home fireplace and raise tobacco galore. It is a good thing our farmers "raise more tobacco round the store in winter than when the mocking bird and other sweet harbingers of spring and summer are singing their songs so fascinating and all creation pays homage to the singing. While this in a great sense is true, this year promises a fulfillment of those "fireside plantings" and it now looks as both Burley and Pryor cultivators will break a record or two in acreage and yield this year, all conditions being favorable.—The Weed.

Circuit Clerk H. B. Beck has made his report in connection with the recent term of the Owen Circuit Court to Gus Coulter as Auditor. Judge J. W. Greene, however, who was a Brown supporter, recognizes Elder J. S. Sweeney as the legal incumbent of that office.

While on his rounds lighting the street lamps last Tuesday night William Noel had a thrilling experience with fire. One of his gloves caught on fire, from which the flames spread to the gasoline cans in the wagon, about twenty in number and all full. The horse was detached from the vehicle and the cans were dumped out. No damage was done to the wagon, but the cans were a total wreck, it being impossible to extinguish the flames.

The poultry houses should all be whitewashed both inside and out. A teaspoonful of crude carbolic acid to a bucket should be added to each bucket of wash.

If the Republicans of Tennessee, Alabama or Georgia had tried to turn the trick Taylor has on Kentucky, in those States the highways from Nashville to Murfreesboro; from Atlanta to Athens and from Montgomery to the gulf would have been hanging full of stiffs three deep on each side, and there's no mistake. They would not stand it and the Republicans know it too and act accordingly.

A Pennsylvanian writing home of his travels in Kansas is thus quoted:

"In Kansas, barbers die of starvation. When you see a wagon on the road looking as if it was loaded with cornsilk, it's only the old farmer man's whiskers stacked up behind him. Most of the streets are paved, the grains of corn being used for cobblestones, while the cobs are hollowed out and used for sewer pipe. The husk, when taken off whole and stood on end, makes a nice tent for the children to play in. It sounds queer to hear the feed man tell the driver to take a dozen grains of horse feed over to Johnson's livery stable. If it were not for the soft, deep soil here, I don't see how they ever would harvest the corn, as the stalks would grow up in the air as high as a Methodist Church steeple. However, when the ears get too heavy their weight presses the stalk down in the ground on an average of 92 feet; this brings the ear near enough to the ground to be chopped off with an axe."

At Queen Victoria's table an odd custom, which originated at the time of George II., is preserved. As each dish is placed upon the table the name of the cook who prepared it is announced.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 4, 1900. NO. 24

THE ground hog is evidently an expansionist.

THE Boers gave the British more trouble again last week. They are not entirely subdued.

SOUTH TRIMBLE, of Frankfort, has formally announced as a candidate for Congress in the Seventh.

IT is thought that the Court of Appeals will render a decision in the contested election cases in the next few days.

IN a speech made by the President last August he, said "the flag does not mean one thing here and another in Cuba and Porto Rico."

THE Indiana Republicans can not be pursuaded to pull down the protest they have entered against the Administration's Porto Rican policy.

NOW Senator Lodge and Representative Hill want the provision for a delegate to Congress from Hawaii stricken out of the bill for the government there.

THE Connecticut tobacco growers are said to have demanded that a tariff be placed on the Porto Rico tobacco brought to the market of this country.

CLAUDE DESHA, of Harrison county, who was chief clerk of the Senate, last winter, will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Ninth district.

J. M. STONE, who was Mississippi's reconstruction Governor, died March 26th. He was elected by the General Assembly of that State to succeed Gov. Ames, who resigned to avoid impeachment.

THE Courier is desirous that the citizens of Grant county, over the age of seventy years, hold a reunion some time during the coming summer. Such an assembly of aged people would make a day very interesting.

"NOT a dollar of the Goebel Reward Fund," says ex-Chief Justice Lewis, Chairman of the commission, "will be spent in rewards for confessions. Not a cent of the $100,000 has yet been spent." Confessions come without money.

FROM the tone of those Louisville papers that took such a conspicuous part in organizing what pretended to be an "honest election league," they will soon be urging the organization of a league for the protection of assassins.

THAT wholesale massacre of State Senators that was planned to take place in Frankfort only a few weeks since, is a contemplated crime too horrible to think of. No punishment provided by law would be too severe for those who conceived it.

THE Carrollton News serves notice that Carroll county will present a Democratic candidate for Congressional honors this fall in the person of H. M. Forman, of Ghent. Come on Mr. Forman and may the d—l take the hind' man in the race.

IF those who are declaring that there is no truth in what Golden told on the witness stand in regard to the assassination of Senator Goebel, know his statements are false they must know what the truth in the matter is, and knowing it they should tell it and let the criminals be brought to justice.

THE Franklin county grand jury is in session this week and it will investigate the assassination of Senator Goebel. The prosecution claims to have considerable testimony against several of the accused that it has not yet made public. The report of the grand jury in the conspiracy cases will be awaited with intense interest the country over.

IF the boys who want to occupy the county offices during the next term, and have begun a canvass with that end in view, should find that the county executive committee is not in favor of having the nominations made before the spring or summer of 1901, they will have to take a recess of several months, and it is said to be hard for a candidate to call a halt on his campaign when once put in motion.

THE exhibition of horses on the street, Monday, was not what was expected for that day. There were five or six good horses shown, and it may be said that what the show lacked in number was made up in the quality of the stock.

THE Williamstown Courier claims to be the first paper in the State to suggest Judge Pryor as a candidate for Governor in case an election is to be held this fall. Judge Pryor would certainly make a good Governor and would, no doubt, make a stronger race than anyother Democrat in the State.

MR. BEVERIDGE, of Indiana, made a speech in the Senate the other day in opposition to the President's Porto Rican policy, and was given a frost, but at the close of his speech he astonished his few hearers by saying he would vote for the proposed tariff bill if nothing better is presented.

WITH two aspirants for Congress within her boundary, Carroll county may have an interesting little political scrap of her own, previous to the district convention. With a candidate located at Ghent and another at Carrollton, everybody in the county could be depended upon to take a hand for one or the other of the aspirants.

H. J. Casey, foreman of the White Burley Tobacco Co., has no surperior and but few equals in his line of business. His service of 30 years in the work enables him to be proficient in every line of the work. He has filled positions of trust in some of the largest factories in the U. S. As an artist he exhibits and displays he has no equal.—Bracken Chronicle.

THAT Democrat who went to Congress from Virginia with a 2,000 majority behind him and was fired out by the Republicans, and went home and was elected by a majority of 5,000, and was bounced out of Congress again, a few days ago by the Republicans, realizes that there is a difference between having a cinch on an election and having a dead-surething of an office after being elected to it.

THE price of brides, by the consent of President McKinley, have advanced in the Chickasaw nation. The price of a Chickasaw marriage license (to white men) was formerly $50. A year ago it was raised to $600. Now the price is $1,000. A Chickasaw woman usually has property valued at about $5,000. This act was passed because many indolent white men marry Indian girls, gain possession of their property and then desert them.

GENERAL GROSVENOR is going to investigate the assertion in the Washington Star (Republican) that it was stated by a Republican member of the House that the Porto Rican bill was made up at the request of the trusts, who promised to furnish a big campaign fund for the Republicans if it went through. Both Grosvenor and Hanna have denounced the writer of the article with much vituperation.

THE Salt Lake Tribune, an uncompromising Republican journal, has been watching the proceedings in Kentucky closely, and draws this conclusion: "Some of those interested deliberately hired a cohort of practiced assassins to go to the capital of the State with the purpose of reducing the majority in the Legislature sufficient to make it a minority. There is not anything more savage or revolting in the records of any tribes of savages on earth."

THE Lancaster Record, the editor of which is a strong Republican, speaks out in meeting after this fashion:

"Every man who had any connection with the affair should be hanged, and should it develop that any one knew of the plot and failed to reveal it he should be given a long term in the penitentiary, for had he revealed the conspiracy it might have saved Mr. Goebel's life, and the State from bearing the foulest and blackest crime ever committed in a civilized community."

AN EXCITING EPISODE.

[Aurora Cor. Lawrenceburg Register.]

Back in the 40's and extending into the 50's, a public bridge spanned South Hogan Creek near the dwelling on the lands of Carlisle and White, and now occupied by Mrs. Baker. The heavy oaken posts that sustained the wooden superstructure may yet be seen on either side of the creek. About the year 1840 an exciting incident occurred on that bridge, growing out of the escape and capture of several slaves owned near Florence, Boone Co., Ky., which was before the fugitive slave law of 1850. As soon as the escape was noised about Col. Neal Riddell, of Burlington, a brave and determined man, proposed to the owners that he would pursue and capture the negroes at all hazards. The offer was promptly accepted. Col. Riddell selected a posse of five men, of tried courage, to accompany him, Judge Riddell, of Burlington, being one of them. Learning the negroes had crossed the Ohio river near Aurora, he concluded they were making for Milan, Ripley county (a well known anti-slavery neighborhood) on their way to Canada. The pursuit was rapid, and the fugitives were captured near Napoleon in a dense woods. The return journey was at once commenced by the way of Moores Hill, Wilmington and Aurora. At Wilmington Col. Riddell learned that a force of anti-slavery men, well armed were at the east end of the bridge referred to, determined to rescue the runaway negroes. One of the posse having the negrocs in charge, proposed that they flank the bridge and the town of Aurora to the left, and cross the river at Petersburg. Col. Riddell would not entertain the idea for a moment, but declared that he would cross that bridge, if necessary alone, or die in the attempt! They instantly set forward and in about 30 minutes reached the west end of the bridge. At the east end they saw twelve or fifteen men prepared to dispute the passage of the posse. The posse halted while Riddell advanced to the middle of the bridge to reconnoiter the situation. He saw at a glance that courage alone could overcome the threatened danger. Returning to the men with him, he placed himself in front of them, and with a cocked pistol in each hand, he called out, "Follow me!" Fire seemed to flash from his lustrous black eyes as he andvanced, and with a defiant expression of countenance he declared to the opposing force before him, "I will kill the first man who attempts to oppose our advance!" The crowd instantly parted and he marched through it without a movement being made to interrupt them. Quickly Riddell shifted from the front to the rear of his men,to guard against an attack from that quarter, and thus he marched to the river, and as the sun went down he and his men safely landed on the Kentucky shore at a point immediately in front of the late residence of B. W. Buffington. Thus ended one of the most exciting incidents of slavery times in this section of the country, the result of one man's nerve and undaunted courage, for a braver man than Col. Neal Riddell lived not in Boone county, Kentucky. How different the public sentiment is now to what it was then. Now a bloody conflict would occur, under the same circumstances while in 1840 the nerve of the man triumphed over a formidable opposition.

Pumpkins should never be hoed in January. They should be let alone until the middle of February, and then knocked off the trees with a hickory club. This gives them a fine flavor so they will stand picking.

Dried apples should be planted in June. They should never be planted in wet weather, or they will swell up and explode.

For spavin or ringbone on geese always use turpentine. Shake well before using. Never use a fine tooth comb below a goose's knee. A great specialist says geese should never be shod before they are four years old.

The best way to make pigs lay is to whitewash them. The practice of feeding pigs plug tobacco to fatten them is unwise and expensive. Carpet tacks make a cheaper and safer tonic for pigs. Always mix them with their pie.

A close adherence to the above suggestions will prove very profitable to those engaged in gardenologic pursuits.

THE opinion of the court of appeals in the contested election cases is expect to be handed down this week.

Set all the eggs you can during March, so that the chicks will hatch out early.

FROM OWEN COUNTY.

[Herald.]

Some 25 horses changed hands last Monday at prices ranging from $30 to $100.

Quite an interesting case was tried before County Judge J. W. Hill last Tuesday afternoon, the jury being composed of colored men. Laura Gross swore out a warrant against Jonas Stanton, his wife Caroline and son Ed,charging a breach of the peace in attacking her on the street. After hearing the evidence and an able speech from each of the attorneys, the jury very gravely took the case. In about twenty minutes a verdict of a five dollar fine was returned.

The little son of Allie Shealton, of Jonesville, recently unearthed an old coin. On one side of it was engraved "E pluribus unium, 1841, and on the other side were the words, "Specie payment suspended May tenth, 1837." It is of copper and about the size of a two cent piece.

We think it is the opinion of every citizen of the county that our roads were never in as bad condition as they are at present. The Sparta pike is full of holes the entire length, while many places in the two pikes leading from the Sparta pike to New Liberty are beginning to be dangerous. It is no uncommon thing to hear the crack of a spring. It is fun for the blacksmiths, but h—l on the buggies. The pike from Gratz to Cleveland, built by Perry O. Minor, Esq., which was formerly four feet wide is now only used by horseback riders, and at their peril. The best pike in the county is the stamping ground road. Something should be done or the candidates will be compelled to make the tour of the county on stilts next winter.

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern which is not afraid to be generous. The proprietors of Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles and have the satisfaction of knowing it has cured thousands of hopless cases. Asthma, Bronchitis, La grippe and all Throat and Lung diseases are surely cured by it. Call on W. F. McKim, Burlington; M. J. Crouch, Union, or J. G. Oelsner, Florence, druggists, and get a free bottle. Regular size 50c and $1. Every bottle guaranteed.

THE regular Republican ticket was elected in Cincinnati, Monday, by nearly 7,000 majority. The Democrats and Independent Republicans fused, but they were not in the contest at the polls a little bit.

The Maysville Bulletin prints the following:

"A letter from Flemingsburg brings news of rather an unusal and amusing incident, but which at the same time proves an unfortunate one to the parties most interested.

"Samuel Hopper and John Fenley, brothers-in-law, recently decided to cast their lot together, and occupy one house. Accordingly Fenly moved in with Hopper.

"When Mr. Fenly and wife became comfortably settled in their new domicile, Mrs. Fenly gave birth to a handsome, black eyed baby boy. Upon the night following the birth of the Fenley baby Mrs. Hopper gave birth also to a handsome baby boy, possessing black eyes; the two babies, it is said, looking as much alike as two peas.

"An old negro woman was called in to nurse the youngsters, and taking them to the kitchen, proceeded to wash them, her mind being full of matters dear to the darkey's heart. After the bath the wearing apparel was brought out, but she had mixed the babies and could not tell Master Hopper from Master Fenley. Running into the bedroom she exclaimed: 'Fo' the Lawd, misses, what is to become of this poor nigger? I's mixed the babies and can't tell which from which.'

"And to make matters worse, the letter states that neither fathers nor mothers can tell which baby belongs to them."

Mr. Evan Rogers saw eight large turkey hawks sitting on a limb of a tree, near Newtown, Saturday, and killed all of them in five shots. They were the largest hawks, possibly that have ever been killed in Scott county.—Georgetown News.

We favor a law, says an exchange, for the prevention of cruelty to vegetation. Just think of digging potatoes, pulling the heard out of rye, threshing wheat, cutting the heart out of a watermelon, spilling the blood of a beet, tearing the skin off a peach, breaking the neck of a squash, and other such outrages.

Several old "Confeds" happened together this forenoon and brought up the question of attending the Louisville reunion to occur in May. Naturally the talk turned to the small number of "Confeds" now remaining of those who went out from this place. "Why," said one, "out of the 150 men who went out from here in March, 1861, as Company D, of the Third Kentucky, C. S. A., and was known as Tilgham Guards, I can only recall the names of nine."—Paducah Sun.

Miss Mary Whitfield, who lives near Hardinsburg, has in her possession a Bible that was printed in 1806. It was first the property of James McPhyn, a Methodist preacher. McPhyn tried to spread the good word around here. He was killed by the Indians in 1812 when on his way to preach to a few friends. He was left on the road, where this Bible, his faithful old companion, was found by his side. The book has been preserved by his descendants, and is still in a fairly good condition.—Breckinridge News.

About two years ago Mr. J. M Hunt hised a horse and buggy to a stranger and since then heard nothing from either until last Saturday, when John Wells, a colored boy, saw the horse standing on the street and recognized it as Mr. Hunt's. He informed Mr. Hunt and the owner got his long lost property. The horse was driven here by a stranger from Lexington, who said he had hired it from a stable there. The owner of the Lexington stable said he purchased the horse from a stray pen sale. This ended the trace, of course, and Mr. Hunt had to pay $13 50, the amount the liveryman of Lexington said he paid for the horse at the sale. Mr. Hunt has heard nothing from his harness and buggy.—Georgetown News.

Not long since a post-office inspector, who was visiting the different post-offices through this section, stopped at Savoyard, a well-known place in Metcalfe county. On calling for the postmaster, a colored boy about 13 years of age stepped forward and said: "The postmaster is not in, but I am the deputy." His name is John Thompson, and on investigation the post-office books were found to be kept in first-class style. John is a remarkable boy. All the drummers who call at that place know him well and pronounce him as having a superior intellect. He has full charge and control of Mr. Whit Thompson's store. He is polite and courteous, and is pursuing at his leisure moments a regular course of study, embracing algebra, geometry, astronomy and other sciences. He keeps well posted on the topics of the day. He is said by his friends to be another Fred Douglas. Mr. Whit Thompson, who owns the store and who is one of the most prominent citizens in Metcalfe Co., says he could not get along without John.—Glasgow Republican.

Black leg fatal to cattle in some sections of Clark county.

Solomon Vanmeter, of Fayette county, sold to Paris parties 6,000 bushels of blue-grass seed at 47½c.

Joseph Houston sold at Cynthiana, a bay combined gelding, 4-yrs-old, by Blue Jeans, to a Lexington party, for $250.

T. M. Arnold and John King, of Garrard, lost 23 cattle from black leg, death resulting in a day after being afflicted with it.

Mt. Sterling Sentinel Democrat: Cap Gillaspie bought of English Anderson, of Side View, 19 heifers, average weight 1,100 pounds, at 4½ cents. This was as fine a lot of heifers as was ever seen in any county.

This promises to be a year unprecedented for business among the purebred poultry breeders. The fever seems to have struck the whole country and the demand for purebred stock is greater than the supply.

The Standford Journal notes the sale of a lot of corn at $2.65; 55 hogs at $3.85; a lot of butcher cattle at 3½c; a bunch of ewes at $5; a car load of export cattle at 5c; lambs from 77 ewes at $4 each, to be taken July 25th; 28 mountain yearling cattle at $17.

Drilled corn will, if kept clean, yield about eight bushels more to the acre than corn planted on the same land in hills. The drilled corn is harder to keep clean and, as a matter of fact, if not properly cultivated when very small never can be kept clean. The drilled corn grows in better shape for the harvester to cut and, aside from the increased yield, will furnish ears of a more uniform size.

Messrs. George and Carroll Hamilton, of Bath county, considered the largest tobacco raisers in the State, announce their intention to plant 250 acres this year. Last year they had in 400 acres, which means their planting will be cut down 150 acres. But from a reliable source we learn this ratio is not kept up in other sections of the Blue-Grass, as no doubt most of the planters will increase their acreage over last year.—The Weed.

It is stated that only four horses have ever sold for $100,000 or over. The first of these was Axtel, who was sold about 11 years ago as a three-year-old for $105,000; the next was Arion, who in 1891, sold for $125,000; the third was Ormonde, the grandsire of Flying Fox, who was sold in 1893 for $150,000; the fourth was Flying Fox, who sold recently in England for $197,500. Axtel and Arion were trotters; Ormonde and Flying Fox, runners.

The tobacco trust fears the competition of little Puerto Rico. Before long will come the Philippines, and there tobacco is both grown and manufactured into cigars. If the Philippines shall be admitted as parts of the United States, every cigar factory in this country might as well shut up shop, while its proprietor can send what is left of his capital over to Manila, there to start a new plant, manned by cigar makers with wages of 6 cents a day.—Richmond Register.

The Best Remedy for Rheumatism.

QUICK RELIEF FROM PAIN.

All who use Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism are delighted with the quick relief it affords. When speaking of this Mr. D. N. Sink, of Troy, Ohio, says: "Some time ago I had a severe attack of rheumatism in my arm and shoulder. I tried numerous remedies but got no relief until I was recommended by Messrs. Geo. F. Parsou & Co., druggists of this place, to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. They recommended it so highly that I bought a bottle. I was soon relieved of all pain. I have since recommended this liniment to many of my friends, who agree with me that it is the best remedy for muscular rheumatism in the market." For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington, Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, C. S. Balsly, Bullittsville, O. N. Grant, Bellevue.

Luccheni, the murderer of Empress Elizabeth, is again in solitary confinement. He tried to stab the superintendent of the prison where he is confined with a sharp instrument he had made out of a can opener. The reason for the attack was the refusal of unusual privileges.

Hawaiians call their chief islands Hahyway-ee; we say Hah-wy-ee. Other proper ways of giving well known Hawaiian names are: Oah-hu, Ho-no-lulu, Mow-ee (Maui), Kow-aye (Kauai), Ne-e-how (Niihau), Hee-lo (Hilo), La-hy-na (Lahaina), Koh-kah-la (Kohala). Vowels are as in Italian, and deserves much care; Hawaiians pay little attention to consonants.

The colonization season has opened promisingly in the south, and industrial agents say the year will be a record breaker for immigration. Many new mills and factories are being located along the lines of southern railroads, and new industries are constantly developing. Large colonies are also coming south, and thousands of people are taking advantage of the home seekers' excursions.

A change in the quality of straw hats for the Cuban and Porto Rican trade is reported by dealers this season. The goods are to be mostly of bright striking colors. Two years ago hats of this character were rarely seen in Cuba, all the women wearing black then, either for personal mourning or as an evidence of sorrow over Spanish rule. The change in fashions indicate the happier conditions which prevail in the island.

The women of Marmaton, Kan., five miles west of Ft. Scott, have organized themselves into a band of laborers for the building of the United Brethren church there. Twelve of them donned old clothes the other day and began the work of excavating for the foundations. Enough money to build the church could not be raised, so the women determined to take up the work and do it themselves rather than let the project be abandoned.

Gen. Edward Moody McCook, who has been compelled to seek a refuge in the Soldiers' home at Yountville, Cal., belongs to the historic "fighting McCooks," almost a score of whom have been military men of renown. The general is the son of the late John McCook, and was born at Steubenville, O., in 1835. He was the fifth and seventh governor of Colorado, and was active in the territorial legislature of Kansas at the time when the state of Kansas was formed.

Italy's sanitary precautions are interfering with the jubilee pilgrimages. A train-load of 361 Marseilles pilgrims was stopped at the frontier and informed that every one must be vaccinated before entering Italy. The pilgrims refused to submit, and were sent back to Marseilles. The government officials declare that the measure is due to the prevalence of smallpox in Southern France, but the clericals maintain that it is devised solely to annoy intending visitors to Rome.

Few rich men work harder than John D. Rockefeller, the Standard oil Croesus, and certainly no other New York millionaire is personally so little in evidence as he. Nearly every day he puts in a lengthy period at his office in lower Broadway, and even the days he is absent are usually passed in business pursuits elsewhere. There is, therefore, color of truth in the report that he recently sighed for a map to look after his interests, offering to pay an annual salary of $1,000,000 for such service.

The first shipment of steel ever made from the south to the north left Birmingham the other day when a train of 21 cars, carrying 462 tons of steel billets, departed over the Southern railway for Worcester, Mass. The steel was made at the new million-dollar plant of the Alabama Steel and Ship Building Co. at Ensley, which began operations in January last, and was consigned to the American Steel and Wire Co. It will be used in the manufacture of wire.

A German authority has recently announced the discovery of a tree in the forests of Central India which has most curious characteristics. The leaves of the tree are of a highly sensitive nature, and so full of electricity that whoever touches one of them receives an electric shock. It has a very singular effect upon a magnetic needle, and will influence it at a distance of even 70 feet. The electrical strength of the tree varies according to the time of day, it being strongest at midday and weakest at midnight. In wet weather its powers disappear

TOTAL SOLAR ECLIPSE.

All the Phases and Different Branches of the Work Will Receive Attention by the Astronomers.

Williams Bay, Wis., April 1.—The Eclipse committee of the Astronomical and Astrophysical Society of America issued Saturday a circular letter to all astronomers who are intending to make systematic observations of the total solar eclipse on May 28. This letter solicits co-operation on the part of all observers, that the best possible results may be obtained.

No eclipse was ever prepared for as carefully as this. The eclipse committee is perfecting a thorough organization, so that all phases and different branches of work will receive attention.

A party will go from the Lick Observatory to some Georgia point for the purpose of photographing the corona. A party from the Smithsonian institution will search for bright lines in the infra-red spectrum of the corona, while a party from the British Astronomical association will probably be located at Wadesboro, N. C., (?) for general observations. Prof. Crew, of Northwestern University, will photograph the spectrum of the Chromosphere, while Prof. Upton, Brown University, will make both visual and photographic observations.

A party from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology will give special attention to the time of contacts and a party from Johns Hopkins University will photograph the spectrum of the Chromosphere with spectroscopes of great power.

Prof. W. H. Eckering, of the Harvard College Observatory, will search for an intra-mercurial planet and expeditions will be sent from the United States naval observatory, the Goodwill, Chabot and Flower observatories, the University of Virginia and several other institutions.

There will be no other total eclipses in this country until 1918.

EXPLORERS RETURN.

The Borchgrevink Expedition Reports Having Located the South Magnetic Pole.

Wellington, New Zealand, April 2.—The exploring steamer Southern Cross, bearing Mr. C. E. Borchgrevink and the survivors of the South Polar expedition fitted out in 1898 by Sir George Newnes, of London, has just arrived here. Mr. Borchgrevink reports that the magnetic pole has been located. Mr. N. Hansen, one of the geologists who started with the expedition, died on the voyage.

The Borchgrevink expedition left Hobart, Tasmania, for the Antarctic region on December 19, 1898. During the latter part of February, 1899, the members landed from the Southern Cross near Cape Adair, Victoria land. It having been arranged that the steamer should leave them there with full equipment of every kind, and should return for them early in 1900.

FROM HEART DISEASE.

Ex-United States Senator Gibson, of Maryland, Died at His Brother's Residence in Washington.

Washington, April 1.—Ex-United States Senator Chas. H. Gibson, of Maryland, died at 2 o'clock Saturday morning from heart disease at the residence of his brother, Lieut. Gibson, of the navy in this city, where he had resided since his retirement from the senate. Friday night he visited the Metropolitan club and went to his home about 10 o'clock. He complained of feeling unwell, but as he had not been in good health for some time this did not cause any alarm. His condition grew worse, and at 1 o'clock a physician was called. He sank steadily and died an hour later. He leaves a widow but no children. No arrangements have yet been made for the funeral, but it is probable that his remains will be taken to Centerville, Md., and interred by the side of his father.

Peacock Reaches Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 31.—A. R. Peacock, vice president of the Carnegie Steel Co., who made the record-breaking trip across the continent, arrived here on the regular Pittsburgh, Ft. Wayne & Chicago train from Chicago. He gave up the special train at Chicago, and consequently made slower time between that city and this, but his entire journey from Los Angeles here occupied but 72 hours and 30 minutes. Mr. Peacock refused to tell why he made such a hurried trip home, and the only surmise is that his presence is essential at the meeting of the reorganized Carnegie Co.

Meeting of Municipalities.

New York, March 31.—The next meeting of the League of American Municipalities will be held at the office of Secretary B. F. Gilkison, in New York, April 7. At this meeting definite action will be taken on a proposition for an expert investigation of municipally owned and operated electric light works.

Twenty Days' Racing.

Memphis, Tenn., April 2.—The 20th annual meeting of the Memphis Jockey club will begin next Thursday at Montgomery Park, and will continue for 20 racing days, which will throw the final day's sport on April 27.

Flood Destruction in Uruguay.

Montevideo, April 2.—The recent heavy floods in Uruguay have caused great destruction of cattle and wheat. Two bridges on the Central railway have been swept away with a reported loss to the company of $[illegible],000.

LEGAL PROCEEDINGS.

Case of the Suspects Go Before the Franklin Grand Jury.

No Indictments Expected to Be Returned Before the Latter Part of the Week—Change of Venue Will Be Asked For.

Frankfort, Ky., April 2.—The convening of the April term of the Franklin circuit court, with Judge Cantrill sitting, marks the beginning of the final legal proceedings against those charged with complicity in the assassination of the late William Goebel and on this account makes it the most important in the history of criminal trials in this state in many years.

The first session of the court will be taken up mainly with preliminaries. Judge Cantrill's charge to the grand jury, always vigorous and comprehensive, is looked forward to with more than ordinary interest.

The grand jury will probably get in working order Tuesday and of course the assassination case will be the first matter taken up. It is understood that Commonwealth's Attorney Franklin, who will conduct the prosecution on the part of the state, has had subpoenaes issued for numerous important witnesses in relation and others will be issued as soon as the court gets down to work.

The names of the suspects who have already been arrested and whose cases have been referred to the grand jury for investigation are Republican Secretary of State Culch Powers, Judge W. L. Hazelrig, of Lakeland; Henry Youtsey, of Frankfort; J. L. Sutton, of Williamsburg; Harland Whittaker, of Butler county; Silas Jones, of Whitley county, and John Davis, of Frankfort. Warrants are also out for ex-Secretary of State Charles Finley, Capt. John L. Powers, of Knox county, and "Tallow Dick" Combs, colored, who have not yet been arrested.

It is not probable any indictments will be returned before the latter part of the week at the earliest, and if the prosecution makes good its claims, the investigation will involve a large number of others against whom indictments will be returned.

The general impression prevails that none of the trials will come up at the present term and it is understood that the defense probably in every case will move for a change of venue to some other county on account of the heated state of public feeling here.

Frankfort, Ky., April 1.—W. H. Culton, charged with being an accessory to the murder of William Goebel, said Saturday:

"I have never confessed. I know nothing to confess. I know of nothing that implicates republicans," told Col. T. C. Campbell and his associates about one little matter that I can't explain, but of this thing that puzzles me I can make no reference until the time comes."

Col. Campbell and Arthur Goebel were up and about early Saturday. It is supposed they are making preparations for the work before the grand jury.

Judge Moore declines to state how many warrants were issued at the same time with the "Tallow Dick" Combs warrant. Combs is charged with being an accessory before the fact to the murder of Goebel.

Washington, March 29.—The President has informed Kentucky republicans that while he can not interfere in Kentucky affairs to the extent of disarming the militia of either faction, he is willing so far as he can legitimately do so, to recognize the republican officials of that state as the de facto officials. He told them in the same connection that he would give directions that mail addressed to an official by title only, as to "The Governor," or "The Secretary of State," should be delivered to the republicans holding these offices, and not to the democrats.

Frankfort, Ky., March 31.—Ex-Chief Justice James H. Lewis, chairman of the committee selected by the legislature to have charge of the Goebel reward fund, Friday made the following statement concerning the story sent out from Winchester Thursday that Attorney James Andrew Scott had proposed to the relatives of H. E. Youtsey to give him a portion of the reward money for a confession of the details of the conspiracy to assassinate Wm. Goebel.

"The money appropriated by the legislature," said he, "to be used in running down the assassins of Gov Goebel and bringing them to justice will be distributed as provided at the first meeting of the reward commission, so much for the assassin and so much for the conviction of each accessory.

"The preliminary work is in the hands of Commonwealth's Attorney Franklin, and no private citizen has authority from Mr. Franklin or from the commission to offer rewards for confessions of alleged accessories."

No Damage From Frost.

Atlanta, Ga., April 2.—Dispatches from different parts of the state do not indicate any serious damage by Saturday and Sunday night's frosts which were felt as far south as Columbus. At Adairsville, in North Georgia, 75 per cent. of the late fruit in the valley was killed.

Will Meet in Chicago Next Year.

St. Louis, April 2.—The North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools adjourned to meet in Chicago on the last Friday in March, 1901.

RETURNED FROM CUBA.

What the Subcommittee of the Senate Has to Say After a Visit to the Island.

Washington, April 2.—The subcommittee of the senate, consisting of Senators Platt, of Connecticut, Aldrich and Teller, which went to Cuba for the purpose of personally investigating conditions on the island, with a view to intelligent action by congress with respect to Cuba, has returned to Washington. Senator Platt, chairman of the subcommittee, authorized the following statement concerning the subcommittee's observations:

"We inquired, as carefully and completely as we could with the limited time at our disposal, into the condition of the people of the island, their needs and the prospect of the establishment of an independent, satisfactory and stable government by and for the people of Cuba. We were in Havana in all five days. We also visited the provinces of Pinar del Rio Matanzas and Santa Clara, being unable to go to Santiago and Puerto Principe, as we very much wished. We saw and conversed with a great many prominent and leading men from all portions of the island, men who represented different ideas and interests, from intense conservatism to decided radicalism, and return with a much better understanding of the problem to be solved and the steps to be taken in its solution than we could possibly obtain otherwise than by a personal visit.

"It may be said of all classes in Cuba, that they are looking to the establishment of an independent government, a Cuban republic. A few are impatient and wish for immediate and complete independence. Others are less impatient, believing that sufficient time should be taken to avoid mistakes and to set up the new government upon such a firm basis as to insure its success and permanence. All are looking forward to the municipal elections that are to take place in the latter part of May, regarding such elections as the first step toward the establishment of the new government. Much will depend upon the result of these elections. If they take place without disturbance and good officials are elected, that will go far to prove the capacity of the people for self-government, and steps can be taken without great delay for further progress in that direction. The problem is complicated by the fact that self-government is an untried experiment, by a people who have had little opportunity to study its principles or its details, its necessities, or its responsibilities. Many of the more conservative citizens and business men, unfortunately, show too much disposition to hold aloof.

"There are great possibilities in the island. It is fertile, has great natural resources and is capable of supporting a population four or five times larger than it numbers at present. On the whole there has been marvelous recuperation since the declaration of peace, but it needs American capitalists among its enterprises, which hesitate as yet to go there. English and German capital seems more confident and is being invested. Surely our own people ought to have as much confidence in the future of Cuba as foreigners have. On the whole we were much pleased and encouraged. The people of the United States and of Cuba should alike exercise patience, being assured that thereby progress will be most certain."

PHILIPPINE CASUALTIES.

Gen. Otis Reports the Killing of Four Soldiers and the Wounding of Eight Others.

MAY BE STORY OF THE MAINE.

Spanish Cipher Cablegram Found by an American Soldier in Manila.

"Blue tape" is the expression which might properly be applied to Spanish official circumlocution. C. Leland, a young man from Bismarck, N. D., came to Chicago a few days ago to join a regiment which he had heard was being recruited there for service in the Boer army. He carried a little bundle of blue paper which might reveal the secret of the Maine explosion in Havana harbor if the writing on it could be read. It purports to be a dispatch in cipher from a Spanish official in Havana to Gov. Gen. Augusti at Manila. It is dated February 18, 1898, and written in Spanish cipher code on a narrow ribbon of light blue paper, about 163 feet long. The paper is wound in a circular coil and makes a bunch six inches in diameter. There is nothing on the paper to establish its genuineness, says the Inter Ocean.

Young Leland got it from Charles Jackson, a soldier in a South Dakota regiment that served in the Philippines. When the American army took possession at Manila this paper, with a great many other official documents, it is said, was found in a safe in the governor general's office. Gen. Otis ordered them all burned, but Jackson rescued the cipher cablegram from the pile as a souvenir. He was killed soon afterward, but previous to that had mailed the paper to Leland.

A SUCCESSFUL FARMER.

Within three miles of the town going eastward is the farm of Mr. W. Creamer, one of the municipality's largest and most prosperous mixed farmers. Mr. Creamer came to this country in 1880 and settled on a portion of the land which comprises his present enormous farm of 1,280 acres. In common with many others of a similar period he experienced all the hardships and difficulties common to the absence of railway and market facilities. In no wise daunted, by energy, industry and indomitable will he has been able to surmount all obstacles and has achieved an unparalleled success, and is known throughout the district as one of its preeminent farmers. His operations extend over 1,280 acres, two sections (the thought alone of so much land makes the eastern farmer dizzy). 400 acres of this is broken and the remainder is excellent pasture land and wood. This harvest he took off a crop of 500 acres of wheat and 200 of other grains. Four hundred acres are plowed and ready for wheat next spring. Mr. Creamer is, as has been stated, a mixed farmer of no mean proportions, having at the present time 40 horses, 60 head of cattle and 50 pigs. The most modern farm buildings are found on his premises, the main building being a barn 55 feet square on a stone foundation containing stabling for 16 horses and a large number of cattle. The loft is stored with 20 loads of sheaf oats for feed and tons of hay; there is also a cutting box. Another building of large dimensions is the granary, in which after teaming large quantities to market he still has stored 3,000 bushels of wheat. A crushing machine is in the building. There are a number of lesser buildings containing chicken house, pig pens and cattle sheds. The farm residence is a handsome frame structure of ample proportions, in connection with it is a wood shed. The water supply is unexceeded; besides house supply there is a well in the stables and a never failing spring situate in a bluff, which never freezes. Surrounded by a thick bluff of poplars, extending in a semi Circle to the west, north and east, the winter storms are broken and accumulation of snow unknown. Aided to his farming operations, Mr. Creamer conducts a threshing outfit for the season. His success is only one instance of what can be accomplished in Western Canada.—Baldur (Man.) Gazette, Nov. 16th, 1899.

Thousands are going to Western Canada this year to take advantage of the free homestead laws that are being offered by the government.

Some folks think that honesty, in moderation, is the best policy.—Puck.

GREAT BATTLESHIPS.

Three of the Most Formidable to Be Built for Our Navy.

The California, Nebraska and West Virginia Will Have 13,000 Tons Displacement and a Speed of 23 Knots.

Washington, March 31.—No warships of such fighting power have ever before been planned abroad or at home as the three cruisers whose details have just been practically completed by the admirals of the naval construction board. They are really most formidable battleships, with the speed and staying powers of an ocean liner. Never has such a tremendous battery been mounted afloat as the California, the Nebraska and the West Virginia will carry. Sixty-six fixed guns constitute their armament, and their magazines are to hold over 400 tons of ammunition.

The board has given these ships 13,000 tons displacement, 23 knots' speed, and, with coal bunker capacity of 2,000 tons, a steaming radius of 7,000 miles. They will be the only ships in the navy literally armored all over, their protection extending from below the water line above the entire superstructure. In appearance they will mark a notable departure from existing cruisers and battleships of their class, in that they will stand much higher out of the water, giving better distribution of batteries and quarters and making them most impressive.

The machinery is to develop over 22,000 horse power to drive the ships 23 knots, and this, with the standard naval water tube boilers, must not exceed 2,000 tons in weight.

The armored protection is to include a waterline belt of Krappized steel six inches thick abreast the engines and boilers, tapering to 3½ inches at the bow and stern. Above this belt there will be a five-inch casemate extending half the ship's length, to protect ten 6-inch guns. The 8-inch turrets will be six inches thick, the conning tower 9 inches, and the signal tower five inches. The total weight of armor, including the 4-inch protective deck, will be 1,457 tons.

The armament will consist of 66 guns, distributed as follows: Main battery, four 8-inch breech loading rifles of 45 calibres' length; fourteen 6-inch rapid fire rifles of 50 calibres' length. Secondary battery, all rapid fire, eighteen 14-pounders, twelve 3-pounders, four 1-pounder automatic, four 1-pounder single shot, two 3-inch field guns and two Gatlings. In addition the hand battery will include 300 magazine rifles and 200 revolvers.

On the main deck in the casemate will be placed the battery of six-inch rapid fires in broadsides, five on each side, with not less than 110 degrees arc of fire, except the forward pair, which are to be sponsoned so as to permit them to aim directly ahead. The automatic one-pounders will go in the lower military tops. There will be two submerged torpedo tubes in one compartment forward, and six whitehead torpedoes will be carried. The aggregate weight of this armament exceeds 600 tons.

As indicating the rapidity of destructive fire to be attained with this great battery, provision is made for the ammunition hoists to deliver charges to each gun at the following rates: Eight-inch, one every fifty seconds; 6-inch, three rounds a minute; 14-pounders, six rounds a minute; 3 and 1-pounders, ten rounds a minute. The rounds and weights of the ammunition to be carried on each ship are as follows: Five hundred rounds, 8-inch complete, 91.6 tons; 2,800 rounds, 6-inch complete, 227.5 tons; 4,500 rounds, 14-pounder complete, 51.7 tons; 6,000 rounds, 3-pounders complete, 18.8 tons; all other, twenty tons; total, 409.6 tons.

The construction board has also practically completed the designs for the battleships Pennsylvania, Georgia and New Jersey, no material modification from the original plans having been made. They will represent as distinct an advance in their class as the cruisers do over the New York and the Brooklyn.

AGE LIMITATIONS.

Civil Service Law Amended With Respect to Entrance to Certain Positions.

Washington, March 31.—The president has amended the civil service law so as to authorize the civil service commission, acting in accord with the heads of the departments interested, to fix maximum age limitations with respect to entrance to positions for which such maximum age limitations are not now fixed by the civil service rules; and, in addition to the age limits already fixed in that section of the rule, he has fixed the age limits for "apprentices in mints and assay offices" at 18 to 24 years; for "keeper assistant keeper and officers of lightships in the lighthouse service," at 18 to 50 years; for "matron and assistant matron in the Indian service," at 25 to 45 years, and for "observer in the weather bureau service," at 18 to 30 years.

A FRENCH VICTORY.

Town of Inrahr Held by Arabs Bombarded and Stormed—Six Hundred Killed.

Paris, March 31.—An official account has been issued of the victory of the French troops over the Arab army at Inrahr, which assembled with the object of attacking the French expedition which recently occupied the oasis of Insalah, southwest of Algeria. The French learned of the scheme and decided to storm the enemy's position, which was successfully carried March 19 by a column led by Lieut. Col. Eu. The town was first bombarded and then stormed, the Arab warriors making their last stand in Mosque. They left 600 men killed and a hundred wounded on the field.

Four hundred and fifty prisoners were taken. The French losses were 9 native soldiers killed, 38 wounded and two officers wounded.

LAKE CITY LYNCHING.

The Trial Will Not Be Called Again at the April Term of the United States Circuit Court.

Charleston, S. C., March 31.—It was announced Friday that the Lake City lynching trial will not be called again at the April term of the United states circuit court. Thirteen white citizens, all prominent business men of Lake City, have been tried for the murder of the negro postmaster Baker. The result was a mistrial. Since the trial Baker's crippled wife and crippled children, who was sleeping in the postoffice at Lake City with him when it was set on fire, went to Boston in a dime museum venture.

Attorney Gen. Griggs has instructed the district attorney for a continuance of the case when it is called on Tuesday next.

Chicago Theater Burned.

Chicago, March 31.—The Columbia theater, one of the oldest and most popular play houses in the city, was destroyed by fire, entailing a total loss of $190,000. The fire was discovered in the laundry of the Iroquois club, which occupied apartments on the sixth floor of the building. It is supposed that some hot coals dropped from the stove to the floor. The flames spread with great rapidity, and within ten minutes after the discovery of the fire the theater was beyond saving.

The Iroquois club, whose home was destroyed, is the largest democratic club in Illinois, and has among its members many of the prominent democrats of Chicago.

BRITISH AMBUSHED.

A Convoy, Under Command of Col. Broadwood, Falls into a Trap.

Gen. Colville's Division Shelling the Boer Camp Near Bloemfontein—Boers Expecting Great Things of Their New Commander.

New York, April 1.—A dispatch from Pretoria says: Gen. Louis Botha has been appointed to succeed Gen. Joubert as commander-in-chief of the Transvaal forces.

London, April 1.—Even the details of the engagement Friday at Karee Siding station, a few miles south of Brandfort, fail to instill much interest. It appears to have been a one-sided affair, although the Boers stoutly held their ground against a force three or four times their size for three hours, when, foreseeing the danger of the British cavalry enveloping their flank, the burghers withdrew in good order on their main body at Brandfort, which, according to Lord Roberts, they seem later to have decided to relinquish with the view, doubtless, of occupying a prepared position further north.

Kroonstad, Orange Free State, Friday, March 30.—Gen. Smuts Friday engaged the British at Mafetkop, south of Brandfort, and held them at bay for six hours. The burghers fought well. The casualties are unknown.

The Free State land will assemble at Kroonstad April 2.

London, April 2.—The following dispatch has been received from Bushman Kop, dated Saturday, March 31:

"The British force commanded by Col. Broadwood, consisting of the Tenth Hussars, Household Cavalry, two horse batteries and a force of mounted infantry under Col. Picher, which had been garrisoning Thaba Nchu, was obliged, in consequence of the near approach of a large force of Boers to leave last night.

"Col. Broadwood marched to the Bloemfontein waterworks, south of the Modder, where he encamped at 4 this morning. At early dawn the camp was shelled by the enemy from a near point. Col. Broadwood sent off a convoy with the batteries while the rest of the force remained to act as rear guard.

"The convoy arrived at a deep sprait, where the Boers were concealed, and the entire body walked into ambush and was captured, together with six guns. The loss of life was not great, since most of the British had walked into the trap before a shot was fired.

"Gen. Colville's division which left Bloemfontein early this morning arrived there at noon and he is now shelling the Boers."

Lord Roberts' own report of the affair, if yet received by the war office, has not yet been published and no account of the affair is available to the public except the dispatch from Bushman Kop. Nothing can be said, therefore, regarding the exact extent of the British misfortune. Evidently Col. Broadwood thought it necessary to retreat in haste from Thaba Nchu, as he marched all through Friday night, apparently followed by a considerable force of the enemy. The convoy and guns had to pass through a deep sprait which the Boers had occupied. Six of 12 guns, comprising two batteries, all the waggons and, as is feared, many men, fell into the hands of Boers, whose daring, displayed so near Bloemfontein, shows that they are rapidly recovering heart after their recent reverses.

The hope is expressed here that Gen. Colville will recover the convoy and guns but this is hardly likely in such a difficult country, and it is probable that the next news will be that, after a stiff fight, Gen. Colville has extricated Col. Broadwood from his difficult position, but failed to retrieve the disaster.

Great things are expected by the Boers of the new commander-in-chief, Gen. Botha, who has made his reputation wholly during the present campaign. Foreign officers serving with the Boers have expressed surprise at his clever tactics.

The proof of continuing Boer activity in the Free State will compel greater circumspection on the part of the British and will probably delay the march of Lord Roberts northward.

Detailed accounts of the fight at Karee Siding estimate the Boer forces variously from 3,000 to 5,000 men.

Lord Methuen has issued the following notification at Kimberley: "I have received instructions that if any disturbance occurs west of the Vaal river my force is to return and punish the rebels immediately."

St. Petersburg, April 1.—The semi-official Journal de St. Petersburg publishes an announcement, which it is assumed is inspired, that neither now nor at the end of the war, can the Boers hope for Russian intervention. Russia has no interest in South Africa.

BROOKS' MURDERERS SETTLED

The Chinese Government Ends the Controversy Arising Over the Killing of a Missionary.

Pekin, April 2.—The Chinese government has "settled" the controversy arising out of the murder on December 3 last of Rev. Mr. Brooks, of the church missionary society on the following terms: Two of the murderers will be beheaded; one imprisoned for life, one for ten years, another for two years; a memorial chapel will be erected upon the site of the murder and a tablet will be placed in Canterbury cathedral, England, at the expense of the Chinese government.

Rev. Mr. Brooks at the time of his murder was stationed at Ping Yin, in the province of Shan-Tung. He was captured in that vicinity and killed by members of the seditious society known as "Boxers," who had been very active in destroying villages and slaughtering native Christians. The governor of the province has dispatched a force of cavalry to the scene of disturbance, but the soldiers arrived too late to save the life of Mr. Brooks.

LIVE STOCK CENSUS.

The Productive Capacity of the Entire Mass of Cattle or Sheep for Any Particular Season.

Washington, April 1.—The coming census of live stock will undertake three new features; classification by age and partly by sex and use; a count of pure-blood animals, and an enumeration of stock not on farms and ranges, these last amounting to several million head. The age classification was undertaken in response to a demand of the stock men, who felt that the mere enumeration of animals regardless of age and use was about as valueless as a count of inhabitants without distinction of age, sex, color and occupation. They expressed a desire to secure a basis for calculating the approximate number of live stock and the productive capacity of the entire mass of cattle or sheep for any particular season, and the schedules have been prepared to meet their wishes.

SCHOOL BUILDING BURNED.

Two Firemen Killed, Three Others Injured and Two Schoolboys Were Badly Hurt.

Owosso, Mich., April 2.—Two firemen were killed by falling walls in a fire which destroyed the Central high school of this city. Three other firemen were seriously injured and two pupils of the school were quite badly hurt.

The fire caught from a burning chimney, which spread through the hot air ducts to all parts of the building. The school house was on a hill and the engines were unable to furnish sufficient force to render the fire department much use. A portion of the walls fell unexpectedly, carrying Firemen Ross and Tucker down to the basement with the debris. The other firemen who fell to the walls were badly bruised and crushed, but are expected to recover. The building was valued at $50,000; insurance, $30,000.

TWO MONTHS EXTRA PAY.

New York and Iowa Soldiers Will Be Benefitted by an Amendment to Army Appropriation Bill.

Washington, April 1.—Men who served in the 22nd New York regiment and in Roosevelt's Rough Riders will receive two months extra pay from the government, as the result of an amendment which Representative Clayton, of New York, was instrumental in adding to the army appropriation bill.

These two regiments and two Iowa batteries were mustered out of the service before the general law went into effect giving the volunteers extra pay. The amendment will place these organizations on the same footing as all other volunteers in the Spanish war.

FROM ALL OVER THE STATE.

RUMORS OF INDICTMENTS.

The Fayette County Grand Jury Adjourns, but Its Doings Kept From the Public.

Lexington, Ky., April 1.—The Fayette county grand jury has adjourned. Under a rule of the circuit court recently adopted, no indictments are given out till warrants are served. It is rumored that several of the local officers who assisted in the arrest of Powers and Davis were indicted, but no intimation as to what specific charge.

It is known that Policeman W. E. Looney was indicted for assault and battery. It is alleged that he struck Secretary of State Powers on the head on Saturday night, March 10, when the latter and Capt. Davis were arrested here while trying to escape in the disguise of soldiers' uniforms. Secretary Powers was bleeding so profusely that he had to have his injuries dressed while in the city prison here that night, and he claimed that he was struck after he had been landed in the prison. The officers claim that Secretary Powers resisted arrest when they found him with other soldiers in the car, and that he was struck while they were attempting to take him into custody.

CONTESTANT'S MAIL.

The Postmaster General Gives Instructions to the Postmaster at Frankfort, Ky.

Washington, March 29.—The postmaster general has sent the following telegram to Postmaster Holmes at Frankfort:

"Replying to your telegram, mail addressed to official persons by name is to be delivered to the persons named. Mail addressed to state officers, without designation by name, is to be delivered to the actual incumbents of the offices. The mere fact that contest board has given certificate to contestants will not justify delivery of mail of latter class to them until they are lawfully inducted into office. This reply is based upon your statement that contestees still hold the offices."

This order was issued on the 28th of last month, though it was never made public. Postmaster General Smith said that he did not care to give it out here, but had expected to see it published in Kentucky.

DISTILLERY DESTROYED.

A Negro Employe Covered With Blazing Whisky and Narrowly Escaped Burning to Death.

Paris, Ky., April 2.—The distillery buildings, boiler rooms and doubler stands of the G. G. White Co., owned and operated by the Kentucky Distilleries and Warehouse Cos., were entirely destroyed by fire.

The fire was caused by the bursting of a large copper doubler. Escaping whisky reached the boilers which exploded, and in a few minutes the whole plant was covered with flames. Jack Wall, a Negro employe, was covered with blazing whisky and narrowly escaped being burned to death. The loss is between $30,000 and $40,000, covered by insurance. The distillery was built in 1857, and was once before destroyed by fire. It will be rebuilt.

May Go It Alone.

Louisville, Ky., March 31.—William Elliott, president of the Farmers' bank, of Henderson was in the city on his way to Frankfort to consult the officials of the Frankfort Farmer's bank in regard to the repeal of the bank's charter by the legislature. The Frankfort branch of the bank wants to nationalize, but the Henderson branch does not. The officials of the Henderson branch will make a pull to separate from the other two concerns at Frankfort and Georgetown and become an independent institution.

Will Sue for Damages.

Lexington, Ky., March 30.—As a result of a mistake of trainmen on the Southern road in Kentucky, Mrs. Annie Thurman, of Harrodsburg, Ky., has an attorney here investigating for a heavy damage suit. She says that she boarded a train here to go home last Tuesday and wore a veil and that passengers told the trainmen that she was a Negress and had her removed to the colored coach. They apologized when they learned their mistake and she was allowed to go home in a white coach. Her husband declares that he will sue for damages.

ANOTHER ARREST.

"Tallow" Dick Combs Taken in on an Old Charge, but May Be Held for a Hearing.

Manchester, Ky., March 30.—"Tallow" Dick Combs was arrested at Beattyville by order of Chief of Police Calms, of this city. Combs, who is a Negro, was convicted in this city two years ago for running a "blind tiger" and fined $4 000, which would have kept him in jail for more than 12 years. Shortly after his conviction Combs escaped, and the authorities had heard nothing from him until the confession of Wharton Golden at Frankfort.

While a great deal has been published about Combs' conection with the assassination of Goebel, since Golden's confession, his arrest at Beattyville was solely on a writ from this county, and had no conection with the Frankfort trouble. It is understood, however, that after he is brought here Combs may be rearrested on a warrant charing him with being an accessory to the murder of Goebel.

Beattyville, Ky., March 31.—Tallow Dick Combs has been released from jail on a writ of habeas corpus. The case will be heard before the county judge next Monday. The local authorities refuse to give Combs up to Clark county officers.

Frankfort, Ky., March 30.—H. E. Youtsey was brought before Judge Moore Thursday morning, but was not ready for trial and the case was passed. He will probably be arraigned again Friday.

It is urged in this call that the speakers refrain from partisan views; that they counsel among themselves as to what methods will best tend to a truer citizenship, a reverence for law and order and a proper discharge of political responsibilities.

It recommends the formation of citizens' leagues and a fight against the indiscriminate purchase and ownership of weapons by boys and men in Kentucky.

Miss Lizzie Parker entertained a large crowd of young folks, last Friday evening from Petersburg and surrounding country.

If the amount of tobacco set this season is proportionate with the amount of grown under canvass the crop will be the largest pitched for many years.

Our hustling road overseer, Frank Klopp, has been doiug a large amount of good work on our highways and has them in better shape than they have been for years.

The peach crop will not be a failure by any means, unless caught by frosts later on. The old Mixou and Crawfords late have fared the worst of any being but few live buds left alive.

Some time since one of Marion Bruce's boys loaded his gun with smokeless powder, putting in about the usual amount, of using ordinary powder, in the discharge the gun was badly wrecked the boy escaped with a slight wound in the wrist.

Walton.

Miss Gertrude Schneider has been spending a week with her parents in Crittenden.

Mr. Jas. F. Fishback was in town last Thursday, looking as well as he did twenty years ago.

Mr. J. A. Sanders intends removing the store house on the property bought of Dahling to North Walton immediately, if not sooner. How it can be taken over High street bridge is just now worrying of our folks more than it does Sanders.

On last Thursday morning one of the mail bags destined for Walton was wind sucked under the wheels of the flying train. The bag and its contents were "entirely crushed" into fragments, which went hither and yon on the track for some distance.

The chilling reception our climate has tendered Mr. Sam Hind and family on their return from sunny California has been greatly alleviated by the warm greetings of hosts of friends. It is to be hoped that the improvement noticeable in the members of the family is of so permanent a character that they will remain among us.

Dr. Jones had a narrow escape last week. He was coming down the Beaver grade when the horse's traces got loose and frigbtened the animal, which started to run throwing the doctor out. When it came to the bridge it jumped off into the creek, taking the buggy with him and then stood still. Neither man horse nor buggy injured.

There was a collapse at Mr. E. P. Holder's on last Thursday. Mrs. Holder was giving her Singer machine, which has been in use for 24 years, some fast work when whiz went the shuttle, crash went the wheels and the old thing was a complete wreck in little or no time. Mrs. Holder came down to Fanning's the next day and bought a new one, and has been working out her vexation on it. There is a sad feature in the case. Ed has been so often soothed to slumber by the rattle of the old trap that he cannot sleep so soundly without the accustomed chatter, which in volume and intensity was a good second to an old fashioned ground hog threshing machine.

A visit to the studio of Miss Pearl Byrd, on Saturday last, was a revelation and a surprise. There have been vague hints about an art class in the town, but one learned nothing clearly about it and would naturally suppose that some young folks had taken up some branch of drawing, got a few lessons in crayon or water color and quit. The revelation came on being ushered into a room full of choice paintings, the work of Miss Byrd and her students: Misses Julia Blackburn, Lydia Taylor and Madge Holder. The surprise was in the fact that such good work had been done by girls, who had not taken over a dozeu lessons. Late in May there will be an exhibition and it can be safely said that a good many more will have a revelation and share your with reporter in the surprise. He was somewhat agreeably astouished at the developement in the histrionic art in the recent dramatic entertainments but to realize that we had some, who but a short time ago were school girls, who in a few lessons could produce such evidence of talent and improvement was almost marveious; it speaks well for Miss Byrd that she has such a faculty for developing such talent in so brief a time.

Wm. Snelling would be pleased to have some of those large stone moved out of the road up the Rock Spring branch, so as to not knock the paint off that new wagon he bought, last week.

Some of the prospective candidates for county offices next year, are balllooing for a primary election. Boys, just wait until the Governor is seated and a President is elected, then we will have more time to think of you. I think a primary the first Saturday in August, 1901, will be soon enough and that will give the Republicans less time to fight you.

I attended the funeral, last Sunday, of Mrs. Mary E. Carlton, who departed this life, Saturday, March 31st, at 5 o'clock a. m. She was nearly 84 years of age; she leaves four brothers, four grandchildren and many nephews and nieces to mourn her demise; four of her nephews, all brothers, were pallbearers. Rev. H. G. Blanton was taking a sunbath with the boys on the corner, Tuesday. Hal has just completed a course of lectures in the art of embalming and funeral etiquette, that enables him to conduct funerals in the most satisfactory manner.

Sunday morning the birds begun to warble their spring warbles again and all nature seemed about to break forth into a "glee club" solo, but the cold, southeast wind soon knocked the warble out of the warblers, and solos out of the soloists—so-see-so.

We have often heard of people laughing on one side of their face and crying on the other. We have known the sun to shine over our larboard wheelhouse and a N. by N. W. blizzard blowing over our starboard hurricane deck at the same time. We have read of funeral processions going up Broadway, N. Y., and a marriage procession going up the Aisles of St. Pauls in London at the same time; we have looked through lattice fences before now with rose colored expectations and had 20c worth of amber spit into our left eye inside of two seconds, but honestly and candidly, we never had any man to pin rosegeraniums on our coat collar and hang crepe on our front door all at the same time, until last week. We have whooped it up for 40 poles and felt monstrous bad next day; we have "crawled" it from Sandusky to the Smoky mountains, but in the mellow, glooming of our earliest recollections we cannot recall ever having been presented with a certificate of good character and notified of our death and burial all at the same stroke of a pen, until last week. Now, look er here Bro Tolin, next time you want to etherialize our future prospects (patent applied for on this expression) with a button-hole bouquet, jeopardize the safety of our past calculations by writing up an obituary notice and tying on of crepe just let us know, so we can be dead and gone for certain. Say, Brother! we too believe in the golden thread that bind human hearts together—yes, and the silver one too. We believe in the eternal fitness of all things (that suits), but never will we permit you to hang crepe on the Blade Office until the Ides of November have come and blew; not until Wm. J. Bryan has been elected and Kentucky has gone 40,000 Democratic. No sir! Bro. Tolin, if providence permits the Blade will be published at the "old stand," Sundays excepted, until the 10th of Nov. 1900, by your humble, obedient servant, one of the boys. May the soft, April breezes sing sweetly through your whiskers until we meet again.

One day last week, T. J. Hughes' corps of telephone hustlers made a raid on our town that created a regular boom. First came Capt. Charles Rusk, of the engineers, with Lieut. John Manning and Sam Lancaster, cleaning the way for artillery. Then Major Herbert Snow, of the artillery advanced at a double quick, fireing as he came, assisted by Wm. Howard, Nace Conley and Walter Conley. They reached the last hole at 2:30 o'clock and fired two rounds that shook the foundations and raised rats and stones for four blocks around, but nobody was killed or wounded. At this critical moment, when the destiuy of Union and the telephone business hung on a balance, J. B Eldrege with the ambulance corps rushed in and planted the poles, pulled the wires and made the entire affair a success and a telephone connection from Union to Beaver a grand, all-round fact. Well! coming down to real facts, T. J. Hughes has demonstrated his ability as a telephone line builder, and the Recorder wishes his success may be as unlimited as his nerve and pluck has been to tackle this up to date and much needed improvement, that lots of people desire very much to have, and yet they are slow to risk their cash in building.

The Blade Club has been in session most every day this week and many interesting questions have been up for discussion. The question of written and unwritten law was given 3 or 4 hours consideration at one meeting. Mr. J. R. said there was a written law in Boone county against the sale of spirituous, malt and other extracts of fermented vegetation known to the initiated as "Old Crow," "Hard to Find" and "Keep still for Mother's Sake," and yet if all the people who buy and have bought these (doubtful of origin) extracts of decayed vegetation were hypnotized by the men who sell them and made to stand upon the public highways (of course this will never be), as their ability to defy the law, their traveling over the roads of Boone could only be accomplished on a bicycle and that too in daylight. But, said Mr. J. R., in Texas there is an unwritten law that says, (not writ), "Thou shalt not steal a horse" and no horses are stolen except by people who have a morbid desire to die and die p. d. q. He also said in Northwest Texas there was an unwritten law against taking grub and cattle, but no matter how scarce beef was or grub might be, no man (short of an escaped lunatic), thought of stealing them unless he had made up his mind not to live always and die of old age. In Nevada, he said, a man might kill 25 men, be a first-class citizen and wear diamonds, but if he should forget the unwritten law and steal a miner's gold dust, his name was "Dennis" and he soon traveled to the unknown hence, with a rope around his neck and no mention was made of him in the daily papers either. In conclusion Mr. J. R. said he was no advocate of unwritten law, but would say that written law unenforced was a tarnal sight worse than unwritten law that was enforced and if the good people who voted for local option were in dead earnest there would be no selling of liquor in defiance of the unwritten law.

Rabbit Hash.

Elizabeth Mary Carlton, was born in Madison county, Va., July 31st, 1816, and died at her home in Rabbit Hash, Ky., March 31st, 1900, at the ripe age of 83 years and 8 months. When she was but 9 years of age she removed with her parents to Boone county, Ky., making the difficult overland journey by wagon. Soon after her arrival her venerable father was stricken down by death, leaving a widow and a large family of small children to battle with the hardships of a pioneer's life. In 1840 she was united in marriage with James Carlton, of honored memory; to this union were born two daughters, both of whom together with her husband, have preceded her to the higher life. She was a great sufferer the major portion of her life, but she uncomplainingly bore her afflictions with resignation, until released by the welcome angel of death on Saturday morning of last week. She leaves behind her four brothers, and four grandchildren, together with a large number of relatives and friends to mourn her departure. The testimony of those who knew her best, is unanimous in praise of her integrity and sweetness of temper. Her while life was spent in hard labor, and like others of her generation, she enjoyed but few advantages, and opportunities of the present day, her whole life had been so nearly an equilibrium that life faded away as Longfellow expressed it in the words, "Time has laid his hand gently upon my heart, as the harper lays his open palm upon his harp to deaden its vibrations." Of her disposition much could be said beneficial to the rising generation. Her undeviating rectitude and unswerving fidelity added to her length of days, and her force of character gave her an influence which will live among men when time is no more.

Her funeral occurred from the Pythian Hall at Rabbit Hash on Sunday afternoon at 3 p. m., conducted by Rev. J. F. Carney of the Universalist church at Rising Sun, and was attended by a large concourse of friends and neighbors.

Joe asked if he would give him $40. He said he would. He then said if he would give $50, he believed he would trade. Jeff told him he would give him $50. Joe then told him he would see him later, and they separated. After consulting N. C. Tanner in regard to it, Joe concluded he would trade if Jeff would warrant his colt to work all right, and perfectly sound and give him $65. He said he would give the $65 and the necessary warrantee, but the colt was 19 years old, and the trade was off.

Mrs. J. S. Clutterbuck, of this place, and Mrs. J. B. Berkshire, of Florence, were visiting their relatives down on Gunpowder and Lick creek, last week. See account of accident to their aunt, Mrs. John Wingate, in Hathaway items.

The youngest son of O. W. Gaines, of Bullittsville, was operated on at the Cincinnati hospital a few days ago, for appendicitis. He was in a very critical condition, but at last accounts he had begun to improve and it is hoped that he will soon be restored to health again.

E. E. Fry, of Verona, and representative of the Piano Harvester, was in town Friday. He has traveled extensively in this State, and says the prospects for wheat in Northern Kentucky are very poor, but in the southern part of the State the crop is in a great deal better condition.

D. Linn Gooch, of Covington, and candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress, was in town Monday, and was busy forming the acquaintance of the Boone county Democrats. Mr. Gooch is a splendid mixer, and made a good impression on the Democrats in town. He is certainly out to win.

J. E. Rouse, of Yarnelton, Fayette county, came down to attend April court and meet his many Boone county friends. Julius' appearance indicates that the Blue Grass breezes are congenial. He says the prospects for wheat in his county were never better, and the fields are being grazed to keep them back.

Steven Gaines, a citizen of Woolper Heights, was a visitor to town last Saturday. His robust, rudy appearance one would take as an indication that health conditions in his neighborhood this winter have been all that could have been desired, while a well supplied pantry was conveulent.

It is now reported that the Cincinnati, Lawrenceburg and Aurora electric street railroad will be in operation within two weeks. There is some track yet to be laid between Lawrenceburg and Cleves and also a short strip in Aurora. A test of the boilers, engines and dynamos at the power house at North Bend has already been made, and everything there is in readiness for the opening.

Bert Rouse, a couple of circular saws and a horse and buggy got mixed up in a mud hole near Wood Rigg's last Thursday night. If you remember that was as dark a night as is ever seen, and Bert was coming from the city, where he had taken the saws to have them repaired. It was so dark by the time he reached Pt. Pleasant church he concluded to let the horse select the road, and it left the pike and was near Wood Riggs', where it encountered a very muddy place in the road, and in trying to extricate itself the horse fell and upset the buggy. Mr. Riggs heard the racket and went to Bert's relief, and after some time the horse and buggy were straightened out and Bert was traveling back towards the pike, but was soon side tracked again, and was trying to drive into J. M. Riggs' yard, when Mr. Riggs appeared on the scene and put Bert on the road again and started him for the pike. Bert had now begun to say things that would not look well in print, but it was after an hour's drive and he found himself at the ferry, that he used such hot language that it almost melted his buggy tires. He now borrowed a lantern and again started for home. Having been out long enough to be about Limaburg he got out of the buggy, taking the lantern, to investigate the surroundings that he might know his whereabouts. The first thing to attract his attention was a two story brick house, and he exclaimed, "where am I?"—these are not exactly his words but are the substance of his remark. Not desiring to disturb anybody's slumbers, he investigated further and ran up against a large barn, which he finally recognized as that of W. T. Cloud, half a mile from the Limaburg road. Bert again made remarks, but finally concluded he could not do the subject justice. After considerable time and trouble he reached the main road, and without further incident arrived home in time for breakfast Friday morning. As a result of the mix-up at Wood Riggs' Bert has a badly lacerated hand which he is carrying in a pillow slip. The tow saws were left at the point of Bert's first experience. This trip demonstrates that it is not a good idea to go buggy riding of a dark night and have two circular saws in the vehicle as your companions.

Caught a Dreadful Cold.

Marion Kooke, manager for T. M. Thompson, a large importer of fine millinery at 1658 Milwaukee Avenue, Chicago, says: "During the late severe weather I caught a dreadful cold which kept me awake at night and made me unfit to attend my work during the day. One of my milliners was taking Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a severe cold at that time, which seemed to relieve her so quickly that I bought some for myself. It acted like magic and I began to improve at once. I am now entirely well and feel very pleased to acknowledge its merits." For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington; Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg; O. N. Grant, Bellevue, C. S. Baisly, Bullittsville.

Death has visited our town and taken for our midst an old and esteemed citizen, Mrs. Julia Clore, who was born March 11th, 1823, and died April 3d, 1900, afeter a brief illness. She was stricken Saturday night, and lingered until about 3 a. m. Tuesday. She was a daughter of the late Henry Aylor. She and Churchwell Clore were maried January 11th, 1837. To them were born six children, two girls and four boys, the boys are all living. Mrs. Clore was a kind neighbor and a loving mother to whom her children were devoted and most dutiful.

The funeral was conducted to-day at 11 o'clock by Elder Cornell, after which the remains were futerred in the family cemetery out on the East Bend road.

The Fiscal Court met yesterday, and awarded the contract for building the bridge across Woolper at Grant's ford, to the LaFayette Bridge Co., of Lafayette, Indiana, at $3,410 complete, with approaches, the structure to be completed by August 1st. The bridge will consist of three steel spans, each 68 ft. long, with a 12 foot wooden approach at each end. The $2,500 appropriated by the county has been supplemented by private subscription necessary to meet the contract price, Mr. E. L. Grant having subscribed nearly $1,000 which shows that he is willing to shoulder more than his share of the burden.

CHRIST THE THEME.

He Brings Happiness Into Every Life That He Enters.

All Nature Sings His Praises, Says Dr. Talmage—Hymns Heard in Infancy Have a Strong Influence in After Life.

In this discourse Dr. Talmage shows how Christ brings harmony and melody into every life that He enters: text, Psalms, 118:14: "The Lord is my strength and song."

The most fascinating theme for a heart properly attuned is the Saviour. There is something in the morning light to suggest Him and something in the evening shadow to speak His praise. The flower breathes Him, the stars shine Him, the cascades proclaim Him, all the voices of nature chant Him. Whatever is grand, bright and beautiful, if you only listen to it, will speak His praise. So when in the summer time I pluck a flower I thing of Him who is "the Rose of Sharon and the Lily of the Valley." When I see in the fields a lamb, I say: "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." When in very hot weather I come under a projecting cliff, I say:

Rock of ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in thee!

Over the old-fashioned pulpits there was a sounding board. The voice of the minister rose to the sounding board and then was struck back again upon the ears of the people. And so the 10,000 voices of earth rising up find the heavens a sounding board which strikes back to the ear of all nations the praises of Christ. The heavens tell His glory and the earth shows His handiwork. The Bible thrills with one great story of redemption. Upon a blasted and faded parndise it poured a light of glorious restoration. It looked upon Abraham from the ram caught in the thicket. It spoke in the bleating of the herds driven down to Jerusalem for sacrifice. It put infinite pathos into the speech of uncouth fishermen.

Instead of waiting until you get sick and worn out before you sing the praise of Christ, while your heart is happiest and your step is lightest and your fortunes smile and your way blossoms and the overarching heavens drop upon you their benediction, speak the praises of Jesus.

The old Greek orators, when they saw their audiences inattentive and slumbering, had one word with which they would rouse them up to the greatest enthusiasm. In the midst of their orations they would stop and cry out: "Marathon!" and the people's enthusiasm would be unbounded. My hearers, though you may have been borne down with sin, and though trouble and trials and temptation may have come upon you, and you feel to-day hardly like looking up, methinks there is one grand, royal, imperial word that ought to rouse your soul to infinite rejoicing, and that word is "Jesus."

Taking the suggestion of the text, I shall speak to you of Christ our Song. I remark, in the first place, that Christ ought to be the cradle song. What our mothers sang to us when they put us to sleep is singing yet. We may have forgotten the words; but they went into the fiber of our soul and will forever be a part of it. It is not so much what you formally teach your children as what you sing to them. A hymn has wings and can fly everywhither. One hundred and fifty years after you are dead and "Old Mortality" has worn out his chisel recutting your name on the tombstone, your great-grandchildren will be singing the song which last night you sang to your little ones gathered about your knee. There is a place in Switzerland where, if you distinctly utter your voice, there come back ten or 15 distinct echoes, and every Christian song sung by a mother in the ear of her child shall have 10,000 echoes coming back from all the gates of Heaven. Oh, if mothers only knew the power of this sacred spell, how much oftener the little ones would be gathered, and all our homes would chime with the songs of Jesus!

We want some counteracting influence upon our children. The very moment our child steps into the street he steps into the path of temptation. There are foul-mouthed children who would like to bespoil your little ones. It will not do to keep your boys and girls in the house and make them house plants. They must have fresh air and recreation. God save your children from the scathing, blasting, damning influence of the street! I know of no counteracting influence but the power of Christian culture and example. Hold before your little ones the pure life of Jesus. Let that name be the word that shall exorcise evil from their hearts. Give to your instruction all the fascination of music morning, noon and night. Let it be Jesus, the cradle song. This is important, if your children grow up, but perhaps they may not. Their pathway may be short. Jesus may be wanting that child. Then there will be a soundless step in the dwelling, and the youthful pulse will begin to flutter, and the little hands will be lifted for help. You cannot help. And a great agony will pinch at your heart, and the cradle will be empty, and the nursery will be empty, and the world will be empty. No little feet standing on the stairs. No toys scattered on the carpet. No quick following from room to room. No strange and wondering questions. No upturned face with laughing blue eyes come for a kiss, but only a grave and a wreath of lilies blossoms on the top of it and the flowers on it a sighing at night fall with no one to put to bed. The Heavenly Shepherd will take that lamb safely anyhow, whether you have been faithful or unfaithful, but would it not have been pleasanter if you could have heard from those lips the praises of Christ? I never read anything more beautiful than this about a child's departure: The account said: "She folded her hands, kissed her mother goodby, sang her hymn, turned her face to the wall, said her little prayer and then died."

Oh, if I could gather up in one paragraph the last words of the little ones who have gone out from these Christian circles, and I could picture the calm looks and the folded hands and sweet departure, methinks it would be grand and beautiful as one of Heaven's great doxologies! In my parish in Philadelphia a little child was departing. She had been sick all her days and a cripple. It was noonday when she went, and, as the shadow of death gathered on her eyelid she thought it was evening and time to go to bed, and so she said: "Good night, papa! Good-night, mamma!" and then she was gone! It was a "good-night" to pain and "good-night" to tears and "good-night" to death and "good-night to earth, but it was "good-morning" to Jesus — it was "good-morning" to Heaven. I can think of no cradle song more beautiful than Jesus.

I next speak of Christ as the old man's song. Quick music loses its charm for the aged ear. The school-girl asks for a schottish or a glee, but her grandmother asks for a "Balerma" or the "Portuguese Hymn." Fifty years of trouble have tamed the spirit, and the keys of the music board must have a solemn tread. Though the voice may be tremulous, so that grandfather will not trust it in church, still he has the psalm book open before him, and he sings with his soul. He hums his grandchild asleep with the same tune he sang 40 years ago in the old country meeting house. Some day the choir sings a tune so old that the young people do not know it, but if starts the tears down the cheeks of the aged man, for it reminds him of the revival scene in which he participated and of the radiant faces that long since went to dust and of the gray-haired minister leaning over the pulpit and sounding the good tidings of great joy.

I speak to you again of Jesus as the night song. Job speaks of him who giveth songs in the night. John Welch, the old Scotch minister, used to put a plaid across his bed on cold nights, and some one asked him why he put that there. He said: "Oh, sometimes in the night I want to sing the praise of Jesus and to get down and pray. Then I just take that plaid and wrap it around me to keep myself from the cold." Songs in the night! Night of trouble has come down upon many of you. Commercial losses put out one star, slanderous abuse puts out another star, domestic bereavement has put out 1,000 lights, and gloom has been added to gloom and night to night and sting to sting, and one midnight has seemed to borrow the fold from another midnight to wrap itself in more unbearable darkness, but Christ has spoken peace to your heart, and you sing:

Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly,
While the billows near me roll,
While the tempest still is high.
Hide me, O my Saviour! Hide
Till the storm of life is past,
Safe into the haven guide;
Oh, receive my soul at last.

Songs in the night! Songs in the night! For the sick, who have no one to turn the hot pillow, no one to put the taper on the stand, no one to put ice on the temples or pour out the soothing anodyne or utter one cheerful word. Yet songs in the night! For the poor, who freeze in the winter's cold and swelter in the summer's heat and munch the hard crusts that bleed the sore gums and shiver under blankets that cannot any longer be patched and tremble because rent day is come and they may be set out on the sidewalk and looking into the starved face of the child and seeing famine there and death there, coming home from the bakery and saying in the presence of the little famished ones: "Oh, my God, flour has gone up!" Yet songs in the night! Songs in the night! For the widow who goes to get the back pay of her husband, slain by the "sharpshooters," and knows it is the last help she will have, moving out of a comfortable home in desolation, death turning back from the exhausting cough and the pale cheek and the lusterless eye and refusing all relief. Yet songs in the night! Songs in the night! For the soldier in the field hospital, no surgeon to bind up the gunshot fracture, no water for the hot lips, no kind hand to brush away the flies from the fresh wound, no one to take the loving farewell, the groaning of others poured into his own groan, the blasphemy of others plowing up his own spirit, the condensed bitterness of dying away from home among strangers. Yet songs in the night! Songs in the night! "Ah!" said one dying soldier, "tell my mother that last night there was not one cloud between my soul and Jesus!" Songs in the night! Songs in the night!

This Sabbath day came. From the altars of 10,000 churches has smoked up the savor of sacrifice. Ministers of the gospel preached in plain English, in broad Scotch, in flowing Italian, in harsh Choctaw. God's people assembled in Hindoo temple and Moravian church and Quaker meeting house and sailors' bethel and king's chapel and high-towered cathedral. They sang, and the song floated off amid the spice groves or struck the icebergs or floated off into the western pines or was drowned in the clamor of the great cities. Lumbermen sang it and the factory girls and the children in the Sabbath class and the trained choirs in great assemblages. Trappers, with the same voice with which they shouted yesterday in the stag hunt, and mariners with throats that only a few days ago sounded in the hoarse blast of the sea hurricane, they sang it. One theme for the sermons. One burden for the song. Jesus for the invocation. Jesus for the Scripture lesson. Jesus for the baptismal font. Jesus for the sacramental cup. Jesus for the benediction. But the day has gone. It rolled away on swift wheels of light and love. Again the churches are lighted. Tides of people again setting down the streets. Whole families coming up the church aisle. We must have one more service. What shall we preach? What shall we read? Let it be Jesus, everybody says; let it be Jesus. We must have one more song. What shall it be, children? Aged men and women, what shall it be? Young men and maidens, what shall it be? If you dared to break the silence of this auditory, there would come up thousands of quick and jubilant voices, crying out, "Let it be Jesus! Jesus! Jesus!"

We sing His birth—the barn that sheltered Him, the mother that nursed Him, the cattle that fed beside Him, the angels that woke up the shepherds, shaking light over the midnight hills. We sing His ministry—the tears He wiped away from the eyes of the orphans, the lame men that forgot their crutches, the damsel who from the bier bounded out into the sunlight, her locks shaking down over the flushed cheek, the hungry thousands who broke the bread as it blossomed into larger loaves—that miracle by which a boy with five loaves and two fishes became the sutler of a whole army. We sing His sorrows—His stone-bruised feet, His aching heart, His mountain loneliness, His desert hunger, His storm-pelted body, the eternity of anguish that shot through His last moments, and the immeasurable ocean of torment that heaved up against His cross in one foaming, wrathful, omnipotent surge, the sun dashed out, and the dead, shrond wrapped, breaking open their sepulchers and rushing out to see what was the matter. We sing His resurrection—the guard that could not keep Him, the sorrow of His disciples, the clouds piling up on either side in pillared splendors as He went through, treading the pathless air, higher and higher, until He came to the foot of the throne, and all heaven kept jubilee at the return of the conqueror. Oh, is there any song more appropriate for a Sabbath night than this song of Jesus? Let the passers-by in the street hear it, let the angels of God carry it amidst the thrones. Sound it out through the darkness: Jesus, the night song, appropriate for any hour, but especially sweet and beautiful and blessed on a Sabbath night.

A Christian woman, the wife of a minister of the Gospel, was dying in the parsonage near the old church, where on Saturday night the choir used to assemble and rehearse for the following Sabbath, and she said: "How strangely sweet the choir rehearses to-night. They have been rehearsing there for an hour." "No," said some one about her, "the choir is not rehearsing to-night." "Yes," she said, "I know they are. I hear them singing. How very sweetly they sing!" Now, it was not a choir of earth that she heard, but the choir of Heaven. I think that Jesus sometimes sets ajar the door of Heavrn, and a passage of that rapture greets our ears. The minstrels of Heaven strike such a tremendous strain the walls of jasper cannot hold it.

I wonder—and this is a question I have been asking myself all the service—will you sing that song? Will I sing it? Not unless our sins are pardoned and we learn now to sing the praise of Christ will we ever sing it there. The first great concert that I ever attended was in New York when Julien in the Crystal palace stood before hundreds of singers and hundreds of players upon instruments. Some of you may remember that occasion. It was the first one of the kind at which I was present, and I shall never forget it. I saw that one man standing and with the hand and foot wield that great harmony, beating the time. It was to me overwhelming. But, oh, the grander scene when they shall come from the east and from the west and from the north and from the south, "a great multitude that no man can number," into the temple of the skies, host beyond host, rank beyond rank, gallery above gallery, and Jesus will stand before that great host to conduct the harmony with His wounded hands and wounded feet! Like the voice of many waters, like the voice of mighty thunderings, they shall cry: "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive blessings and riches and honor and glory and power, world without end. Amen and amen!" Oh, if my ear shall hear no other sweet sounds, may I hear that! If I join no other glad assemblage, may I join in that.

I was reading of the battle of Agincourt, in which Henry V. figured, and it is said after the battle was won, gloriously won, the king wanted to acknowledge the Divine interposition, and he ordered the chaplain to read the Psalm of David and when he came to the words: "Not unto us, O Lord, but to Thy name be the praise," the king discounted, and all the cavalry discounted, and all the great host, officers and men, threw themselves on their faces. Oh, at the story of the Saviour's love and the Saviour's deliverance, shall we not prostrate ourselves before Him and the hosts of earth and hosts of Heaven, falling upon our faces and crying: "Not, unto us, not unto us, but unto Thy name be the glory!" "Until the day break and the shadows flee away turn our beloved and be thou like a roe or a young hart upon the mountains of Bether."

ITS MANY FAILURES.

The McKinley Administration Has Been at Variance with True American Principles.

McKinley's administration came into power as the result of a campaign in which all the men who opposed him and the views for which his party stood were described as anarchists, as men who did not stand by the constitution of the United States, and dangerous factors in public life.

What has been the result?

We have had the McKinley administration, and it has turned out to be the one administration that political history records which has been ready at all times to sacrifice the constitution of the United States to the immediate needs of politics.

A few days ago this administration forced through the house of representatives a bill for the government of Porto Rico which is an absolute negation of everything for which the constitution stands. It means that congress, by and with the influence of the president, feels justified in setting aside the constitution, in ignoring absolutely that constitutional provision which declares that taxation shall be uniform throughout all of the United States, and is ready now to fix a plan of taxation for our dependent territories which they dare not apply to the territories within the borders of the United States.

Three years ago the New York Journal took a manly, magnificent and inspiring stand in behalf of free Cuba. The editor of the Journal and the readers of the Journal must know how hard it was to compel President McKinley to take up this fight. McKinley at that time, as at this time, was dominated wholly by the commercial classes—by men who would sacrifice every principle of national honor—sacrifice every tenet of liberty for their own pockets.

But, after all, the political problems which confront the people of the United States are not so greatly international issues as they are home and domestic issues. There are people, many of them in the republican party, and I am afraid some in the democratic party, who would like to divert attention from the crying evils which exist in our own land to questions of international policy. I hope that they will not be able to accomplish this end. We have here to-day certain domestic problems which demand attention, and which, if not solved, will result in the ruin of the nation. The greatest, perhaps, of these is the question of trusts, and, whether rightly or wrongly, I feel that it is fair to call attention to the fact that whatever may be the declaration of the republican platform on the question of trusts, it has been under the McKinley administration that the trusts have had their most extraordinary development.

To put in a few words what I thing is the opinion of the men with whom I am associated in democratic party work about the McKinley administration, it is this:

Controlled by the money power.

With England in the fight against the South African republics.

Imperialistic and desirous of increasing the army.

Wholly unfriendly to the working classes.

Aristocratic at every point.

The political movement with which I am associated rests on democracy and on the silver republicans and the populace, but, nevertheless, I believe that when men of this type, professing to be with us, show themselves to be absolutely without any sort of sympathy for the principles of liberty as laid down by the constitution, it is the duty of the democratic party to repudiate them, cast them out—to destroy them so far as may be possible.

It does not seem necessary for me to say more than this. I think that the weakness, the folly and the danger of the McKinley administration all rest on the tendency which President McKinley has manifested to strengthen the military force of the government, to ignore the constitution, to disavow the Declaration of Independence, and to set up in this union an oligarchy which shall overthrow the republic.—W. J. Abbot, in N. Y. Journal.

WATCH THEM CLOSELY.

The Republican Ilne and Cry Against McKinley May Be All a Trick.

The McKinley organs are filled with republican protests against the carrying out by the managers of the party of the personal imperial policy of the president.

——Every issue contains something like the following from a prominent republican senator or representative:

"I am opposed to the Porto Rican tariff bill in its entirety. I am uncompromisingly opposed to the ship subsidy bill; the president is violating the constitution; the downfall of the republic will date from the administration of William McKinley," and other denuncintions of imperialism, etc.

One would suppose that with all this hue and cry, that a large number of prominent republicans are upon the point of abandoning Mr. McKinley, but is is all done for effect and is part of a scheme to again deceive and betray the people of the United States as they were deceived and betrayed in 1896. Here is the test:

Do any of them vote against the McKinley policy on the floor of congress? Indeed not. The record shows that all of them fall into line and eat their own denuncintions. Even that once grand old man, Hoar, whose tears have been creating a political freshet throughout the country, who was accused of backing Aguinaldo, nnnounces his determination to vote for William McKinley. Is it the party lash that is so galling? No, it is the voice of the pocket—the fear that principle will relegate them to black bread and sour beer. The flesh pots of the republican party, of the trusts, syndicates, combines, banks and money-lenders, twist their rubber necks away from justice, equity and liberty, and while their mouths spout the smoke of virtue, morality and patriotism, the gastric juice of their stomachs—the only hearts they possess—drivels with the McKinley-Hanna-Rockefeller nutriment.

These men have not the courage of their convictions, or else they are arrant hypocrites. Uriah Heeps weeping over the wrongs of mankind and helping to create greater wrongs. They agitate for agitation's sake, and cover up their rank corruption with a filmy veil of virtue and patriotism which should not deceive anyone. Whenever a republican is found denouncing McKinley or any policy of the managers of the republican party, a glance behind the scenes will expose the Roman augurs working the strings that work the Delphic oracle.

"Pears ter me dis hero's a mighty hard road to travel."

A REMINISCENCE.

How a School Girl Obtained the Signature of General Lawton.

"More than ten years ago, when journeying east from California," said a lady now living in Detroit, "even though only two days on the way, our party became weary and welcomed every addition to the little company in the Pullman, though they came in at long intervals. When we reached the station, Fort Wingate, Ariz., the school girl was distinctly disappointed that nothing resembling a fort was in sight, and not a blue coat visible from the car platform.

"On reentering the car, however, we found that a new arrival, unmistakably a soldier, had appropriated the seat across the aisle from us. It was not long before he was making friends with Curly-locks, the three-year-old pet of the party, and of course that soon served as an introduction to her mamma, and we learned that this modest, browned soldier was on his way to Kansas City to attend the wedding of a soldier friend. He proved a most entertaining companion, and as Curly-locks' mamma in her ingenious way would lead him into speaking of some of his experiences, the school girl was delighted to realize that she was listening to a genuine soldier. Having but recently met Gen. Miles at a social function in Los Angeles, where he was considerable of a "lion," she asked the soldier, whose name we had not learned, if he had ever seen the general. With a twinkle in his eye, he admitted having seen him, and then with the school-girl and Curly-locks' mamma as delighted auditors, he told in a delightfully childlike manner, and a too briefly how, under Gen. Miles' orders, he was one of the men who went after Geronimo—giving us for the first time the correct pronunciation of that name.

"After the fashion of travelers, as the party neared Kansas City, where all could separate, an exchange of visiting cards was made, with promises to renew the acquaintances so pleasantly begun. The school-girl protesting that she might lose a card, but not the precocious journal she had kept of her trip, asked the soldier to write his name in that small book, and today among her treasures, with a tiny silk flag beneith it—her tribute to the hero—is the autograph, Henry A. Lawton, U. S. A."—Detroit Free Press.

LACK GOOD MANNERS.

New York Boys Who Never Give Up Their Seats in Public Conveyances to Ladies.

Nine out of ten of the boys and young men who travel up and down the elevated roads of New York are absolutely void of good mnnners as are a lot of wild Indians—probably more so. It is so seldom that one of these will get up and give a lady a seat that when it does occur the event creates surprise.

Scores, yes hundreds of times, have I seen old and middle-aged women hang on to a strap mile after mile, while some unlicked whelp of a boy has set in front of her in stolid indifference. Nor were these always loafers or boys going to their work—fully as often the selfish fellow will be a well-dressed schoolboy or one whose manners otherwise will show a decent bringing up and good manners at home. They don't care, that's all. They have been taught it by somebody.

Time and again I have seen a mother sit complacently with a half-grown boy or girl beside her while other women stood up. Did she care? Did she suggest to the boy that he should arise and give his seat to some poor old woman? Not a bit of it. She had paid for that seat and meant to keep it in the family. In such cases I have always hoped that she might be clinging to a strap the next time, while some other mother's darling kicked his feet against her dress and stared at her in complacent selfishness.

There is probably not a city in America that can compare with New York for the number of street car hogs to the square foot. This don't mean the boys only, by a long shot.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

FIFTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

Washington, March 26.—Senate—The Alaskan civil code bill was under consideration during the greater part of the session. An amendment was agreed to taxing a license upon almost every kind of trade and commerce in the District of Alaska, the license ranging from $50 to $500 per annum. The measure had not been disposed of at the conclusion of the session.

House—The house began consideration of the army appropriation bill but the debate was without exciting incidents, being confined to the discussion of army matters. Chairman Hull, in charge of the bill, explained its provisions; Mr. Jett criticised the policy of rushing officers through the high grades of the army just prior to retirement. Mr. Cox and Mr. Ridsely opposed generally a permanent increase of the army as prejudicial to the best interests of the country and Mr. Meyer discussed the Philippine policy, opposing the retention of the islands.

Washington, March 27.—Senate—Little progress was made with the Porto Rico tariff and government bill. It was under discussion for nearly three hours but the greater part of the time was consumed in the consideration of a free coinage amendment offered by Mr. Morgan. The amendment is still pending. The Alaskan civil code bill was considered during the morning hours.

House—Representative Carter, of Kansas, introduced a bill to establish a bureau of criminal information in connection with the department of justice. It provides for the collection of records, photographs, measurements, etc., of criminals convicted in federal, military or naval courts. Other house bills introduced were: Authorizing the use of a part of the National cemetery at Arlington for the burial of deceased enlisted men and their wives, and forbidding the government sale of stamped envelopes bearing any lithographing, printing, etc. The army appropriation bill was taken up and debated until adjournment.

Washington, March 28.—Senate—The senate agreed to vote on the Porto Rican government and tariff bill Tuesday afternoon at four o'clock. Bills were passed as follows: Authorizing the adjustment of rights of settlers on the Navajo Indian reservation in Arizona; providing for the introduction of testimony in behalf of the defendant in all preliminary hearing of a criminal nature. The amendment offered by Mr. Carter, of the Alaskan civil code bill relating to the mining for gold under the waters of Cape Nome was agreed to but no further progress was made with the measure.

House—The house devoted practically the whole day to the consideration of the army appropriation bill. Several minor amendments were adopted and about half the bill was considered. There was a good deal of extemporaneous debate during the day, little of which was pertinent to the bill.

Washington, March 29.—Senate—A direct vote was reached upon the motion to strike from the Porto Rico measure the provision levying 15 per cent of the Dingley law duties on Porto Rican products. The proposition was defeated by a vote of 16 to 33. While the vote is regarded as presaging the passage of the measure it is not regarded as indicating the final vote on the bill. The bill was under discussion throughout the entire session, several important amendments being agreed to.

House—After four days of a stormy debate the house passed the army appropriation bill. One of the last amendments adopted opens soldiers' homes to officers and men of volunteer and regular armies during and since the close of the Spanish war. The conference report on the bill for the relief of Mrs. Lawrence O. Murray, widow of Gen. Lawrence O. Murray, was agreed to. The senate bill for the relief of Oklahoma University of Langston for colored students. Considerable progress was made with the Porto Rican measure during the day, most of the committee amendments and several offered by senators being disposed of.

House—The day was devoted to war claims, but only three bills were passed, as follows: To refer the claims of Geo. W. Lawrence during the Civil war in connection with the construction of the Montgomery & Eufaula railroad, to the court of claims; to refer the claim of Hiram Johnson and others for cotton burned in East Tennessee by the confederate forces to the court of claims; and to pay Mathias Pederson, of Spring Valley, Wis., $200.

Washington, March 31.—Senate—The entire time of the session was taken up in discussing the Porto Rican bill, the feature being an exhaustive speech by Mr. Fairbanks, of Indiana, who vigorously supported the pending measure.

House—The fortification appropriation bill was passed just as it came from the committee; it carries $5,053,488. A resolution was adopted to reelect the present board of managers of the national soldiers' home. A three hours' political debate was precipitated by a partisan political speech made by Mr. Shattuck, of Ohio, many members of both sides being drawn into it.

POSTMASTER REMOVED.

J. C. Graham, Provo, Utah, Charged With Being a Polygamist—Officials Exonerated.

Washington, April 1.—It was announced at the post office department that J. C. Graham had been removed as postmaster at Provo, Utah, on March 28, and a temporary successor in the person of Neal Smoot appointed in his stead. Mr. Smoot was selected by the bondsmen of Graham, and will retain office until some one is selected to take permanent charge.

Graham was removed as a result of an investigation by the house post office committee of charges that he was a polygamist. The committee found that he was guilty as charged, but exonerated the present and all officials of the post office department of any knowledge that he was guilty of polygamy at the time of his appointment.

I thought I would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but I want your advice before beginning its use. I have become very much alarmed about her, as she is getting so weak."—MRS. MATILDA A. "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It affords me great pleasure to tell you of the benefit my daughter has received from the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After beginning the use of your medicine she began to mend rapidly and is now able to be at her work. Her menses are regular and almost painless. I feel very thankful to you and expect to always keep your Vegetable Compound in my house. It is the best medicine I ever knew. HE WAS AGREEABLE.

Would Let the Old Uncle Shoot if He Found Him in Such a Position.

This young fellow is engaged to a pretty Detroit girl, but they don't care to publish the bans until after Lent. This disturbs an irascible old uncle of hers, who has a daughter of his own, too much after his own style to be a favorite. He took it upon himself to send for the young man the other day.

"Are you going to marry that niece of mine?" he asked, tersely, when they were alone in the dining office.

"Pardon me, sir, but I must decline to answer. She has a father and a mother, and I'm on good terms with them. I fail to see that it is your affair."

"There's a whole lot that you fail to see, young man. I'm really the head of our family, and I'm not shirking my duty. Her parents are a couple of chumps. Are you or are you not engaged?"

"Your force me to say, sir, that it is none of your infernal business, and that you are just what I heard you were, a sour, cross grained old curmudgeon."

"See here, sonny, I'll not handy words with the likes of you, but if you had been going with my daughter as long as you have my niece, I wouldn't do a thing but put a revolver to your head, informing you that if you didn't marry her I'd shoot."

"And I'd lug of you to shoot."—Detroit Free Press.

Husband and Wife at the Theater Who Appear to Be Engaged in Conversation.

A man and wife enter the theater. As soon as they are seated and she digs around for the hat pins and removes her hat they look at each other smilingly and seem to unbuckle, to be carrying on an animated conversation. Here's what they're really saying:

Husband—Your hair's crushed and plastered down on it just like a dago barber's. Can't you give it a swipe that'll—

Birds of Passage.

"No, I do not make friends as easily as I used to with my fellow-travelers," said the man who was relating European experiences. "It is not because I feel less sociably inclined, but because of the ideal setback I received at Gibraltar. In the hotel office one morning I uttered into conversation with an Englishman and woman who seemed to me to be the right sort. They did not meet my friendly overtures with the usual 'Oh!' and an English stare. On the contrary, they seemed anxious to become acquainted with me, and soon we were chatting pleasantly. I congratulated myself upon my good fortune in taking in with such agreeable people, who were almost good enough to be Americans. We discussed Gibraltar and were just planning a sight-seeing expedition for the following day when one of the hotel waiters thrust his head in the doorway and said: 'The missus wants the both of yez.' My new found friends were the maid and man-servant of the duchess of Cleveland, Lord Rosebery's mother."—Detroit Free Press.

PERUNA PROTECTS OUR HOMES.

The Roberts Family, of Falls City, Neb., Are Healthy and Happy—A Rare Sight in These Days. They Say, "We Think Peruna Is The Greatest Medicine On Earth."

No man is better known in the State of Nebraska than Mr. Carl T. Roberts, contractor and mason. A typical American—active, shrewd and full of business sagacity. He is not only a provider for his family, but a protector. In a recent letter to Dr. Hartman he writes, among other things, as follows:

"Our boy, James, had the membranous croup, and repeated attacks of lung fever. Our boy, Charlie, was also subject to repeated attacks of pneumonia and pleurisy. Our third boy, John, was subject to fever and ague (malarial) and liver trouble. Your remedy, Peruna, cured my boys entirely, and now I have three of the healthiest boys in the State of Nebraska, which I attribute to your medicine. My wife was also cured of each trouble which Peruna also cured. Altogether for my whole family we have used nineteen bottles of Peruna, and have thus saved $500 in doctors' bills. I am a contractor and mason by trade and am known all over Nebraska. I have had a stomach trouble which has been greatly relieved by your remedy, Peruna, for which I am still taking it. We think it is the greatest medicine on earth." C. T. Roberts, Falls City, Nebraska.

Hon. William Youngblood.

Hon. William Youngblood, Auditor for the Interior, writes from Washington, D. C., to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, as follows: "I've often heard of your great medicine and have persuaded my wife, who has been much of a sufferer from catarrh, to try Peruna, and after using one bottle she has wonderfully improved. It has proved all you have claimed for it, and I take pleasure in recommending it to anyone who is afflicted with catarrh." Peruna has become, in a multitude of households, absolutely indispensable.

Mr. T. G. Walker, Carneiro, Kansas, writes: "It is with pleasure that I report that I am better than I have been for many years. I believe Peruna is without a doubt the best medicine for fever was used in a family. It has cured my nervousness, with which I have been afflicted for a great number of years."

It is a fact of ever-increasing astonishment that so many otherwise sensible and prudent people will, for the neglect of so simple a precaution as to have a bottle of Peruna at hand, bring upon themselves the needless suffering and foolish expense that a practitioner of medicine is forced to witness every day.

As soon as the value of Peruna is fully appreciated by every household, both as a preventive and cure of these afflictions, scores of thousands of lives will be saved, and hundreds of thousands of chronic, lingering cases of disease prevented. Peruna is the household safeguard.

WHAT ALABASTINE IS.

Alabastine is the original and only durable wall coating on the market. It is entirely different from all kalsomine preparations. Alabastine is made ready for use in white or fourteen beautiful tints by the addition of cold water. It is put up in dry powdered form, in packages, properly labeled, with full directions on every package. It takes the place of scalding kalsomines, wall paper and paint for walls. Alabastine can be used on plaster, brick, wood or canvas, and a child can brush it on.

WHAT "KALSOMINES" ARE.

Kalsomines are cheap and temporary preparation, manufactured from whiting, chalks, hydrated lime, etc., and put on the walls with decaying animal glue. Alabastine is not a kalsomine. It is a rock-base cement, which sets, and it hardens with age. It can be re-coated and re-decorated without having to wash and scrape off its old coats. Alabastine is utilized to a great extent in hospitals, as it prevents the accumulation of dirt and the congregating of disease germs, being disinfectant in its nature.

CHURCHES AND SCHOOLHOUSES.

The interior walls of churches, schoolhouses and all public halls should never be coated with anything but the durable and pure Alabastine. So evident has this fact become, that hundreds of tons are used annually for this work. The genuine Alabastine does not rub or scale off. It is cleanly during the long period of its usefulness. Every owner of a building should use it. Ask your paint dealer or druggist for card of tints, and write for free copy of our interesting booklet to Alabastine Co., Grand Rapids, Mich.

REJECT THE "JUST AS GOOD."

The dealer who tells you that he can sell you the "same thing" as Alabastine or "something just as good," either is not posted or is trying to deceive you. In offering something he has bought cheap and is trying to sell on Alabastine's demand, he may not realize the danger to himself as well as to you. Beware of all new substitutes. Dealers risk a suit for damages by selling and consumers by using an infringement. Alabastine Co. own the right to make and sell wall coatings adapted to mix with cold water.

MORTALITY IN THE ARMY.

Soldiering the Safest Profession in the World.

As it is by no means impossible that all ablebodied Englishmen may have, in the near future, to become defenders of their country, it is reassuring to learn, on the authority of statisticians, that soldiering is about the least dangerous profession in the world.

Protestant clergymen are popularly supposed to be the best male "lives" going. But they die at a rate of nearly 11 per thousand each year, while the British army shuffles off this mortal coil at a rate of less than five per thousand. Even ladies' maids, who have usually a life of great comfort and little work, die faster than this, departing this life at the rate of eight per thousand.

It might well be supposed that the troops who do as much fighting as the British soldiers abroad would be carried off in large numbers. This was true in the past, when the conditions favored disease, but in these days war is by no means as dangerous. For instance, in all our wars of the past 20 years the death rate on the battlefield has been only 15 per thousand per annum.

Now solicitors cannot be said to be engaged in very risky work, yet they depart hence at the rate of 16 per thousand per annum. Roman Catholic priests die at the rate of 18 per thousand, and cabmen at the rate of 26 per thousand. Your chances of death, then, if you become a cabman, are five times as great as if you join the army at home, and nearly twice as great as if you form part of the fighting forces in India or Africa. And there are scores of trades—such as lead working, glass-blowing, match making, public-house keeping, etc.—ever so much more dangerous to life than cab driving.—London Mail.

BILLS OF FARE.

Duke Henry of Brunswick Invented the Menu Card.

The menu was not invented in France. It was Duke Henry of Brunswick who was first observed in the intervals of a banquet to scan carefully a long strip of paper by the side of his plate. When the curious guests ventured to inquire into the nature of his studies he explained that it was a sort of programme of the dishes which he had commanded from the cook, to the intent that if some delicacy which especially appealed to him were marked for a late stage in the repast he might carefully reserve his appetite for it. The simplicity and beauty of the idea appealed instantly to the good duke's convives, and the menu card from that moment became an institution.

In the old-fashioned form the menu was usually written large, on cards, of such imposing dimensions that room for one only could be found at each end of the table. In the medieval dinner this aid to selection must have been an absolute necessity, for the medieval dinner was a mine of surprises. It was divided into courses, but whereas nowadays the diner has a general idea that fish will follow soup, and that entree is succeeded by relevé, and can conceive generally the sort of demand that each course will make upon his appetite and digestion, there was no possible arguing as to what was going to happen at an early English dinner, and close study failed to reveal the existence of any principle of arrangement.—Invention.

Getting Out of a Difficulty.

Mr N——, a struggling lawyer in a small town in Ohio, received a call, says the Pittsburgh Dispatch, from a farmer who wanted legal advice. Mr. N—— took down a much-used volume from his small bookcase and gave the required advice for which he charged the modest sum of three dollars. His client handed him a five-dollar bill. With a troubled look Mr. N—— flushed in the face as he passed his fingers nervously through his pockets and his embarrassment increased as he continued his search among the papers on his desk. "Well," said he, taking down the law book again and turning over the pages, "I'll give you two more dollars' worth of advice."

Sagacity.

"Did you do anything about that letter from the escaped criminal who is sick and wants to give himself up?"

"Of course," replied the detective. "You didn't think we would neglect an important clew like that, did you?"

"What steps did you take?"

"We ran no risk of letting that fellow fool us again. We sent the letter to an expert and made sure that the handwriting was his."—Washington Star.

Hindoo Women.

The Hindoo holy books forbid a woman to see dancing, hear music, wear jewels, blacken her eyebrows, eat dainty food, sit at a window, or view herself in a mirror, during the absence of her husband, and allow him to divorce her if she has no sons, if she is his property, scolds him, quarrels with her neighbors, or presumes to eat before he has finished his meal.

WRITERS WIN BATTLES.

Blanktown Blower's Correspondent Tells How He Won the Fight.

We were a little late, says the Blanktown Blower, with our report of the battle that was fit at Vanila Bay, but the reader who seeks after the truth will prize our only authentic account a good deal more, maybe, for its having come in later than any other one. The letter our correspondent sent was mislaid in the Hong-Kong post office for several days on account of the envelope not bearing the letters "U. S. A.," showing the intense ignorance of those heathens where every prospect pleases and only man is vile—just as if everybody on earth did not know where Blanktown is. When at last the letter was forwarded to me, together with a note of apology from the new republican postmaster at Hong-Kong, is was as follows:

"Vanila, Phillipene Ilands, May 2.

"Special Correspondence the Blanktown Blower.

"Yesterday morning at an early hour Admiral Dewey and myself, accompanied with some aid in the shape of armed vessels, sailed into the bay of Vanila under cover of the darkness. Mr. Dewey and myself were not on the same vessel, by request of Mr. Dewey. He feared two such heavy weights would sink any one vessel in the navy. The vessel containing Mr. Dewey was the Olympia, and that containing myself was the Hugh McCullough. The vessels containing Dewey and myself and a few other persons passed through the straits past the batteries in single file, showing no lights only stern lights. Mr. Dewey had personally warned me not to appear while entering the harbor, as danger to me might result, and said that he would rather lose all of his fleet than me. I call him George most of the time. My eagerness for battle, however, could not be restrained, and before the vessel containing me had passed the land batteries I stuck my head up above the deck to take a peep at the defenses that loomed up in the darkness. The moment my head appeared the enemy saw something bright and gave the alarm, and immediately the batteries belched forth their hellish flames and their burdens of shot and shell. I have it on reliable authority that when the first gun was fired, George, on his vessel, said: 'There! I knew he'd do that. He's so reckless in matters where personal danger is concerned.' The battle continued. George sent for me to come aboard his ship, so that, in case we went down, we could go together. He and I stood on the bridge of the Olympia, watching the progress of the battle. There we stood, and in the intervals between observations on each other's splendid courage and coolness, we talked about my report for the Blower. George wants you to save him four copies. He'll pay for them all right, as he will maybe get his wages raised after this fight. Several times George asked me if I could suggest anything else to do to the Spaniards, after he had nearly all the vessels sunk or burning, but I assured him that if I were doing it myself I could have done nothing more than he had done. This pleased him, and then I and he went down stairs to breakfast. We then renewed our battle, exposing ourselves with great recklessness and splendid courage, until it is a wonder that this report was ever sent in. After completing the destruction we had so well begun, I and George retired to another part of the bay, assured ourselves that neither of us had been hurt in any way, and we were two of the happiest people on earth when we found it out. The Spanish fleet consisted of 15 first-class battleships, with 20-inch armor, with innumerable monitors and torpedo boats. Their loss in killed and wounded is something near 10,000. Just after we had disabled the fleet, I and Dewey decided to cut the cables, and we did so, not wishing any other paper to get a scoop on the Blower.

HE REMEMBERED.

They Had Met Before But Under Unpleasant Circumstances.

"It seems to me I've seen you before," said the young man in the smoking car. "Can't remember the circumstances, but I'm almost sure we've met."

"I think I can freshen your memory," said the other.

"Then you remember me?"

"Yes."

"Well, where did we meet?"

"Don't you remember one night last fall, after a football game, you came into a certain place with another young fellow, and both of you were giving the yell and smashing hats. You remember I was standing by the ticker and you walked over and smashed my hat and then I licked you. The bartender went after your partner. You remember that, too, don't you?"

"Don't say another word! I knew that I'd met you somewhere, but of course I was about ready for the Turkish bath when I ran across you, so you'll pardon me for not being able to place you at once."

"Certainly."—Chicago Record.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 11, 1900. NO. 25

ROOSEVELT's Presidential boom has collapsed, thoroughly and completely.

IT took very little flattery to carry Senator Beveridge, of Indiana, off of his feet.

AT a millionaire dinner given in New York City Monday night Senator Hanna was presented with a loving cup. FRANCE has adopted an armored train. One with armament complete has been manufactured. The train, drawn by conical shaped engines, can travel 60 miles an hour. DR. J. G. FURNISH was yesterday appointed Superintendent of the Lunatic Asylum at Lakeland, and went there to take control of the institution, to which the Republican incumbent is expected to object, and refuse to vacate in favor of the Doctor. AN agreement similar to that under which the several cases involving that of Governor and Lieutenant Governor were consolidated and submitted to Judge Field, has been entered into for the purpose of hastening judicial action upon the suits to settle the contests for minor offices. One of the pending cases is to be submitted to Judge Cantrill, appealed to the Court of Appeals and then carried to the federal court.

JUDGE CANTRILL has notified newspaper correspondents at Frankfort that they will be punished for contempt of court if they continue to report what they claim to be the testimony before the grand jury in the investigation of the assassination of Goebel. He forbids reporting even the names of the witnesses who appear before the grand jury, consequently the daily papers will be somewhat short on Frankfort news for a while.

IN his argument befor the Court of Appeals in the election contested cases, Judge Pryor, among other thing said: "I have seen laws after laws passed that by incendiary speeches from the stump in those days might have created a revolution and an overthrow of the Government itself, and if the dictation of demagogues is invited to take such steps in discussing measures as will lash the public mind into fury, as has been the case not only recently, but years back, if that is done I will tell you we have more to fear of men than we have to fear of measures."

THE Tennessee Republicans are having a very hot time, the fight being between the Evans and the Brownlow factions, each of which wants the delegation to the national convention. The county conventions have been held, and the Evans men figure that Evans has 186 uncontested instructed votes. Brownlow 153. Gibson 119, 257 votes contested and eleven uninstructed. They state that Brownlow's friends are contestants in three fourths of the cases and the charge is made that pension attorneys antagonistic to Evans sent many thousands of dollars into the State to be used against him. The Evans men say they intend to live up to every requirement of the State Committee and submit to fair treatment. It is evident, however, that they do not expect fair treatment, but are preparing to carry the matter before the National Convention.

CENSUS TAKING.

To build up a great office like the Census Office in fifteen months from absolutely nothing to an efficient machine, employing about three thousand men in Washington, about fifty thousand elsewhere in the country, is a difficult task, and entire success is out of the question. The office naturally compares itself with the stage of preparation attained at the same period ten years ago and tried by this test, it has gained several months on its predecessor. One of the problems before it is how to put in the time thus secured in such a way as most to benefit the Census.

In the Agricultural Division the need of time for preliminary work is perhaps as great as anywhere in the Census Office. Farmers, as a class, do not keep their accounts as well as manufacturers, and the returns from farmers may occasionally include serious errors which a trained eye will at once detect. Hence the farm schedules must be examined and such errors corrected before the tables can be made up from them with safety. If a farmer reports that his land sown to wheat was ten acres and the yield four thousand bushels, it is clear that an average yield of four hundred bushels to the acre is incredible, and must be rejected or corrected in accordance with the probabitities. Sometimes the truth can be made out by an expert from comparison with entries in other parts of the schedules; sometimes correspondence must be opened to settle the doubt. All this ranks under the general head of veritying the schedules, and the Agricultural Division plans to give all the time possible to the work of verifying each of the millions of farm schedules. To accomplish this in the time allowed, the work of several hundred clerks will be required, and they must have hard and fast rules to guide them. For example, they might be told: When the wheat reports show a product of over forty bushels to the acre, they are suspicious and must be laid aside for an expert to pass upon. But any such rules must vary with the section of the country. A yield of twenty bushels in one section might be more questionable than a yield of forty bushels in another. Hence the divison must fix in advance what the range of reports in each part of the country and for each crop that may be accepted as probable on their face and not requiring special examination. To get the limits of probability for this purpose for each county in the United States, that is, the maximum and minimum yield and the maximum and minimum price which may be accepted without verification, is the object of an extensive correspondence now being carried on by the Agricultural Division under the direction of Mr. L. G. Powers, Chief Statistician in charge of that division. Three simple schedules have been prepared and printed on different colored paper in order that they may be readily distinguished one from another. One of them covers ordinary garden vegetables, a second coveres fruits, and the third the great staple field crops. Each asks about the units of measure employed and the net price realized, and the two more important schedules, those for staple field products and for vegetables, ask for the highest and lowest yield of each crop per acre. These schedules are being mailed to prominent farmers all over the country and in many instances returns have already been received. When the returns have been received and tabulated, a scheme will be made from them of what is to be accepted as correct in each case and what is to be probed farther. The only aim of the office is to get what was really the intention of the farmer in answering the questions. If the presumption is strongly against his meaning what the schedule says, the office will try to learn by correspondence from the Supervisor, or the Enumerator, or the farmer himself what the real facts were.

If the farming public will continue to cooperate with the heartiness already displayed, this effect in a more trustworthy census of farms than has ever been taken. Farmers, as a class, are less able to cooperate than the representatives of any other great industry. Hence the Census Office can do more for them than it can for centralized lines of business, which can and do make their own investigations, and it will do its best to present a full and accurate photograph of this leading occupation. The Director of the Census urges every one interested to aid the work.

Kansas is to have a cucumber farm on a large scale. The project is to secure 1,100 acres near Lawrence, on the line of a proposed electric railroad. The cucumber crop matures just as the school term ends, when pickers can be easily secured.

Sprinkle a ham weighing 16 to 18 pounds for one day with fine salt. The next day mix 1½ pounds of fine salt, two ounces saltpeter, one ounce of black pepper, 2 ounces of coriander seed, pounded, I pound course sugar and one pound of molasses. Rub the ham with it every day for four weeks. Then put it to dry in a moderately warm kitchen or send it to be smoked—that is if you like smoked ham.

Here is an item that farmers will be interested in: A recent test at the Iowa experiment station of the shrinkage of corn in the crib developed the following facts: On October 8, 1898, 7,000 pounds of ear corn were husked and stored in a crib constructed to make the storage conditions normal. In the first three months the loss was 630 lbs., or 9 per cent. For the next three months the loss was 300 pounds, or 5 per cent; for the third three months, or 25-7 per cent. The total loss was 1,430 pounds or more than 20 per cent.

Sheep raising affords a profit aside from the wool produced. But many farmers seem totally blind to this fact. They do not seem to consider that the sheep is a mutton producer as well as a wool producer and that mutton has a good cash value. This is true today to some extent. There are special wool and distinct mutton types, though a good many sheep raisers seek a breed combining both qualities. However, either type is valuable for more than its one special product—wool or mutton, and in order to secure the largest profit from sheep breeding attention should be given the mutton considerations.

After the strawberry season is past with the farmer who wants to cultivate and use his land to the best advantage the question will arise as to what may be planted or sown in the strawberry patch that will yield a fair return for the labor involved. Necessarily crops planted after the strawberries have been gathered have a comparatively short time in which to mature or develop. For this reason it is important that quick growing crops be planted. Sweet corn, late cabbage or turnips will occupy the ground to good advantage. Late cabbage will sell for remunerative price when mature—from five to ten cents per head. Turnips may be grown for stock, and the sweet corn will come in nicely for late home use and canning. These crops may be grown in the strawberry patch without injuring the berry plants in the least. In fact we believe the cultivation which must be given help the berry plants quite as much as it does the side crops.

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern which is not afraid to be generous. The proprietors of Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles and have the satisfaction of knowing it has cured thousands of hopless cases. Asthma, Bronchitis, La grippe and all Throat and Lung diseases are surely cured by it. Call on W. F. McKim, Burlington; M. J. Crouch, Union, or J. G. Oelsner, Florence, druggists, and get a free bottle. Regular size 50c and $1. Every bottle guaranteed.

IT is strange how many men are now in the hands of their friends, politically speaking.

Plans and Specifications For Bridge Over Woolper Creek.

Said bridge is to be a low truss, through bridge with roadway of 12 feet wide in the clear of 4 pannels in each span. Said bridge to consist of three spans, each 68 feet extreme length, the middle span to rest upon the stone pillars. Each of the other spans is to be supported at the shoe ends by wrought iron pillars, filled with cement concrete, which pillars are hereinafter described. The other ends of said two spans are to rest upon the stone pillars that support the middle span. The capacity of said bridge to be a rolling load of 100 lbs. per square foot of floor surface, and with said load and weight of bridge, all parts of bridge shall have a factor of four for safety. The floor system shall also be constructed so as to have a factor of 4 for safety for extremes as concentrated loads of 2 tons applied at any two joints of each pannel, (as for instance applied like the driving wheels of a traction engine) members in tension shall not be considered to have an ultimate strength of over 20 tons per square inch of section. Dimensions of members in compression shall be calculated by Gordon's formulas. Dimensions of members subjected to shearing and torsional strains shall be determined by tables and formulas of Troutwine or other eminent authors of engineering works.

The floorbeams shall be of steel, also the joist shall be of steel. The floor shall be of good white oak, straight grained, free of shakes or sap, not less than 2½ inches thick, the planks to range in width from 5 to 10 inches. They shall be well secured in place to prevent slipping, warping or rattling.

PAINTING.

The whole of said bridge, except the floor, shall after erection receive a cost of good, non-corrosive paint. The pillars also are to be painted before holes made for foundations are filled, which is to be done upon completion of the bridge.

PILLARS.

The pillars, four in number, shall be of wrought iron, 2 feet in diameter, of boiler plate, ¼ inch in thickness, well riveted. They are to each rest on a good, solid stone, not less than 6 inches in thickness, that has a bed of 4x4 feet; said pillars are to be filled with concrete made of best Louisville cement, sand and gravel containing such proportion of cement as to produce a strong concrete without voids. Each pair of pillars is to have a beam of iron or steel secured to them near the top, for the joist of a wood approach to rest on. Said pillars are to be located at the center of bearing of each shoe. They are to be each supplied with a suitable cap and each pair is to be braced as shown by exhibit 1.

FOUNDATIONS.

The foundations for the four pillars shall be made good and permanent, excavated to the depth as shown by the elevation 30,00 of the profile herewith, unless solid stratified rock be reached sooner, in which case the engineer appointed by the Court of Boone county, Ky., shall decide as to the fitness of the foundation; but should the foundation at said elevation of 30,00 be decided by said engineer not to be sufficient, it shall be made satisfactory to said engineer, be continued to such a depth as shall be deemed proper by said engineer.

MASONRY AND APPROACHES.

The old piers are to be repaired by removing all dirt from the cracks above the surface of the ground, then said cracks are to be well keyed with stones, and well pointed with mortar, lime, cement and sand, of good quality in the proportion of 1, 2 and 6, respectfully. One-fourth of the top of said piers is to be removed and rebuilt, laid in mortar of same kind as pointing mortar mentioned above. Each of the two piers is to have two end cap stones for the bridge shoes to rest on, which shall be made straight and level on top surface, and they are to be placed so the bridge shoe will be near the center of each side. Said cap stones are to be not less than 7 inches thick and 4 feet square. The rest of the tops of the piers is to have a row of good cap stones of not less than 5 inches in thickness.

APPROACHES.

Approaches at the end of each embankment next to bridge, is to be an approach of wood 12 feet in length, one end resting on head of the embankment wall and the other on the beam near the top of pillars. The joist to be 2½x12 inches, good white oak.

EMBANKMENTS AND EMBANKMENT WALLS.

The embankments are to be made with a roadbed of 16 feet, and they are to be up to the grade line shown by the profile. They are to have side slopes of 1½ to 1 verticle. At the head of the embankment, at the approach spans, they are to be faced with stone carefully arranged, but having a batter of 6 inches to the foot of height, after the manner of rip-rap walls. Said facing is to be 2 feet thick at the bottom and 1 foot 6 inches at the top. Said walls are to lean against the slope at the head of bank.

All of said work to be done in a good, workman like manner, and all material to be of good quality. Said bridge and approach spans shall be anchored to the piers and pillars.

An Ancient Grave Yard.

For many years it has been known that a prehistoric burrying ground was located on the Thomas Cartmill farm, now owned by Samuel H. Marshall, down on Gunpowder. Small bones, such as teeth, &c., had been found there years ago, but not until last week did the graves begin to give up the skeletons they have sepulchred for ages upon ages. This ancient burrying ground is in a piece of bottom land but a few yards from the creek, and has been cultivated for a time to which the mind of man runneth not to the contrary, and often in the past has the creek overflowed the entire field, each time carrying away several inches of the soil until now the plow share tears up the skeletons and brings them to the surface. The graves were excavated north and south, and are several in number. Over the bones is a layer of burnt rock—burnt nearly to lime and they are easily pulverized with the naked hand. The soil which covers the burnt stones is very different from that in which the graves were dug, and was evidently imported for burial purposes.

When Mr. Marshall began plowing, last week, in the field containing this ancient city of the dead, human bones were turned up with such frequency as to cause several of his neighbors to assemble and make a close investigation. The skeletons were found to be complete but badly broken to pieces, while in many instances the bones would crumble. Some think the skeletons are of a race of people whose presence in this country antedates that of the Indians. The manner in which they were buried is unlike that of Indians, who generaly chose the highest points of land, and them built great mounds of earth and stone over the graves. One peculiarity in the mode of burial was that each skeleton lay face down.

Some of the bones taken from these graves were submitted to Dr. Furnish, who gave it as his opinion that they were not of a race of overly large people.

Just who these people were, or when they were consigned to mother earth will always remain a mystery.

The first American horses taken to the Philippines did not take kindly to the native hay, and it became a serious problem with Gen. Otis how to feed the horses. One of the troopers poured molasses on the native hay and his horse consumed the ration with great relish. It was tested in other cases and worked charmingly, and molasses it is now said, forms a part of the rations for all the American horses in the Philippines. Horses are reported to thrive amazingly in the new regime.

The Best Remedy for Rheumatism.

QUICK RELIEF FROM PAIN.

All who use Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism are delighted with the quick relief it affords. When speaking of this Mr. D. N. Sink, of Troy, Ohio, says: "Some time ago I had a severe attack of rheumatism in my arm and shoulder. I tried numerous remedies but got no relief until I was recommended by Messrs. Geo. F. Parson & Co., druggists of this place, to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. They recommended it so highly that I bought a bottle. I was soon relieved of all pain. I have since recommended this liniment to many of my friends, who agree with me that it is the best remedy for muscular rheumatism in the market." For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington, Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, C. S. Baisly, Bullittsville, O. N. Grant, Bellevue.

EVERYTHING is yet very favorable for a large crop of tobacco in this county.

Miss Lilian Bukeslee, of Corry, Pa., who has been under medical treatment for years for consumption coughed up a collar button the other day and is rapidly recovering.

Sir William McCormac and several other London surgeons who volunteered for service in South Africa are drawing pay at the rate of $25,000 a year apiece. Though the sum may not recoup them for what they would earn in London it is far in excess of any salary heretofore paid any army medical officer.

According to a compilation made by the land office of the state of Washington, 15,858 square miles in that state were originally covered with merchantable timber—fir, cedar hemlock and spruce. One-fifth of this area has been ravaged by fire, 22½ per cent. has been cut, and the remainder, or 9,039 miles, is covered with standing timber.

Four New South Wales lepers have been treated by the leprosy serum method devised by Dr. Juan de Dios Carrasquilla, of Bogota, and declared by him to have been successful in a hundred cases. The Australian doctors, however, declare that after a very careful test they were unable to detect any improvement and that the disease continued its progress in the patients.

There was recently described before the Paris Academy of Medicine, by Dr. Bonnier, a method of testing for deafness by applying a tuning-fork to the knee or other part of the boney structure. The most important statement in his paper was that a sound ear could not hear the note of the fork, but an ear in which disease had already commenced could perceive distinctly.

A Philadelphia bacteriologist who made a microscopic examination of the train of the walking skirt of a woman of that city, found it contained "200,000 germs—many bearing diphtheria, pneumonia and tonsilitis—also collections of typhoid and consumption germs." And this, too, despite the fact that the skirt was comparatively new and had been brushed daily by its owner.

The death of the famous queen of the race track, Maud S, brings out the interesting fact that every evening at about 10 o'clock, Mrs. Maud Carey of New York, calls up her father Capt. Geo. S. Stone, of Cincinnati, on the long distance telephone and bids him good-night. Years ago, when his daughter was still Maud Stone, he named after her the animal that became celebrated in the annals of the turf.

Very few men in congress have been so often interrupted in the course of a speech as was Mr. Loud in presenting the bill to regulate second-class mail matter. He was scarcely permitted to make a simple statement of fact without one or more members rising and saying, "I would like to ask the gentleman from California a question," or, "Will the gentleman in charge of the bill yield for a question?"

Sir Thomas Naghten Fitzgerald, whose offer of three months' service in South Africa has been accepted, is the acknowledged head of the surgical profession in Australia. His private hospital, on the summit of Melbourne's western hill, is one of the landmarks of the city. He has been a surgeon in ordinary to a succession of Victorian viceroys, and that fact in combination with his professional eminence, led to his knighthood three years ago.

The police say that New Yorkers are growing more careless about their portable property, particularly jewelry, every day. The list of lost articles reported for one day includes two watches and chains, about a dozen diamond rings, three jeweled gold pins, two purses containing money, and a valuable Russian sable muff. This does not represent everything lost in the street and public places in the city, but only what have been reported to the police.

Nowhere has German ill will to Great Britain been displayed more openly than in Dresden, where English residents have been subjected to insults both in public and in private. When the news of Cronje's surrender was received, the Union Jack was displayed from the windows of the Anglo-American club. During the night it was torn down, and a vulgar placard pasted on the door. At the same time, the door handles of many houses where English people lived were broken off, while in other cases the bell wires were torn out.

VICTORY IN RETREAT

Dr. Talmage Gives Suggestions as to Christian Warfare.

Joshua's Plan of Ambuscade Cited as a Successful Method of Fighting Unrighteousness—Sin's Triumph Brief.

From an old-time battle song Dr. Talmage in this discourse makes some startling suggestions as to the best styles of Christian work and points out the reason of so many plans failures; text, Joshua 8:7: "Then shall ye rise up from the ambush and seize upon the city."

One Sabbath evening, with my family around me, we were talking over the scene of the text. In the wide open eyes and the quick interrogatories and the blanched cheeks I realized what a thrilling drama it was. There is the old city, shorter by name than any other city in the ages, spelled with two letters, A, I, Ai. Joshua and his men want to take it. How to do it is the question. On a former occasion, in a straightforward, face to face fight, they had been defeated, but now they are going to take it by ambuscade. Gen. Joshua has two divisions in his army. The one division the battle-worn commander will lead himself, the other division he sends off to encamp in an ambush on the west side of the city of Ai. No torches, no lanterns, no sound of heavy battalions, but 30,000 swarthy warriors moving in silence, speaking only in a whisper, no clicking of swords against shields, lest the watchmen of Ai discover it and the stratagem be a failure. If the roistering soldier in the Israelitish army forgets himself, all along the line the word is "Hush!"

Joshua takes the other division, the one with which he is to march, and puts it on the north side of the city of Ai and then spends the night in reconnoitering in the valley. There he is, thinking over the fortunes of the coming day with something of the feelings of Wellington the night before Waterloo or of Meade and Lee the night before Gettysburg. There he stands in the night and says to himself: "Yonder is the division in ambush on the west side of Ai. Here is the division I have under my especial command on the north side of Ai. There is the old city slumbering in its sin. To-morrow will be the battle." Look! The morning already begins to tip the hills. The military officers of Ai look out in the morning very early, and, while they do not see the division in ambush, they behold the other divisions of Joshua, and the cry—"Arms! To arms!" rings through all the streets of the old town, and every sword, whether hacked and bent or newly welded, is brought out, and all the inhabitants of the city of Ai pour through the gates, an infuriated torrent, and their cry is, "Come, we'll make quick work with Joshua and his troops!"

No sooner had these people of Ai come out against the troops of Joshua than Joshua gave such a command as he seldom gave—"Fall back!" Why, they could not believe their own ears! Is Joshua's courage failing him? The retreat is beaten, and the Israelites are flying, throwing blankets and canteens on every side under this worse than Bull Run defeat. And you ought to hear the soldiers of Ai cheer and cheer. But they huzza too soon. The men lying in ambush are straining their vision to get some signal from Joshua that they may know what time to drop upon the city. Joshua takes his burnished spear, glittering in the sun like a shaft of flame, and points it toward the city, and when the men up yonder in the ambush see it with brawkline swoop they drop upon Ai and without stroke of sword or stab of spear take the city and put it to the torch.

So much for the division that was in ambush. How about the division under Joshua's command? No sooner does Joshua stop in the flight than all his men stop with him, and as he wheels they wheel, for in a voice of thunder he cried: "Halt!" one strong arm driving back a torrent of flying troops. And then, as he points his spear through the golden light toward that fated city, his troops know that they are to start for it. What a scene it was when the division in ambush which had taken the city marched down against the men of Ai on the one side, and the troops under Joshua combled up their enemies from the other side, and the men of Ai were caught between these two hurricanes of Israelitish courage, thrust before and behind, stabbed in breast and back, ground between the upper and the nether millstones of God's indignation! Woe to the city of Ai! Cheer for Israel!

Lesson the first: There is such a thing as victorious retreat. Joshua's falling back was the first chapter in his successful besiegement. And there are times in your life when the best thing you can do is to run. You were once the victim of strong drink. The demijohn and the decanter were your fierce foes. They came down upon you with greater fury than the men of Ai upon the men of Joshua. Your only safety is to get away from them. Your dissipating companions will come around you for your overthrow. Run for your life! Fall back! Fall back from the drinking saloon! Fall back from the wine party! Your flight is your advance; your retreat is your victory. There is a saloon down on the next street that has almost been the ruin of your soul. Then why do you go along that street? Why do you not pass through some other street rather than by the place of your calamity? A spoonful of brandy taken for medicinal purposes by a man who 20 years before had been reformed from drunkenness hurled into inebriety and the grave one of the best friends I ever had. Retreat is victory!

Here is a converted infidel. He is so strong now in his faith in the Gospel he says he can read anything. What are you reading? Bolingbroke? Andrew Jackson Davis' tracts? Tyndall's Glasgow university address? Drop them and run. You will be an infidel before you die unless you quit that. These men of Ai will be too much for you. Turn your back on the rank and file of unbelief. Ely before they cut you with their swords and thrusts you with their javelins. There are people who have been well-nigh ruined because they risked a foolhardy expedition in the presence of mighty and overwhelming temptations and the men of Ai made a morning meal of them.

So, also, there is victorious retreat in the religious world. Thousands of times the Kingdom of Christ has seemed to fall back. When the blood of the Scotch Covenanters gave a deep dye to the heather of the highlands, when the Vaudois of France chose extermination rather than make an unchristian surrender, when on St. Bartholomew's day mounted assassins rode through the streets of Paris, crying "Kill! Bloodletting is good in August! Kill! Death to the Huguenots! Kill!" when Lady Jane Grey's head rolled from the executioner's block, when Calvin was imprisoned in the castle, and John Knox called for the truth, when John Bunyan lay rotting in Bedford jail, saying: "If God will help me and my physical life continues, I will stay here until the moss grows on my eyebrows rather than give up my faith," the days of retreat for the church were days of victory.

The pilgrim fathers fell back from the other side of the sea to Plymouth Rock, but now are marshaling a continent for the Christianization of the world. The church of Christ falling back from Piedmont, falling back from Rue St. Jacques, falling back from St. Denis, falling back from Wurtemberg castles, falling back from the Brussels market place, yet all the time triumphing. Notwithstanding all the shocking reverses which the Church of Christ suffers, what do we see to-day? Twelve thousand missionaries of the cross on heathen grounds; 55,000 ministers of Jesus Christ in this land; at least 400,000,000 of Christians on the earth. Falling back, yet advancing until the old Wesleyan hymn will prove true:

> The lion of Judah shall break the chain
> And give us the victory again and again!

But there is a more marked illustration of victorious retreat in the life of our Joshua, the Jesus of the ages. First falling back from an appalling height to an appalling depth, falling from celestial hills to terrestrial valleys, from throne to manger; yet that did not seem to suffice him as a retreat. Falling back still farther from Bethlehem to Nazareth, from Nazareth to Jerusalem, back from Jerusalem to Golgotha, back from Golgotha to the mausoleum in the rock, back down over the precipices of perdition until he walked amid the caverns of eternal captives and drank of the wine of the wrath of Almighty God, amid the Adams, and the Jezekels, and the Belshazzars. Oh, men of the pulpit and men of the pew, Christ's descent from Heaven to earth does not measure half the distance! It was from glory to perdition. He descended into hell. All the records of earthly retreat are as nothing compared with this falling back. Santa Anna, with the fragments of his army flying over the plateaus of Mexico and Napoleon and his army retreating from Moscow into the awful snows of Russia are not worthy to be mentioned with this retreat, when all the powers of darkness seem to be pursuing Christ as he fell back, until the body of Him who came to do such wonderful things lay pulseless and stripped. Methinks that the city of Ai was not so emptied of its inhabitants when they went to pursue Joshua as perdition was emptied of devils when they started for the pursuit of Christ, and he fell back and back down lower, down lower, chasm below chasm, pit below pit, until he seemed to strike the bottom of objurgation and scorn and torture. Oh, the long, loud, jubilant shout of hell at the defeat of the Lord God Almighty!

But let not the powers of darkness rejoice quite so soon. Do you hear that disturbance in the tomb of Arimathea? I hear the sheet rending! What means that stone hurled down the side of the hill? Who is this coming out? Push him back! The dead must not stalk in this open sunlight. Oh, it is our Joshua. Let him come out. He comes forth and starts for the city. He takes the spear of the Roman guard and points that way. Church militant marches up on one side, and the church triumphant marches down on the other side. And the powers of darkness being caught between these ranks of celestial and terrestrial valor nothing is left of them save just enough to illustrate the direful overthrow of hell and our Joshua's eternal victory. On his head be all the crowns. In his hands he all the scepters. At his feet be all the human hearts; and here, Lord, is one of them.

Lesson the second: The triumph of the wicked is short. Did you ever see an army in a panic? There is nothing so uncontrollable. If you had stood at Long bridge, Washington, during the opening of our civil war, you would know what it is to see an army run. And when those men of Ai looked out and saw those men of Joshua in a stampede they expected easy work. They would scatter them as the equinox the leaves. Oh, the gleeful and jubilant descent of the men of Ai upon the men of Joshua! But their exhilaration was brief, for the tide of battle turned, and these quondam conquerors left their miserable carcasses in the wilderness of Bethaven. So it always is. The triumph of the wicked is short. You make $20,000 at the gaming table. Do you expect to keep it? You will die in the poorhouse. You made a fortune by iniquitous traffic. Do you expect to keep it? Your money will scatter, or it will stay long enough to curse your children after you are dead. Call over the roll of bad men who prospered and see how short was their prosperity. For awhile, like the men of Ai, they went from conquest to conquest, but after awhile disaster rolled back upon them, and they were divided into three parts. Misfortune took their property, the grave took their body and the lost world took their soul.

Lesson the third: How much may be accomplished by lying in ambush for opportunities. Are you hypercritical of Joshua's maneuver? Do you say that it was cheating for him to take that city by ambuscade? Was it wrong for Washington to kindle campfires on Jersey heights, giving the impression to the opposing force that a great army was encamped there when there was none at all? I answer, if the war was right, then Joshua was right in his stratagem. He violated no flag of truce. He broke no treaty, but by a lawful ambuscade captured the city of Ai. Oh, that we all knew how to lie in ambush for opportunities to serve God. The best of our opportunities do not lie on the surface, but are secreted. By luck, by stratagem, by Christian ambuscade, you may take almost any castle of sin for Christ. Come up toward men with a regular besiegement of argument and you will be defeated, but just wait until the door of their hearts is set ajar, or they are off their guard, or their severe caution is away from home, and then drop in on them from a Christian ambuscade. There has been many a man up to his chin in scientific portfolios which proved there was no Christ and no divine revelation, his pen a scimiter flung into the heart of theological opponents, who nevertheless has been discomfited and captured for God by some little three-year-old child who has got up and put her snowy arms around his sinewy neck and asked some simple question about God.

Oh, make a flank movement! Steal a march on the devil! Cheat that man into Heaven! A five-dollar treatise that will stand all the laws of homiletics may fail to do that which a penny tract of Christian entreaty may accomplish. Oh, for more Christians in ambuscade—not lying in idleness, but waiting for a quick spring, waiting until just the right time comes! Do not talk to a man about the vanity of this world on the day when he has bought something at "12" and is going to sell it at "15." But talk to him about the vanity of the world on the day when he has bought something at "15" and is compelled to sell it at "12!" Do not rub a man's disposition the wrong ways; do not take the imperative mood when the subjunctive mood will do just as well; do not talk in perfervid style to a phlegmatic nor try to tickle a torrid temperament with an icicle. You can take any man for Christ if you know how to get at him. Do not send word to him that to-morrow at ten o'clock you propose to open your batteries upon him, but come on him by a skillful, persevering, God directed ambuscade.

I have heard it said: "Look out for a man who has only one idea; he is irresistible." I say look out for the man who has one idea, and that a determination for soul-saving. I believe God would strike me dead if I dared to point the spear in any other direction. Oh, for some of the courage and enthusiasm of Joshua! He flung two armies from the tip of that spear. It is sinful for us to rest unless it is to get stronger muscle and freer brain and purer heart for God's work. I feel on my head the hands of Christ in a new ordination. Do you not feel the same omnipotent pressure? There is a work for all of us. Oh, that we might stand up side by side and point the spear toward the city! It ought to be taken. It will be taken. Our cities are drifting off toward loose religion or what is called "liberal Christianity," which is so liberal that it gives up all the cardinal doctrines of the Bible; so liberal that it surrenders the rectitude of the throne of the Almighty. That is liberality with a vengeance. Let us decide upon the work which we as Christian men have to do and in the strength of God go to work and do it.

I believe that the next year will be the most stupendous year that Heaven ever saw. The nations are quaking now with the coming of God. It will be a year of successes for the men of Joshua, but of doom for the men of Ai. You put your ear to the rail track, and you can hear the train coming miles away. So I put my ear to the ground, and I hear the thundering on of the lightning train of God's mercies and judgments. The mercy of God is first to be tried upon this nation. It will be preached in the pulpits, in theaters, on the streets—everywhere. People will be invited to accept the mercy of the Gospel, and the story and the song and the prayer will be "mercy." But suppose they do not accept the offer of mercy—what then? Then God will come with His judgments, and the grasshoppers will eat the crops, and the freshets will devastate the valleys, and the defalcations will swallow the money markets, and the fires will burn the cities, and the earth will quake from pole to pole. Year of mercies and of judgments; year of invitation and of warning; year of jubilee and of woe. Which side are you going to be on—with the men of Ai or the men of Joshua? Pass over this Sabbath into the ranks of Israel. I would clap my hands at the joy of your coming. You will have a poor chance for this world and the world to come without Jesus. You cannot stand what is to come upon you and upon the world unless you have the pardon and the comfort and the help of Christ. Come over! On this side are your happiness and safety; on the other side are disquietude and despair. Eternal defeat to the men of Ai! Eternal victory to the men of Joshua!

FIFTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

Washington, April 2.—Senate—Advocates and opponents of the Porto Rican tariff and government bill waged vigorous war in the senate for more than seven hours. Long before the senate convened at 11 o'clock the galleries were crowded and as they remained until the senate adjourned. Those who listened to the debate were well repaid. The speeches were good and the running debate unusually bright and lively.

House—A possible reduction of the war tax was foreshadowed in a resolution asserted by the house calling upon the secretary of the treasury for information as to the probable surplus existing revenue laws would create during this and the coming fiscal year. The resolution was presented by Mr. Payne, the floor leader of the majority. Under suspension of the rules bills were passed to grant to settlement 180,000 acres in the Fort Hall Indian reservation and 2,500,000 acres in Oklahoma by ratifying the agreements with the Shawnee and Absentee Indians and the Kiowa, Commanche and Apache.

Washington, April 3.—Senate—After a session lasting from 11 o'clock until 4, which was taken up entirely in debating the Porto Rican tariff and civil governement bill it was passed by a vote of 40 to 31.

House—The house entered upon consideration of the substitute for the senate Hawaiian territorial bill under a special order which will bring the question to a vote on Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The debate was in committee of the whole and only three of the speeches were permanent to the bill.

Washington, April 4.—Senate—At the conclusion of morning business the chair laid before the senate the resolution declaring that Hon. M. S. Quay was not entitled to a seat in the senate from Pennsylvania. There was a lively time over the Quay case. After an hour's debate the case went over. The Alaskan bill was then taken up and discussed until adjournment, no action being taken.

House—Without preliminary business, the house resumed consideration of the bill to establish a territorial government in Hawaii. Mr. McDowell, of Ohio, a member of the committee on territories, was the first speaker. While Mr. McDowell was speaking the clerk of the senate appeared, and announced the passage of the Porto Rican tariff bill, "with many amendments in which the concurrence of the house is requested." There was no demonstration when the announcement was made. The bill was immediately referred, under the rule, to the committee on ways and means. The Hawaiian bill occupied the entire time of the session.

Washington, April 5.—Senate—The following bills were passed: To incorporate the National White Cross of America; to authorize the payment of the remaining allowances to enlisted men of the regular and volunteer forces when discharged by order of the secretary of war and stated by him as entitled to travel pay; to increase the efficiency of the subsistence department of the United States army; to extend the act governing the immediate transportation of dutiable merchandise without appraisement to the ports of Laredo, Eagle Pass and El Paso, after which the Alaskan civil code was taken up and discussed until 6 o'clock, when the senate took a recess until 8 o'clock. Many amendments were about to be proceeded with when the senate took a recess until 11 o'clock.

House—The house did not finish the bill to provide territorial government for the Hawaiian islands before reaching a recess vote, 4 o'clock, arrived, less than half the bill having been covered and so many amendments remained that it was agreed to continue the consideration of the bill until the five minute rule until it was disposed of.

Washington, April 6.—Senate—Senator Pettus, of Kentucky, gave notice that he would move to refer the credentials of former Senator J. C. S. Blackburn, as a senator from the state, to the committee on privileges and elections. During the greater part of the session the senate had under consideration the Indian appropriation bill. Mr. Sullivan, of Mississippi, delivered a speech in favor of seating Hon. M. S. Quay.

House—The house, after four days of debate, passed the substitute for the senate bill providing for a territorial form of government for Hawaii. The bill was passed by a vote of 120 to 28. The bill now goes to conference. Other bills were passed to authorize the Shreveport and Red River Valley R. R. to build a bridge across the Red river at Alexandria, La., and to create the northwestern district of the northern district of Georgia.

Washington, April 7.—Senate—The entire time of the session was taken up in discussing an amendment to the Indian appropriation bill offered by Mr. Jones, of Arkansas, providing for the continuance of the government's employment of the contract Indian schools in certain circumstances was under consideration. The debate took a wide range, the whole question of sectarian schools being gone over at length.

House—The house paid tribute to the memory of the late Richard Parks Bland, of Missouri, popularly known as "Silver Dick" Bland, who was a member of the house for 28 years. Splendid eulogies of the life and career of the great champion of silver were offered by members on both sides of the political aisle. At the conclusion of the ceremonies the house, as a further mark of respect, adjourned.

Ma Fate Would Have It.

Many years ago an Arkansas youth, on leaving the home of his sweetheart late at night, received a severe kick as she stepped out of the door. He left and met removed definitely to his proposal of marriage, but had assured him that she would soon let him know what she could do for him. He, unfortunately for the two tender hearts, took the kick for an answer and departed for a far and cold country. Here he brooded over his wound and his broken heart until his beard grew down to his knees and his nose became Roman. As fate would have it, as fate always has it, he turned up late one sad, sad evening when the straw rick hens were quarreling on the roost and the brindle cow was lowing mournfully for her hungry offspring. A young man came six feet tall and the lonely visitor. It was one of seven sons, born, from time to time, unto his old home. Explanations followed. It was not the girl who kicked him 20 years before. Oh no! It was big anger father. The weed out to the lower lot. Pa put his beard with the shears and licked himself down the hill.—Galveston News.

GOT A WRIT OF ERROR.

Kentucky Case Now Goes to the Supreme Court of the United States.

The Court of Appeals Held That the Action of the Legislature in Seating Beckham Was Final—Courts Have No Power.

Frankfort, Ky., April 7.—The court of appeals Friday at noon handed down its decision in the gubernatorial contest in favor of Beckham. Judge Durnelle, republican, was the only judge dissenting. The other two republican judges, Burnam and Guffy, handed down separate opinion from the democratic judges, but which agreed with the democratic members in its conclusion.

Judge Robson wrote the opinion of the court. The concurrence of Judges Burnam and Guffy with the democratic judges was a surprise generally, but to the republicans especially, and there is much speculation now as to whether the talked of appeal to the supreme court will be prosecuted.

The opinion holds that the action of the legislature in seating Gov. Beckham was final, and that the courts have no power to review it; Gov. Taylor exceeded his authority in adjourning the legislature to London, and that the journals of the two houses of the legislature, being regular, can not be impeached. The republicans will now try to get a hearing before the United States supreme court. Thirty days must elapse before the mandate of the court of appeals, in accordance with Friday's decision is issued. Meanwhile no radical change in the relative positions of the two state governments is expected.

Judge Robson, who writes the main opinion of the court, holds that the legislature was the sole tribunal to decide the contests for governor and lieutenant governor and that its action is complete and final. He says the journals of the two houses are unimpeachable evidence and to the action of that body and that where there is no way to go behind them within in the courts or elsewhere. Gov. Taylor's proclamation adjourning the legislature to London is held void on the ground that under the constitution the legislature itself had the only power to remove its sittings to another place after it had been convened in regular session. Judge Durnelle, who dissented, holds that the legislature, when it acted, declaring Goebel governor, was sitting only as a contest board, and that it had no jurisdiction at that stage of the proceedings to determine the issue it undertook to dispose.

Frankfort, Ky., April 8.—Chief Justice Hazelrigg, of the Kentucky court of appeals, Saturday afternoon granted a writ of error to the supreme court of the United States, from the decision rendered by the court of appeals Friday in the contest cases involving titles to the offices of governor and lieutenant governor.

Frankfort, Ky., April 7.—The prosecution are more confident than they have been since the day of the assassination that they are close on the trail of the murderer of Wm. Goebel. They stoutly claim that the confessions of Henry Youtsey and W. H. Culton have more than corroborated the evidence given by Wharton Golden on the stand ten days ago, and it is claimed that the full facts in regard to the murder will be laid bare when the cases of the suspects come to trial, if not before then. The fact that both attorneys and personal representatives not only refuse to either affirm or deny the rumors that Culton and Youtsey have confessed gives credence to this claim.

Wharton Golden was before the grand jury, and it is said he told more than he told on the witness stand at the examining trial of Caleb Powers. Youtsey's attorneys, Col. L. J. Crawford and R. W. Nelson, of Newport, declined to talk, but other friends of the young man admitted that propositions were in between the prosecution and defense which may result in Youtsey becoming a witness for the prosecution, and this, it is supposed, is to be in the event the prosecution agrees to give immunity to Youtsey.

Frankfort, Ky., April 9.—The grand jury will continue the investigation of the Goebel assassination during this week. About 50 witnesses have been examined so far, and it is said that more than that number are on the list of those who have not yet been heard. No report is expected before the latter part of the week. It is said that the names of several of the most important witnesses who have testified so far have not been disclosed, and the evidence has been jealously guarded.

The habeas corpus proceedings in the case of "Tallow Dick" Combs, the colored suspect, is set for hearing before Judge Cantrill Tuesday, but it is not expected that anything will be brought out in this which will throw any light on the mystery surrounding the assassination.

Politics in Alaska.

Victoria, B. C., April 7.—Both political parties of Alaska will hold conventions in May, the republicans on the 12th and the democrats on the 20th, to name national convention delegates. All representatives will go specially instructed.

GEN. WHEELER INTERVIEWED.

He Says That the Greatest Ambition of His Life Has Already Been Realized.

Washington, April 7.—The attention of Gen. Wheeler being called to a suggestion of himself as a vice presidential candidate, he made the following statement:

"I do not think that my name has ever been mentioned in that connection except as very many other gentlemen have been referred to, simply in the way of a personal compliment. I have appreciated these fluttering allusions to myself, but never regarded them as at all serious or other than the kind expressions of partial friends.

"The greatest ambition of my life has already been realized. I have seen those who were once confederate soldiers fight under the stars and stripes against foreign foes as soldiers of the United States. I have seen the masses of the people of all the southern states eagerly and earnestly offer their services to fight in the country's cause, and have seen them thus become participants in the events which have suddenly made ours the leading among the great powers of the world and opened avenues which enable us to establish the most favorable commercial relations with countries containing nearly one-third of the earth's population. I have seen the cordial relations which existed during the first 70 years of our government firmly re-established between the people of all sections of our common country. And in all this I believe I see the dawn of a new prosperity in which the southern states will be the largest beneficiaries. The realization of conditions so advantageous to our country fills the measure of my desires, and beyond that I have no ambition whatever."

NO WORK FOR THEM.

Hundreds of Laborers Flocking to New York City to Work on the Great Tunnel.

New York, April 6.—The charity officials of this city have been greatly embarrassed in the last few days by an influx of laboring men who have come to New York in the hope of obtaining employment on the new rapid transit tunnel work. These men have come from all parts of the country, only to be disappointed.

Superintendent York, of the city lodging house, says that they have averaged 25 a day, and he sent 40 men, many of them well dressed, to the outdoor poor department to be helped back to their homes. The men say that there were advertisements in their town for 40,000 men to work on the tunnel. As the excavation has not yet really begun, there is absolutely no hope for obtaining employment.

BATTLE OF SHILOH.

The 38th Anniversary Celebrated at Corinth, Miss.—Distinguished Soldiers of Both Sides Present.

Corinth, Miss., April 7.—Friday was the 38th anniversary of the battle of Shiloh, when the armies commanded by Grant and Buell met the forces of Albert Sidney Johnston and Beauregard. The event is being celebrated by a grand reunion of veterans of both the federal and confederate causes on the field where they met so many years ago in deadly strife. The celebration will last two days. Many distinguished soldiers of both sides are present.

Army Bill Amended.

Washington, April 7.—Senator Lodge introduced amendments to the army appropriation bill giving to the commanding officer of the army the rank of lieutenant general and to the adjutant general of major general, and Senator Pettus an amendment providing for the employment by contract of dental surgeons for the army at the rate of one to each 1,000 men in the army.

Miners Returning to Work.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 7.—It is estimated that 10,000 or about half the striking miners in the Pittsburgh district returned to work Friday. The executive committee of the miners' association was in session Friday considering the strike, and will meet the officials of the two coal combines Friday afternoon for the purpose of arranging a settlement if possible. The Irwin miners are still out.

Want Stamp Taxes Abolished.

New York, April 7.—The New York chamber of commerce adopted resolutions, declaring that the stamp taxes should be abolished as soon as the revenues of the government will permit, and, if it is impossible to abolish them all in the beginning, those upon telegrams, express and freight receipts, proprietary articles and sales made upon exchanges should be first abolished.

Gen. Otis Not Recalled.

Washington, April 7.—The statement is made in authoritative quarters that no order has been given as yet to Maj. Gen. Otis to relinquish his command in the Philippines and return to the United States.

A Receiver Appointed.

Atlanta, Ga., April 6.—D. B. Stanchiffe was Friday appointed receiver of the National Railway Building and Loan association, of this city. The assets and liabilities are about $300,000. It is expected that auxiliary receivers would be appointed Friday in Florida, Louisiana, Texas and Mississippi.

Lieut. Gilmore Passes Examination.

Washington, April 7.—Lieut. Gilmore has successfully passed the examination for promotion to the grade of lieutenant commander of the navy.

MET MORE REVERSES.

England Believed to Have Been Again Defeated by the Boers.

A Rumor That the Hussars Who Were Sent to the Relief of the Royal Irish Fusiliers Are Also Missing.

London, April 3.—The war office reports that Col. Broadwood lost seven guns and all his baggage in the ambush laid for him by the Boers on Saturday. The casualties numbered 350.

London, April 4.—Fuller news of disaster to the British army in the neighborhood of Sannas Post does not tend to improve matters from a British point of view, but, with the dispatches so mystifying, it is impossible to accurately portray the present situation or to foretell the ultimate issue of Lord Roberts' attempt to retrieve the defeat.

Bloemfontein, Monday, April 2.—Gen. Colville's division and French's cavalry have returned here. Everything is quiet.

London, April 7.—The following is the text of Lord Roberts' dispatch to the war office announcing the capture of five companies of his troops:

"Bloemfontein, Thursday, April 5.—Another unfortunate occurrence has occurred, resulting, I fear, in the capture of a party of infantry, consisting of three companies of the Royal Irish Fusiliers and two companies of the 9th regiment of mounted infantry, near Reddersburg, a little eastward of Bethany railway station, within a few miles of this place. They were surrounded by a stronger force of the enemy, with four or five guns.

"The detachment held out from noon, April 3, to April 4, 2 a. m., and then, apparently, surrendered, for it is reported that the firing ceased at that time. Immediately after I heard the news, during the afternoon of April 3, I ordered Gatacre to proceed from Springfontein, his present headquarters, to Reddersburg, with all possible speed, and I dispatched the Cameron Highlanders hence to Bethany. He arrived at Reddersburg at 10:30 yesterday morning with opposition, but could get no news of the missing detachment.

"There can be no doubt that the whole party has been made prisoners."

The war office has received the following dispatch from Lord Roberts, dated Bloemfontein, Thursday, April 5:

"Methuen telegraphs from Boshof (in the Orange Free State, a little northeast of Kimberley) as follows: 'Surrounded Gen. Mareuil and a body of Boers to-day. None escaped. Villebois and seven Boers killed, eight wounded, fifty prisoners. Our losses were: Killed, Capts. Boyle and Williams, both of the yeomanry, and two men of the yeomanry. Wounded, about seven men. The attack lasted four hours. The corps behaved very well. Our force was composed of yeomanry, the Kimberley mounted corps and the 4th battery of artillery.'"

Gen. De Villebois Mareuil was the chief of staff of the Boer army.

London, April 9.—What it is borne in mind That all the dispatches from the front are severely censored, there is little in the news to bring satisfaction to England. Assurances that nothing need be feared, even if the railways and telegraphs are cut and Bloemfontein isolated, together with the news that the ladies and other civilians are being ordered away, do not augur well.

There are rumors from Cape Town that the telegraph wires were cut on Sunday, and also that the Hussars, who were sent to the relief of the Royal Irish Rifles, are also missing, although these are probably the outcome of Boer exaggerations designed to encourage the burghers.

The attempt of Gen. Colville to catch the Boer leaders in conference at Reitfontein failed probably as usual, because of the lack of cavalry. The results of these serious checks to the British arms are that the whole Free State is up again and that the Boers are full of activity over the entire field.

The Boers are boasting that the Colesberg and Sternberg commandoes, numbering 6,000, with 10 cannon and 750 wagons have gotten safely through, thus performing a magnificent strategic feat."

The Boers are displaying increased activity in Natal, but there is no sign that Gen. Buller is moving.

Mafeking was still besieged on April 1. The garrison was suffering severely from lack of bread, and a mixture of oats, bran and mealies was being duly fed for that article, which is described as "coarse in substance, of the color of ginger bread and of the consistency of Norwegian pine."

London, April 9.—The Cape Town correspondent of the Daily News, telegraphing Friday, says: "Owing to a lack of horses and to the sufferings of the men from pneumonia, due to thin clothing, Lord Roberts has decided not to make a big move until the troops are provided with thicker uniforms."

Two Boers were killed in the rear-guard action.

A strong Boer commando is reported to be at Walsekop, 14 miles west of Rouxville.

DEWEY FOR PRESIDENT.

The Admiral Announces That He is Willing to Be a Candidate For That Important Position.

Washington, April 5.—Admiral George Dewey Wednesday morning confirmed the interview published Wednesday morning in the New York World to the effect that he will accept the presidency of the United States should the American people desire him to fill that office. He refused to make any further statement.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 5.—A special from Washington Wednesday says:

In an interview with a correspondent Admiral Dewey confirmed the report that he is willing to be a candidate for the presidency. He says he will accept the nomination if it is tendered him.

"It was after the most serious consideration that I decided to make a formal announcement of my position," said the admiral. "I have been strongly urged to do so by a great many friends. They were friends upon whose judgment I believed I could rely, and whose good intentions I would not doubt. They said they believed I owed it to the American people to make my position clear on this matter. My name has been used in this connection and there have been all kinds of reports. My friends thought I owe it to the people to set all doubt at rest by declaring that I adhered to my original refusal, or that I had changed my mind. So I decided to speak. My position is just this: I regard the position of President as the greatest honor in the gift of the nation. It is an honor to which no man can be indifferent. I am simply like other citizens in that I would appreciate the honor."

Washington, April 6.—The candidacy of Adm. Dewey for the presidency continues to be the theme of absorbing interest in political circles. Statesmen in Washington are divided into two great and one small camp. The small camp contains those who take his candidacy seriously and are willing to give it encouragement. The larger camps are filled with those who ridicule Dewey's ambition were fostered by his wife, by his brother-in-law, John R. McLean, and by the old Grover Cleveland element of the democratic party. This story, however, is sustained only by circumstantial evidence.

Adm. Dewey refuses to say who are his political sponsors. He admits that he does not expect the nomination from the republicans. He admits privately that he is of the democracy. He has not announced his plans for the future beyond hinting that he will continue to perform his duties at the navy department until a nomination should be tendered him. Then he will retire and look after the interests of his campaign.

Washington, April 7.—Adm. Dewey is satisfied he can not get the democratic nomination for president, but is willing to stand as an independent candidate. This was made clear from his statement to friends here. He declines for the present to make a public declaration to this effect.

The admiral told his friends that he is a Cleveland democrat, and stated to a caller that he had never voted in his life, and had no decided political views until Cleveland was nominated the last time.

It is understood that ex President Cleveland and his former cabinet are supporting Dewey to head off Bryan's nomination or election. It is known that Dewey believes that Hanna feared his nomination.

Kansas City, Mo., April 7.—John R. McLean, brother-in-law of Adm. Dewey, has engaged elaborate quarters at one of the leading hotels for the democratic convention in July. The rooms are very choice, and it is hinted that they are to be shared by Adm. Dewey. When the selection was made Mr. McLean it is said, announced that the rooms would be occupied by himself and a friend.

Bryan Was Silent.

Portland, Ore., April 7.—When asked for an opinion on the candidacy of Adm. Dewey for the presidency, Col. W. J. Bryan said: "I do not care to discuss the subject."

Cecil Rhodes in London.

London, April 7.—Cecil Rhodes arrived in this city Friday. He is well and cheerful, but is much more evasive than he was on his previous trip home. This is doubtless owing to the fact that Dr Rutherford Harris, the former secretary of the British South Africa company, and Alfred Beit, the South African financier, met Mr. Rhodes at Funchal island of Madeira and advised him to observe reticence.

America Shows England the Way.

London, April 6.—The railway automatic coupling bill passed its second reading in the house of commons. Speaking upon the measure, James Brice, liberal, declared America was far ahead of Great Britain in the matter of automatic couplings. THE FILIPINOS ACTIVE.

Several Encounters Between American Troops and Insurgents.

Many Prominent Natives of the Province of Batuar Have Been Assassinated Because of Their Friendliness to Americans.

Manila, April 9.—Various reports of encounters between the American troops and the insurgents continue to arrive from many points. On Friday Capt. Sturgis, while reconnoitering, struck an insurgent outpost on the Novaliches road, five miles distant from Manila, killing two and capturing ten. All were in full uniform. Unfortunately, Capt. Sturgis' force was not large enough to pursue the main body.

A detachment of the 43d infantry, while scouting in Laguna province, was pursued by the insurgents and obliged to take refuge in a church at Pueto, where the Americans repelled the rebels until reinforcements arrived.

Lieut. Gordon, with a company of the 45th infantry, while scouting near Aparri, Cagayan province, engaged 250 insurgents. Lieut. Gordon was wounded.

A sergeant and corporal of Company I, 18th infantry, were killed in a severe fight in Cuiz province, island of Panay.

The insurgents made a night attack on Calbayon, island of Samar. They killed the sentry, swarmed into the town and searched the house of Maj. Gilmore, of the 43d infantry, who was absent. They killed his cook. Ultimately the Americans drove them out of the town, killing four and capturing 12.

Gen. Young, commanding in North Luzon, has made several requests for reinforcements, representing that his force is inadequate, that the men are exhausted by the necessity of constant vigilance, that he is unable to garrison the towns in his jurisdiction; that the insurgents are returning to the district and killing the amigos, and that it is necessary for him to inflict punishment in several sections before the rainy season begins.

Gen. James Bell, who is commanding in Southern Luzon, has made similar representations. He says his forces are inadequate, and that he merely holds a few towns without controlling the territory.

The president of the town of Samal, province of Bataan, Luzon, and another prominent native have been assassinated because they were known to be friendly to the Americans.

GREAT DAM GAVE WAY.

Eight Men and Boys Caught in the Flood, and Only One of Them Made His Escape.

Austin, Tex., April 7.—The great dam across the Colorado river, which was constructed seven years ago at a cost of an even million dollars, was swept away Saturday by an unprecedented flood in that river. The break occurred at 11:15 o'clock, causing an instant rise of fully 50 feet in the river below the dam. This torrent of water swept down upon the broad valley below in all of its force.

The power house, municipal water, electric light and power plant situated immediately below the dam, was flooded immediately, and eight persons, men and boys, were caught in the power room, and all except one were drowned like rats in a trap. Those who drowned in the power room were: John Baiz, Walter Blossom, Frank Pinget, Thomas Kirkpatrick and "Old Dan," colored, all employes, and three boys who were watching the flood from the power house windows.

Reports from the neighboring country are to the effect that everything is under water. In Williamson county north of here, railroad bridges and trackage have been laid waste and all trains have stopped running. Hundreds of head of cattle have been drowned and miles of fencing torn down and washed away. In Bastrop county and in the southern portion of this county similar conditions prevail, everything being under water, and much loss of property is reported. The country tributary to the Colorado river all the way down its course is being inundated, and while it is believed the worst is over, the loss as estimated will exceed some $3,000,000, counting Austin as the largest loser.

Washington, April 8.—Brig. Gen. Wilson has transmitted to congress Maj. Kingman's report of the survey of the Tennessee river for which an appropriation of $35,000 was made in 1898, between Chattanooga and Riverton. A careful study is necessary to ascertain to what degree the river can be improved, but indications are that it is susceptible of improvement to Coal creek at moderate cost. Maj. Kingman says it is worthy of improvement.

New Orleans, April 8.—Alfred C. Green, a member of a large real estate firm of J. H. O'Connor & Co., committed suicide by shooting himself at the entrance to his office opposite the St. Charles hotel Saturday. He died almost instantly.

ROAST FOR THE QUEEN.

An Article in the United Irishman by Maud Coane Caused That Paper to Be Seized.

New York, April 8.—According to the Dublin correspondent the copy of the United Irishman which was seized contained the following extracts from an article by Maud Gonne, entitled "The Famine Queen:"

"In truth, for Victoria, in the decrepitude of her 81 years to have decided, after an absence of half a century, to revisit the country she hates, whose inhabitants are the victims of the criminal policy of her reign, the political necessity must have been terribly strong, for, after all, she is a woman, and, however vile, selfish and pitiless her soul, she must sometimes tremble as death approaches when she thinks of the countless Irish mothers who, shelterless and watching their starving little ones, have cursed her before they died.

"Every eviction during 63 years has been carried out in Victoria's name, and if there is justice in heaven the shame of those poor Irish emigrant girls, whose very innocence renders them an easy prey, and who have been overcome in the terrible struggle for existence on a foreign shore, will fall on this woman, whose bourgeois virtue is so boasted and in whose name their homes were destroyed.

"Taking the shamrock in her withered hand, she dares to ask Ireland for soldiers to protect the exterminators of their race."

The United States Squadron Formed in Chinese Waters Will Have Headquarters There.

San Francisco, April 8.—The squadron of the United States navy recently formed in Chinese waters is to have its headquarters at Hong Kong. Eskew, having completed the inventory of Sam Hind's drug store, those who predicted while the inventory was being taken, that it was done preparatory to the sale of the establishment, can give their tongues some needful rest, as Mr. Hind is not one of those who runs around to learn what Thomas, Richard and Henry think he ought to do in matters which concern himself individually. It is not in that way Mr. Hind has in things of this kind, and the busy tongues may rest at ease for some time. It is but just to say that Mr. Hind's store is run, at this time, in a way that suits folks and that he knows it; and it may be that the course of business will go on just as now. His clerk is thorough in the art of mixing and handling drugs, and by his same and agreeable mode of treating customers, has won the respect and esteem of all who know him.

Let another person take your left hand in his, and the motion of the key will change from the pendulum like swing to a circular swing. If a third person will place his hand on the shoulder of the second person, the key will stop. Try it and explain it if you can.

CIRCUIT COURT.

The April term of the Boone Circuit Court convened Monday at 1p. m., Judge John W. Greene presiding and J. W. Duncan and J. S. Clutterbuck at the desk to keep the record, while Sheriff Beall and his deputy, B. B. Allphin, and Jailer Adams were on hand to obey the orders of the court.

The call of the grand jurors summoned for the term developed the fact that several had not appeared, but had sent in excuses that were acceptable to the court. The following answered to their names and took their seats: John Scott, John Goodridge, Clark Beemon, J. H. Tanner, M. S. Rouse, William Brittenhelm, John Moody, Gaines Robinson, Perry Aylor, Charles Bode, J. B. Tolin and E. K. Stephens.

The court then explained to the jurors what constituted legal excuses, and when asked if any had a legal excuse to offer, John Goodridge said he did not consider himself a housekeeper. The court asked him a few questions and decided against him. Perry Aylor was excused on account of ill health, and Ed Ferrill, of Verona, was excused because of the illness of his wife. John Cloud and George Clark were called to fill the vacancies. Mr. Cloud said he was not married and did not consider himself a housekeeper—that he lived with his mother. The court heard his statement and decided he was a competent juror. Geo. Clark made out a clear case of non housekeeper and was excused. To complete the jury the Sheriff plucked R. W. Rouse from the small crowd of bystanders. He had no legal excuse to offer, and the jury was completed. The court delivered his usual comprehensive and impressive charge. M. S. Rouse was appointed foreman.

The following attorneys are attending court: F. E. Curley, J. C. Clore, Sam Adams, M. D. Gray, Cy Dyas, C. C. Cram, J. S. Gaunt, Oine Rogers.

The petit juries were organized Tuesday, and are as follows:

Easter Bells.

EASTER bells! Easter bells!
Oh, the happy sound!
Chiming over hills and dells,
All the earth around,
With the budding flowers springing,
With the song the brook is singing,
With the carols gayly ringing.
Wake, oh, gladsome Easter bells!

Easter bells! Easter bells!
Sing your message grand,
Echoing in endless swells
Over sea and land!
In the seed from earth awaking,
In the bud from winter breaking,
In the heart its gloom forsaking,
Read your story, Easter bells!

Easter bells! Easter bells!
Waken Peace and Love!
Kindness in your music dwells,
Hallowed from above.
Stay the tumult and the wronging,
Melt the clouds around us thronging,
Hush the cares to earth belonging,
Joyful, joyful Easter Bells!
—George Cooper, in Golden Days.

MRS. DEWEY'S EASTER.

THE horses jogged easily along toward town. They were lazy old fellows, Nat and Billy, and they had a heavy load of grain on for the mill and perhaps resented it. Mrs. Dewey sat perched up beside her husband on the high seat of the wagon, drawing her shawl close about her, as the chill March wind struck her sensibly, as she remarked to her husband, with a protesting shiver. She was a plump little woman who had been pretty once, when her hair was brown and curly, her eyes bright and her complexion fair and peachy, but since she had married Lon Dewey, and gone out to his big grain farm to live, continual hard work had aged her greatly, and the brightness and bloom of her girlhood days were almost crushed out of her.

Mr. Dewey was a good man, for all that he so thoroughly needed waking up, but he had been accustomed to seeing his mother and sisters turn off great quantities of work with their robust health and strength, and it simply did not occur to him that his wife was wearing her life away in a treadmill which was taxing her to the utmost limit of her endurance.

"Wheat's a bringin' a dollar a bushel," remarked Mr. Dewey, as he flicked his whip suggestively around Nat's heels. "I reckon if I can get the crop sold afore she drops, I'll be some hundreds ahead of what I've been ary year before in some time."

"Lon, don't you suppose, if you do, that we could have a new carpet in the parlor? It seems like if I could have something real handsome to look at, it would lighten the work ever so much."

"Ain't I handsome enough?" asked Mr. Dewey, with unusual humor.

Mrs. Dewey laughed. Her husband was not a handsome man at his best, and to-day he had taken little time to "slick up," and the March wind had tousled his hair and reddened his nose in addition.

"The rag carpet was pretty enough when it was new," she continued, "but somehows I've got awfully tired of rag carpetin'."

"You wimmin folks get terribly tired of things anyhow, it seems to me," remarked Mr. Dewey, reflectively.

"Yes, we do, Lon," replied his wife, with an unusual burst of feeling. "I'm tired to death of looking at the same things, and of wearing the same clothes year in and year out. I get so hungry for pretty things sometimes it seems like I'd go wild."

Mr. Dewey turned and looked at his wife in astonishment.

"Well, I swan, Martha," he said, slowly. "Pity you didn't marry a rich man that could give you all you wanted."

"As I don't want no rich man," Martha Dewey caught her breath in a half sob. "You're plenty rich enough, only you've got a notion of thinking I don't need nice things like other women have them. Pretty things don't cost so much more than homely ones, either."

"Well, I swum, what's got into you, Martha, all of a sudden?"

"Nothing new, Lon Dewey," replied his wife in a combative tone, "it's there pretty much all the time, but sometimes it swells and surges, and sets me going in spite of myself, like the water turns the big wheels at the mill."

They were in the town now, and a young woman was tripping along the sidewalk, clad in a handsome tailor-made suit, whose perfect fit and material added grace and beauty to a form and face no more to be admired than Martha's in her younger days. Martha looked at her with longing eyes. "If I could be dressed up like that when I go out, I wouldn't mind the hard work atween times so," she said.

The miller came out as the horses trotted up to the door of the great, busy mill. He had been acquainted with Martha years before, and he noted her tired face and shabby attire.

"Martha Hillis didn't get much of a way when she married Lon Dewey," he reflected inwardly, as he invited her to come into the office and get warm while Lon Dewey and his wheat.

Martha forgot her longings in the comfort of the office, the telephone, the ledgers over which the miller pouring, the book keeper himself, a thin, wiry man who made figures with the quickness and precision of an automatic machine. His wife came in as she waited, a brilliant, graceful creature whose garments were redolent with the perfume of rich fur and odorous sachet powders.

A bunch of carnations was pinned to her cloak. "See what Bathers gave me when I ordered my Easter lilies," she said, smilingly to her husband, then noticing the hungry, wistful look on the little woman's face in the office chair, a sweet thought came to her, and unpinning the flowers, she laid three of the fullest and richest in Martha's hand.

"Oh, thank you," cried Martha, her voice trembling with eager delight. "I'm so fond of flowers, and I don't get any time to raise 'em."

She was still fondling the blossoms, and inhaling their rich perfume when Mr. Dewey came in, rubbing his hands in high good humor.

"Well, Martha, I reckon we'd better go up to town now," he said, as he folded a check which the miller had given him. "I've got some runnin' around to do, but you can wait for me some place."

"Come over to my house first and get a lunch," urged the miller. "Mrs. Dewey looks too weary to sit around the stores, and my wife would be delighted to meet her, I know."

Mr. Bonney had a hearty, persuasive way which was hard to resist, and a few moments later Martha was taking off her bonnet in Mrs. Bonney's cosy sitting-room, in response to a generous welcome.

Mary Bonney was one of those sweet, gracious women whose very presence means peace and good will, and Martha looked at her enviously as she moved about in her pretty home, giving an order here, offering a suggestion there, and all the time smiling a welcome to the tired little figure in the big easy chair, a luxurious change from the jolting of the high-seated wagon.

It was all so pretty, it rested her so to look about her, and drink in the beauty of the soft, rich carpet on the parlor floor through the vista of the draped archway, and the daintiness of the lace curtains. An oil painting of a scene in the Alps fascinated her with its wondrous tints, and before she knew it she had spoken aloud. "If I had such a parlor to look into, I—" then she stopped in confusion.

"You are admiring my Alpine scenery," observed Mrs. Bonney, following her eye. "I hung it there where I could see it readily from this room. It rests me so when I am tired, the glimpse of the beauties of nature which I never expect to see for myself."

"Then you know what it is," replied Martha, eagerly. "I get so lonesome for pretty things to rest my eyes on. Maybe it's wicked, for I've got a good home, but there isn't one single thing in it that is pretty like that picture and carpet."

"It isn't wicked at all," Mrs. Bonney spoke warmly. "Our Father would not have filled the earth full of beauty, and given us the taste to enjoy it if it had been wrong."

Mr. Dewey, obtuse as he was, observed the contrast between this home and his own, and he was touched by his wife's evident delight in her surroundings. Her eyes were shining, and her cheeks pink as she followed her hostess to the tasteful dining-room, where the lunch was set out on a pretty table, bright with silver and crystal, for the Bonneys lived as well as their guests, and enjoyed their best things every day.

A stand by the window was filled with Easter lilies, each bearing a tall shaft of buds almost ready to blossom, and in a little sewing-room adjacent, a table was strewn with the details of an Easter costume.

"We are in our annual flurry," observed Mr. Bonney, jovially. "Wife and the girls always enjoy a little Easter finery, but we old fellows don't have much show in that direction, do we?"

"We don't make much fuss about Easter at our house," replied Mr. Dewey, uneasily, as he remembered that not only Easter, but Christmas and birthdays passed by unheeded. After all, life was a barren routine at the Dewey farmhouse, and he was beginning to realize it.

"Well, Easter means so much to us," Mr. Bonney's ruddy face was touched with a tender feeling, "that we love to celebrate it with all the brightness and beauty possible. By the way, Dewey, we are going to have especially fine services in church on Easter Sunday. Come in and enjoy it with us."

Mrs. Dewey looked at her husband, eagerly. There was always so much to do at the farm on Sabbath morning, when they were apt to sleep late, that they had almost given up church going entirely. It was another link out of the chain which bound her girlhood days to her present.

"Yes, do come," urged Mrs. Bonney, seeing the look on Mrs. Dewey's face. "The decorations will be lovely, and the music especially fine."

Mr. Dewey cast a doubtful look at his wife's best dress, doubly shabby in contrast with Mrs. Bonney's handsome tea-gown, and he thought of his own best suit, which had long seen its palmiest days, as he said: "Well, I'll see; mebbe, if the weather is good."

He walked along in silence beside his wife as they went out of the hospitable home. That cheek in his pocket seemed burning to get out and spend itself on the things which Martha not only wanted, but needed to keep her life fresh and young, her spirit sweet and hopeful. He had intended to add it to his already satisfactory bank account, but as he looked down at his wife's face his mind changed.

They were passing a large dry goods store where everything, from a carpet to a paper of pins, was sold. "Let's go in, Martha," he said, awkwardly. "You said you wanted to look at some carpetin', and say, whilst you are about it, I guess you'd better pick out a new dress and some Easter fixin's. That bunnit you've got on looks sort o' ragged."

"Oh, Lon," the little woman came near transfixing the entire street by throwing her arms around his neck then and there, but he opened the door hastily.

"Get all you want, Martha, and I'll foot the bill," he said. "I'm going down to the tailor shop, for if we go to that Easter meeting we want to look a leetle nifty, as other folks do."

Martha's heart sang for joy all the way home, for wasn't there a roll of the loveliest carpet she had ever dreamed of possessing under the seat, and in her lap a bonnet and dress pattern which she would not trust out of her own hands?

Little things enough to make a heart glad in view of the wondrous message of the Eastertide, still to the starving just the crumbs must be fed until they can bear the stronger meat. That followed later, as Martha's heart opened up to the beautiful Easter service, as flowers open their thirsty cups to the warm rain.

Mr. Dewey, too, saw something in life which he had never seen before, a hope beyond the sordidness of everyday care, which lifts the spirit on invisible wings into the realm of the unseen.

Life at the Dewey farmhouse was never again the same routine of dull, unbeautified labor, and Martha is growing young again.—Mrs. F. M. Howard, in Chicago Standard.

"LET'S GO IN, MARTHA."

Easter in Russia.

The early morning hours of Easter day are given over in Russia to religious observances, but after ten o'clock the day becomes one of conviviality. The practice of New Year's calls is observed in Russia at Easter, and everything is fun and jollity. On the streets gayly dressed men and women salute each other, and exchange decorated Easter eggs. Formerly everyone enjoyed the privilege of kissing whom he met, but this practice has lately fallen into disuse.

NOTES FROM WASHINGTON

Fresh Items of Interest on Important Issues for Democratic Readers.

SHORTCOMINGS OF THE ADMINISTRATION

Failure of Republicans to Extend to Porto Rico Protection of the Constitution — Democratic Protest Against Imperialism — Militarism Decried by the People.

[Special Correspondence.]

Gen. Otis is coming home broken in health and with the cheerful prospect of facing a storm of criticism from the people of the country. Emphasis is put on the idea of continued military government in the Philippines, by McKinley's plan of dividing the territory into four military departments, with a general at the head of each.

Otis has been accused of various degrees of incompetency, and perhaps has merited much of the unfavorable criticism, but the democrats do not lose sight of the fact that Otis was merely the agent of the administration. He was carrying out a campaign planned in Washington. If he was not able and efficient, the responsibility still rests with the administration for not selecting some commander who was.

The republicans are saying as little as possible about the Philippines these days, but it is evident that the islands are by no means in a state of subjugation. The sick soldiers are to be cleared out of the hospitals around Manila and sent home so as to leave room for the great increase in the sick list which is expected as soon as the rainy season sets in.

While of course the administration likes to give out the impression that the "insurrection" is over, yet it is not considered "advisable" to lessen the forces in the islands. In fact it is whispered that more troops may be needed if the Mohammedan sultan of Sulu should happen to become rebellious, while the 70,000 troops in the islands are still occupied with the Christian Filipinos in Luzon and the neighborhood.

Democrats in the Next House.

Representative Richardson, chairman of the democratic congressional committee, speaks very hopefully in regard to the democratic chances for capturing a majority of the next house. He says: "The congressional committee holds frequent meetings. Its plans are being developed and a very active campaign will be carried on in a score of districts, where it will only require the change of 500 or 600 votes to give us democratic congressmen instead of the present republican incumbents."

The Ohio Republicans.

The Ohio republican convention, which renominated Representative Grosvenor, adopted a resolution in regard to the administration's attitude toward Porto Rico, which is rather significant. It is regarded in Washington as foreshadowing the republican campaign explanation of the failure to extend the protection of the constitution to that island.

Gen. Grosvenor managed to get his constituents in convention to declare in substance that they favor a tariff between Porto Rico and the rest of the United States, in order "to protect the labor and industry of the people of the United States from unjust competition."

Those same Ohio republicans, in their desire to support congress and the administration, probably forget that this same congress proposes to pass a Hawaiian bill which will allow unrestricted immigration of Chinamen into this country for a year after passage of the bill. How will they square that with "protection to labor and industry of the United States?" Representative Grosvenor is very jubilant over his success in explaining the whole Porto Rican muddle to his constituents, but the democrats are of the opinion that if this is the only defense the republicans have, it is a very weak one and will hardly appeal to intelligent voters.

Protest Against Imperialism.

Speaking of the competition between the cheap labor of Porto Rico and the Philippines with that of the United States, Chairman Jones, of the democratic national committee, points out that the democrats are only for free trade with those islands inasmuch as it is one of the incidental and necessary features of the possession of such territory by the United States, just as free trade between the states is necessary, under the constitution. The democrats have, however, from time to time pointed out to their republican brethren who are daft on the question of imperialism that the acquisition of the insular possessions brought with it very grave questions affecting the industrial conditions of this country, and that the party which stood for imperialism must take the consequences when the people had an opportunity to express their opinion of the matter. It looks now as if the protest against imperialism and its attendant evils is gathering strength every day.

Money for Militarism.

The army appropriation bill is before the house. It asks for a total of nearly $115,000,000 for the fiscal year. The bill is very long and involved. It begins with modest items. The millions are tucked away in modest corners in the bill, but they are there. The debate on it is anything but mild. The house has been smarting over the Porto Rican matter and the army bill gives the opportunity to go into the whole question of republican colonial policy. The republicans are very anxious to pass the measure, because they must have the money with which to keep a big army in the Philippines.

Protests against the measure are coming in from farmers, wage workers and merchants. Militarism is not popular with the people—who have to foot the bills. And the disclosures in the Coeur D'Alene investigation are stirring up considerable apprehension in the country as to the advisability of heavily taxing the people to support a big military force which may possibly be used at home to take away all rights of citizens.

The Porto Rican Tariff.

The house has a fair prospect of getting another vote on the Porto Rican tariff. The senate shows every disposition to pass a government bill with a tariff amendment instead of the tariff measure passed by the house. The senate "free trade insurgents" even intimate that they will now vote for the Foraker bill and give their colleagues in the house a chance to send back a free trade measure if they choose. The whole fight disorganizes the republican forces more and more each day. The one thing that the republicans cling to with great pertinacity is that they will not concede that Porto Rico is a part of the United States and entitled to the protection of the constitution. In the words of Senator Foraker, the unfortunate people of that island are "citizens of Porto Rico" and entitled to the "protection of the United States." That means whatever measure of protection a trust-controlled republican congress chooses to give.

The Coeur D'Alene Troubles.

The investigation of the Coeur D'Alene mining troubles is becoming a matter of national interest. Representative Dick, with the republican majority of the military affairs committee, is conducting the investigation in a most partisan and unfair manner. But he cannot conceal the fact that the military and the administration are responsible for the "permit" system, which is in violation of all rights of citizenship.

ADOLPH PATTERSON.

THE PAYER SHOULD OWN.

An Amazing Instance of Republican Subservience to British Interests.

Even the Davis amendment to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty does not fully protect the interests of the United States in the Nicaragua canal, which we are to build at our own expense, and it is a significant fact that so small a concession made to the American sentiment which believes that the canal we build we should protect is antagonized by all the administration forces. Senator Davis' amendment simply provides that in time of war the United States may land troops, throw up earthworks and other temporary fortifications, blockade the canal and use it as a means of national defense. But when war is begun it is too late to do these things, and the treaty, even as amended by Senator Davis, still denies to the United States the right to erect permanent fortifications at either end of the canal which we are to dig at an expense which will probably not fall short of $230,000,000. It is a complete surrender to Great Britain. It is a virtual admission that except by conceding to the British a voice in the matter we cannot do as we choose on our own continent, even with the complete consent of a nation in whose territory we propose to operate. There is only one more incident in the long record of republican subservience to British interests, but perhaps it is the most amazing, the most incomprehensible, the most execrable of all.

McKinley Plutocrats.

Behind Mr. McKinley is a combination of men who are the products and defenders of the republican socialism, not one of whom is in politics to be president, but all of whom want to be next to the president, and feel that they must win. They believe in money, for gaining business or social or political ends. They are the "plutocrats," the "money power," who had nearly 7,000,000 of enemies in 1896, and who would have had more if the nature of the issue of that year had not united all property interests, those who believe in government for private gain and those who hold that government should consider merely the public welfare.—Henry Loomis Nelson, in Atlantic.

——An exchange says "if Mr. McKinley has the courage of his convictions he will either veto or refuse to sign the Porto Rican tariff bill." There comes the old question: What are Mr. McKinley's convictions? The president in his annual message advised free trade with Porto Rico. He emphasized this as a plain duty. Then came the bill to impose 25 per cent. of the Dingley duties, afterward amended so as to make it 15 per cent. for two years. It was assumed that the leaders in the house and the president were at cross-purposes; but lo, the leaders were sent for and left the white house with the word that the bill must pass. The president whipped the recalcitrants into opposition to his own message. What can the senate do for such a man?—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——Imperialism is no longer a myth in this country, and imperialist is a substantive that has at last found the thing it stands for. Our imperialists are the republican protectionists who want to put high tariff taxes on the products of our new possessions imported into the United States. Imperialism and protection are both medieval institutions. It is natural that they should find favor only with bourbon republicans.—N. Y. Times.

——The plans of the republicans for the campaign of 1900 are said to include a tour by McKinley, with speeches from the tail end of trains. In 1896 Mohammed stayed at Canton and invited the mountain to come to him. In 1900 Mohammed will go to the mountain.—St. Louis Republic.

THE PALLID MAN QUAILS.

It Was "Up to Him" and His Soul Was Filled with Terror But He Escaped.

"It is up to you, now."

The pallid man turned more pallid, and glared wildly around for an avenue of escape, Pennsylvania avenue or any other old avenue. They were closed.

"It is up to you, now."

The pallid man wondered why Prof. Osborne, after convicting Molineux, had come down to Washington post-haste on the Congressional Limited to prosecute him. It had been "up to Cornish." Now it was up to him. He thought of his crimes, and his knees shook in a manner that would make Zazie turn green when she shakes her bangled wrists after chewing up 13 sofa pillows and one sofa couch ($4.80, reduced).

"It is up to you, now."

The pallid man recalled his last murder. It was a dark night. The place, Long bridge. The hour, midnight. As he had thrown his writhing victim, a young and beautiful maiden cat, tied in the sultan's specially prepared Bosphorus bag, the piercing shriek the dying young creature shrieked haunted him still. And now they were hunting for him.

"It is up to you, now."

"For God's sake! What?"

"Your necktie. Up to your chin, your ears and the rim of your remaining locks on the rear five escape of your billiard ball. Pull it down."—Washington Star.

Getting At the Facts.

Wife (after the honeymoon)—Why did you deceive me about your income?

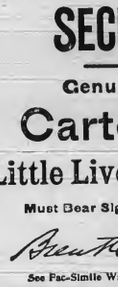
Husband—I didn't, my dear.

"Yes, you did. You told me you were getting $30 a week when you asked me to marry you."

"You evidently misunderstood me. I said my position was worth $30—and so it is—but for some reason best known to the boss he gives me only ten dollars."—Chicago Evening News.

Physical Reaction.

Brown—How do you feel about Sunday golf?



Jones—Don't tell that I said so, but I have heard sermons so long lately that they made me want to go out and take a whack at something.—Indianapolis Journal.

SOME FAST HORSES.

The Greatest String of Thoroughbreds Ever Trained By One Man Soon Going East

Louisville, Ky., April 9.—Wednesday morning Trainer Peter Winner will start east with all the horses he has been training at Churchill Downs since the close of the eastern racing season last fall. The horses, which probably make up the greatest string of thoroughbreds ever trained by one man, will go to the metropolitan tracks, most of them landing at Sheepshead Bay. They include Jean Berand, Rosh, Harmonica, Khashandra, Annoy and Chanticleer, the property of ex-Secretary of the Navy Whitney; Kinley Mack, McLeod of Dare, High Order, Lida Holliday, Sharpshooter, Max Bendiff, Taleese, Flying Torpedo, John Hunover and Edgeworth, owned by Eastin & Larabee; John E. Madden's Wooster Boy, and Brown & Wimmer's Monadnock, and several other high-class runners.

Over 600 thoroughbreds are in training at Churchill Downs.

Lieut. Gibson, owned by Charles R. Smith, of Chicago, worked a mile and an eighth, with 115 pounds up, in 1:55 Sunday morning. He went the mile in 1:41 2-5, which is the fastest work done at the track this spring.

LINDSAY'S FUTURE.

The Kentucky Senator Will Practice Law in New York When Not In the Senate.

Washington, April 6.—Announcement is made that Senator Lindsay, of Kentucky, is about to enter upon the practice of law in New York city. The name of the firm, which will begin business on the first of May next, is Lindsay, Kremer, Rulich and Palmer. Senator Lindsay said:

"I contemplate practicing law in New York and have entered into an arrangement looking to that end. Of course, I shall continue the discharge of my duties as senator, not permitting the arrangement to interfere with them. During the interval between the adjournment of the present session of the senate and the commencement of the next, I propose to give such time to the business of the concern as I can. My senatorial duties, however, have the first claim on my time and attention and will not in any wise be neglected."

Defective Frog Causes a Wreck.

Louisville, Ky., April 7.—A defective frog on a trestle across Eleventh street, resulted in the death of Fireman Harry Hatfield and the serious injury of Engineer John Powell. A. K. & I. bridge engine, with 17 empty freight cars, from New Albany, was overturned. The engine ran along on its side 75 feet, stopping within three inches of the canal. Hatfield and Powell jumped, but the former was caught beneath the wheels.

They Fear Cut Worms.

Perryville, Ky., April 6.—Considerable distress is manifested among the farmers in this section superinduced by a recent discovery of a legion of cut worms concealed in the ground, and they are hesitating about planting corn for fear it will be totally destroyed, as were the crops several years ago, by this same insect, which does not take its leave until the hot days of June set in.

Patience Exhausted.

Louisville, Ky., April 7.—A number of election cases were set for trial in the circuit court, but the witnesses for the prosecution failed to appear. As there have been several delays of the kind Judge Barkers' patience became exhausted and he ordered attachments issued for the witnesses who will be compelled to give bonds of $200 for their appearance or remain in jail until the trials.

Woman Evangelist Admitted.

Owensboro, Ky., April 6.—The Owensboro Presbyterian church, in session here, admitted Mrs. L. M. Woosley, a prominent woman evangelist, to membership as an ordained minister. She received a large majority of votes. She has kept up a continued fight for recognition for 12 years.

Battery Being Organized.

Louisville, Ky., April 7.—A volunteer battery is being organized and four Hotchkiss guns, costing $8,000, and two Gatling guns have been provided for. They will soon arrive. The company is composed largely of old Legion officers. It is non-partisan, a number of republicans being among the promoters.

Lacked Ready Money.

Louisville, Ky., April 8.—Lack of ready money to meet notes caused Eitel & Casselnohn, cigar manufacturers, to file a deed of assignment. The assets are $7,000, and exceed the liabilities by about $1,400.

Robbery and Incendiarism.

Williamsburg, Ky., April 7.—The L. & N. railroad depot at Rockhold, eight miles north, was destroyed by fire. Incendiarism and robbery are charged. The agent left $26 in the safe, which is reported missing, together with a lot of railroad tickets.

Assailant Taken Away.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., April 7.—Jesse Barns, the Negro who so badly beat up Deputy Jailer Charles Sledd, was lodged out of jail and taken to Lexington. Mr. Sledd has been steadily growing worse.

CLASH OF AUTHORITY.

A Special Policeman Killed a Deputy Sheriff, and Is Himself Shot Down.

Middlesboro, Ky., April 9.—Much excitement prevails here over a clash of the authorities Saturday night. Will Mosley, a special policeman, shot Charles Cecil, a deputy sheriff, and was himself later killed by unknown persons. Warrants have been sworn out for the arrest of Chic Police King, John Mosley a brother of the man killed, and Will Sullivan. The latter two, who were extra policemen, went with Chief of Police King to arrest a Negro who had been released by the city judge.

The fight is the outcome of the bitter feeling that has existed here between two factions, and the end is difficult to predict. The situation is alarming.

HIS MIND GAVE WAY.

A Young Man Gone Insane as a Result of Reading About the Assassination of Goebel.

Albany, Ky., April 9.—Annarine Powell, a young man of this county, has gone insane as a result of reading too much about the assassination of William Goebel and the subsequent developments, and trials. The young man devoured everything he could get on the matter, and brooded over it constantly.

He was walking along the road when he suddenly began to cry and tear his hair, exclaiming: "They're after me! They went to kill me like they did Goebel!" He is under treatment, but it is doubtful if his mind can be restored.

HAD WARNED GOEBEL.

Sallie Jackson Furnishes Some Sensational Testimony to the Frankfort Grand Jury.

Frankfort, Ky., April 7.—The grand jury heard several witnesses in connection with the assassination of Wm. Goebel. Miss Sallie Jackson is said to have testified that she heard a conversation between a prominent republican officeholder and his wife, and that she went to Goebel and warned him of a conspiracy to kill him, and urged him not to go to the state house the day of the assassination.

He says 1,251 camps are already enrolled in the order, and that there are applications for more than 10. more. Miners Strike.

Madisonville, Ky. April 8.—About 1,600 coal miners in Hopkins county struck Friday, demanding the Indianapolis scale. This district has been unionized during the past year. HER ONE REQUEST.

The Only Remaining Thing That Was Necessary to Complete Her Happiness.

"Listen, my darling."

The youthful millionaire drew to his heart the beautiful girl who had promised to share his wealth and happiness, and in simple language began to recount what the future had in store for them.

"It has been my great wish," he said, "that you should have a home, not only commensurate with your position and my own, but one which will be a fit setting for your altogether sweet and delightful personality. And so for months now I have been engaged in a search after the best that money can buy, and the house I have had built especially for you is now complete throughout. Nothing has been omitted. Decorators and artists have bestowed their services, and all my resources have been taxed to provide our home with a suitable interior and with the most costly furniture. What do you say to this, my dear?"

"It is lovely," replied he betrothed, as she heaved a slight sigh. "There is only one thing more, dearest, that will make me completely and utterly happy."

"It shall be granted," exclaimed her enthusiastic lover. "Only tell me what it is."

The girl at his side stirred rapturously.

"How good of you!" she said. "I was only going to say that when we have moved into our new home I would like the privilege of furnishing it all over again to suit myself."—Life.

England's Armored Trains.

The magnificent armored trains used by England in her war with the Boers will transport her troops, protect bridges and telegraphic communications in about the same way that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters drives dyspepsia from the human stomach and then mounts guard that it does not return. The Bitters has won in every case of indigestion, biliousness, liver and kidney trouble for the past fifty years. It is invaluable at all times.

Not Intimate Enough.

Miss Malson—Excuse my ignorance, but might I to call you Mr. Bones or Dr. Bones?

"The Better Half—Oh, call me anything you like. Some of my friends call me an old idiot.

"Ah, but those are only people who know you intimately."—London Tit-Bits.

HE LIKES WESTERN CANADA.

Duhamel, Jan 24, 1900.

Dear Sir and Friend:

We had a lucky trip, made good connections and got to Wetaskiwin Monday afternoon, stayed there all night, bought a pony and saddle for the boy and hired a three-seated rig for the balance of us and got home to dinner next day; caught the boys cleaning up and getting ready to come after us. Wednesday the snow was all gone and we had nice ground and bright sunshine for a month, and it has been pleasant weather ever since. The ground is frozen about two feet and about six inches of snow—just enough for sleighing. We had one cold spell in December. The thermometer went down to 32 below zero; but we did not suffer with the cold at all. We have worked every day all winter, are all well and feeling well. Have built a log house 18x18, two log stables 16x18, and are now busy on a well. We have ten cows, three other cattle and six head of horses. The boys send their best respects to Mr. Hutchison, and say they will talk to him enough to pay for not writing when he gets up here. Will write you again next Spring and tell you all about the Winter. We all unite in sending you and family our best wishes and respects and hope this will find you all well.

Yours very respectfully,

(Signed) THOMAS TATE.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

O, How Happy I am to BE FREE from NEURALGIA

Is what Mrs. Archie Young of 1817 Oaks Ave., West Superior, Wis., writes us on Jan. 25th, 1900. "I am so thankful to be able to say that your SWANSON'S "5 DROPS" is the best medicine I have ever used in my life. I sent for some last November and commenced using it right away and it helped me from the first dose. Oh, I cannot explain to you how I was suffering from neuralgia! It seemed that death was near at hand. I thought no one could be worse. I was so very weak that I hardly expected to live to see my husband come back from his daily labor. But now I am free from pain, my cheeks are red, and I sleep well the whole night through. Many of my friends are so surprised to see me looking so well that they will send for some of your "5 DROPS."

RHEUMATISM

I have been afflicted with rheumatism for 2 years. I was in bed with it when I saw your advertisement in a paper, recommending SWANSON'S "5 DROPS" very highly. I thought I would try it. It has completely cured me, but I like it so well that I want two more bottles for fear I will get into the same fix I was before I sent for "5 DROPS," writes Mr. Alexander Futrell of Vaundale, Ark., Feb. 6th, 1900.

You know how it is—you neglect—get irregular—first suffer with a slight headache—bad taste in the mouth mornings, and general "all gone" feeling during the day—keep on going from bad to worse until the suffering becomes awful, life loses its charms, and there is many a one that has been driven to suicidal relief. ALABASTINE

LABASTINE is the original and only durable wall coating, entirely different from all kalsomines. Ready for use in white or fourteen beautiful tints by adding cold water.

ADIFS naturally prefer ALABASTINE for walls and ceilings, because it is pure, clean, durable. Put up in dry powdered form, in five-pound packages, with full directions.

LL kalsomines are cheap, temporary preparations made from whiting, chalks, clays, etc., and stuck on walls with decaying animal glue. ALABASTINE is not a kalsomine.

EWARE of the dealer who says he can sell you "same thing" as ALABASTINE or "something just as good." He is either not posted or is trying to deceive you.

ND IN OFFERING something he has bought cheap and tries to sell on ALABASTINE'S demands, he may not realize the damage you will suffer by a kalsomine on your walls.

ENSIBLE dealers will not buy a lawsuit. Dealers risk one by selling and consumers by using infringement. Alabastine Co. own right to make wall coating to mix with cold water.

HE INTERIOR WALLS of every church and school should be coated only with pure, durable ALABASTINE. It safeguards health. Hundreds of tons used yearly for this work.

N BUYING ALABASTINE, customers should avoid getting cheap kalsomines under different names. Insist on having our goods in packages and properly labeled.

UISANCE of wall paper is obviated by ALABASTINE. It can be used on plastered walls, wood ceilings, brick or canvas. A child can brush it on. It does not rub or scale off.

STABLISHED in favor. Shun all imitations. Ask paint dealer or druggist for tint card. Write us for interesting booklet, free. ALABASTINE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich.

WABASH

If it's Omaha

If it's Omaha you want to reach, here's good connection and fast time for you. Good connections save worry; worry is another name for care; care kills. Keep this connection in your mind—when you think of Omaha, remember Wabash—it's the best connection with your trains which reach St. Louis in the evening. Leave St. Louis—Wabash, remember—7.30 p. m., and you will be in Omaha in time for breakfast. If you forget the connection—Omaha-Wabash—and take some other route, the best that can befall you will keep you traveling until noon.

A folder—simple, complete—tells all about it: something worth knowing. If you want to reach any western city, you can have full, specific information about your best train and connections, railroad and sleeping car fares, etc., and the rate will be right.

FROM OWEN COUNTY.

[Herald.]

The town and county flooded with measles.

Congressman Gayle has remembered his constituents by sending them such seeds as he has been able to get from the Agricultural Department.

C. F. Pryor recently went from this county to Illinois and orders the Herald sent to him at Earlville, that State. He says: "The farmers are going to be late with their crops. Hands are getting good wages for farm work. I get $22 a month and all the light bread and potatoes I can eat. When I tell a man I am from Kentucky he asks me if I live near Frankfort. They think it is a bad place."

FROM CARROLL COUNT

[News]

From the amount of tobacco beds under canvas the farmers will make an effort for one of the largest crops of the weed this season than for many years.

On Monday as a man named Ashcraft, of Ethridge, Gallatin county, was crossing the Kentucky river ferry with a big load of tobacco for H. B. Crouch's warehouse at Prestonville, his wagon ran off the side of the ferryboat and the load turned over, bottom side up in the river at the Prestonville landing. After cutting the horses loose one got out on the ferryboat there while the other swam to the Carrollton side, but both got out. The wagon and the tobacco were landed and the tobacco spread out on the bank to dry.

FROM GRANT COUNTY.

[Courier.]

All sorts of stock food is scarce in Grant county to-day than has been known for many years.

It is said that the corner hotel, known as the Johnson House, will change hands again after county court day.

The prospect of a good crop of wheat in Grant county is better than it has been for years. Fruit prospects are also excellent for all sorts save peaches, which all prognosticators say are killed.

The new Catholic church at this place is completed, save for the furnishings, and we suppose the Catholic brethren will dedicate their new edifice in the early spring. It is a neat looking structure from the outside and the interior is very handsome.

Now that spring is really here the promoters of the local telephone line at this place propose to at once begin the work of constructing a connecting line between this place and our sister city of Falmouth. It is understood that the company will also run a line to Burlington connecting with Sherman, probably Crittenden, Mt. Zion, Verona and way points.

An unknown person fired a hay stack for Mit Conley, of the Fairview neighborhood, on the night of the 23d ultimo. He came to town to try to get a bloodhound to track the miscreants, but the track was too cold, and the dogs could not help him. There is no clew to the incendiaries.

Williamstown will have a company of State Guards as soon as the present political muddle is settled. Town marshal, E. B. Clark, has received a commission to raise a company, from Gen. Castleman, and J. Q. Barbour has also received a commission from Gen. Collier. If Beckham is decided by the Courts to be the legal Governor, then Mr Clark will at once organize his company. On the other hand, if Taylor is declared the legal Governor, Mr. Barbour will organize the company.

Man born of woman is small cabbage. In infancy he is full of colic, paregoric and catnip, and in old age he is full of cross words and rheumatism. In his youth his maternal ancestor taketh him across her knee and extendeth to him all sympathy in her nature with the heel end of her slipper, and when he is a man full grown he dodgeth the tax collector and the Sheriff the rest of his life. He spreadeth like a camphor tree, and getteth a political job, and his friends cling to him like a sandspur to your pantsleg. He swelleth with vanity and cutteth frozen water for a time, but is melted like wax in a fire at the next convention and cast in the ash barrel, where his name is Dennis. Out of office his friends forget to cling to him like a vine round a rotton stump, and he soon goeth busted, which maketh him lie down in the cow pasture, where the redbugs get in his hair and beneath his underclothing. He dieth out of the world and goeth to a place too warm to wear clothes. Verily, the last end of that man is worse than the beginning, and the band playeth "A Hot Time in the Old Town."—Albuquerque News.

Since Doc John Whitson has moved into town and quit keeping company with Dad Clore, he has developed into a worker "from a way back," and can be seen daily with John Buckner either repairing fence or making garden, and we feel confident that, if the weather does not get too hot, Whitson & Buckner will soon overstock the Cincinnati market with vegetables.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Fulton was the scene of a very pretty wedding, on the 28th ult., at 7 o'clock, on which occasion their son, Charles, and Miss Mary E. Glass, were married by Bro. Cram, of the M. E. Church South. After the ceremony the relatives in attendance were invited to partake of a bountiful supper, which was enjoyed by all. The bride and groom have many friends who wish them a long and happy life.

On Saturday evening, the 7th inst., the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Buckner was visited by the angel of death, that took their beautiful little daughter Oreola Raymond Buckner, aged 4 years, 8 months and 3 days. Although but an infant she left a sad home of broken-hearted parents and many sorrowing friends. While her death brings a sad loss to her parents and friends it is a priceless gain to little Ocie to be with her heavenly father, where there is no pain nor sorrow, and she will miss the trials and troubles of this world, as she has been a little sufferer constantly since her birth, her affliction being a spinal trouble. There is no pain—no suffering now, but everlasting happiness for her.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 18, 1900. NO. 26

OUR "plain duty" is to not violate promises made people, especially like people of Porto Rico.

SOME of the Republicans have suggested ex-Governor Bradley as a candidate for Congress in the Louisville district.

THE Covington and Newport Democratic politicians are scrapping again. The trouble in that section has a superabundance of supposed ability to fill offices.

CHINA wants to be informed in regard to those "open door" negotiations. She thinks that she ought at least to be admitted to the rights of the "most favored nation" under the agreement.

IF the Senate shows half as much honesty in regard to Quay—a Republican—as it has shown in regard to Clark—a Democrat—it will honor itself more highly than at present seems probable.

IF one-half the Republicans who condemn the outrage perpetrated by their party against Porto Rico should refuse to support the Republican national ticket this fall, the Democrats will elect a President by a majority too immense to compute.

ONE of the candidates for the Democratic nomination for sheriff in Owen county has named his list of deputies if elected. This has been done in other counties in the State, and gives the people an opportunity to protest, if they choose, against the deputies with whom the sheriff proposes to surround himself.

THE race for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Indiana district immediately across the river is warming up. There are two candidates, F. M. Griffith, the incumbent and John Overmeyer, of North Vernon. The indications are it will be a very pretty finish, and the friends of each of the gentlemen are sanguine of success.

THE Franklin county grand jury that has been investigating the assassination of Senator Goebel, returned ten indictments yesterday. Henry E. Youtsey, James Howard, Henry Howard, Harland Whittaker and "Tallow Dick" Combs are indicted as principals, and Charles Fenley, Caleb Powers, John L. Powers, W. H. Culton and F. Wharton Golden, as accessories. The jury is still investigating.

ENGLAND has spent about $500,000,000 in an attempt to subjugate the Boers, and expects to spend $300,000,000 in that same enterprise again this year. These vast amounts she is putting up against the lives and liberties of the Boers, and not a dollar has she to contribute to the relief of her 5,000,000 subjects in India, where gaunt famine stalks abroad. To the relief of the people of India the United States is call to contribute, while Congress violates a pledge made to the Porto Ricans and votes a tariff tax on them to increase their misery and penury. Would not the United States better go to the relief of the starving thousands in Porto Rico than to aid England in stamping out republics by carrying her burden in India?

THE Porto Ricans expected nothing from Spain but oppression, but when Gen. Miles entered the island and promised them the liberty and protection enjoyed by the citizens of the United States, they had faith in this country making good these promises, and believed a better era had dawned for them, but the passage of the bill that subjects them to a tariff on their trade with this country has dashed to pieces all their hopes of liberty and commercial prosperity, and placed Uncle Sam in the attitude of acting in bad faith with them, showing his hand in that direction on the first occasion offered. The Porto Ricans were jubilant when they read the President's "plain duty" message, and thought they were about to realize all Gen. Miles had promised them, but the President's sudden change of policy regards them, brought them face to face with the fact that they are to be bound hand and foot in order that the greedy trusts that flourish in this country may pilfer their island at will and unmolested.

Profits from Poultry.

[National Stockman.]

Occasionally we are told that the profits from paultry breeding are principally on paper, and where one makes a success of the business many fail. It is true that people who engage in the business as a specialty make a failure a great many times, but that is never the fault of the business. The average farm flock is badly managed. In fact, it is not managed at all. It simply drifts along like a log in the stream. Yet it is pretty safe to say that there is not a flock of farm poultry that does not pay.

The majority of the poultry on the farm is fed too much grain. Less grain and more green stuff and meat should be fed. Potatoes, onions, beets, carrots or anything of a vegetable nature is cheaper and tends to keep the fowls much healthier, and that means more eggs and consequently more profit. It never seems to occur to the average farmer that the effect of a long continued diet of grain is as injurious to fowls as to cattle, nor that the concentrated grain food gives the best results when diluted or mixed with some bulky succulent material. Green food and meat are great egg producers in themselves, and keep the system of the hen in a healthy condition, no matter what the breed may be. Every poultryman knows how much hens appreciate green food, especially in the winter.

Roots and vegetables are easily grown and they can be kept all winter. When the fowls are to be confined in houses and scratching pens the hen should be made to exercise also. If she is inactive long enough and fed wholly on grain she will become fat and certainly cease laying. The successful plan for exercise is to have a cabbage hung up in the hen house just high enough for the hens to jump up and get a bite, or have a good runway and scatter bright wheat straw over runway and feed your small grain in this. This will keep the fowls busy scratching to obtain the grain.

Again, farmers should take great interest in the breeds. The only way to make a profit is to use that which converts the raw material into the most product in the shortest space of time. In poultry the pure breeds are capable of yielding the greatest number of eggs and the heaviest carcasses at the least cost. The cross-bred fowl or mongrel is an uncertainty. It has no fixed quality, and cannot transmit uniformity in its offspring, and occupies space that can be better filled by pure breeds.

The Best Remedy for Rheumatism.

QUICK RELIEF FROM PAIN.

All who use Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism are delighted with the quick relief it affords. When speaking of this Mr. D. N. Sink, of Troy, Ohio, says: "Some time ago I had a severe attack of rheumatism in my arm and shoulder. I tried numerous remedies but got no relief until I was recommended by Messrs. Geo. F. Parson & Co., druggists of this place, to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. They recommended it so highly that I bought a bottle. I was soon relieved of all pain. I have since recommended this liniment to many of my friends, who agree with me that it is the best remedy for muscular rheumatism in the market." For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington, Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, C. S. Balsly, Bullittsville, O. N. Grant, Bellevue.

THE three cent pieces to be coined under a recent act of Congress will have a hole in the center one-fourth of an inch in diameter. Hereafter when you get a dime with a hole in it it will not be a dime, but a three cent piece.

SINCE the promises made by Gen. Miles to the Porto Ricans have been broken with such impunity, what certainty is there that Aguinaldo's claim that Uncle Sam's agreement with him in regard to squelching the Spanish were violated, is not true?

THE Kansas City convention hall destroyed by fire a few days since, will be replaced by equally as commodious a building in time for it to accommodate the Democratic national convention.

THE Supreme Court of the United States will hear the arguments in the Kentucky Gubernatorial contest on Monday the 30th day of this month.

There will be basket meeting at Woolper school house on the fifth Sunday in this month, Revs. Kirtley and Hoover preaching.

REPUBLICAN COMMENT.

[Omaha Bee, Rep.]

In view of the fact that two of the three Republican Judges concurred in the decision, it can not fairly be regarded as a partisan judgment. * * * * This should end the contest.

o o o

[Minneapolis Times, Rep.]

Taylor should bow to the ruling of the court and let white winged peace brood over the "dark and bloody ground" again. It is almost time for another election and 'twere well to be off with the old disturbance before the new one is started.

o o o

[Philadelphia Telegraph, Rep.]

Its action is based on such sound technical reasoning that there would seem to be no chance for its reversal by the Supreme Court of the United States, even if that tribunal should assume jurisdiction in the case, which is more than doubtful.

o o o

[New York Tribune, Rep.]

So far as we are able to ascertain, the general opinion of the country, without regard to party, coincides with the judgment of the Kentucky courts, that under the law, however odious—the Legislature had full authority to declare Goebel and Beckham elected, and that its decision was legally effected under conditions for the peculiar character of which the majority was not responsible.

[Indianapolis Journal, Rep.]

Probably the Kentucky Court of Appeals could not do otherwise than grant a writ of error from its decision in the contested election case to the Supreme Court of the United States, but it may be doubted if the latter will take jurisdiction of the case. The controversy is so political, involving State laws and the exercise of discretionary power by the Legislature, that the Supreme Court may well decline to meddle with it.

[Detroit Journal, Rep.]

The records of the Legislature are final and conclusive. The court can not go behind them. Six of the seven Judges concur in the general conclusion, and one of the three Republican members dissents. The conclusion is one that can not be assailed without arguing that the law of the State is void or voidable. * * * If he wishes to go to the Supreme Court of the United States to test the Goebel law he will do his party in Kentucky and elsewhere a great service by going as Governor-elect, and not as a usurper or incumbent of an office that his own State's court has decided belongs to another.

To an interviewer Kentucky's Congressmen expressed themselves as follows in regard to Dewey's candidacy:

Senator Blackburn—What party would nominate Admiral Dewey? Certainly not the Democracy, for Bryan is our candidate. And what platform will he run upon? The woman suffrage platform, I suppose.

Senator Lindsay—Oh, this is only a woman's affair. Dewey was named at an afternoon tea.

Other Kentuckians expressed themselves as follows:

Representative Allen—I am for Bryan first, last and always.

Representative Wheeler—Bryan is my choice against the world, the flesh and the devil.

Representative Gayle—I will vote for any man who can lead the Democratic party to victory.

Representative Smith—I am for Bryan. Dewey is not in it.

Representative Gilbert—I don't know whether Dewey is a Democrat or a Republican, so will vote for Bryan.

Representative Turner—Dewey's candidacy is ridiculous. He won't be in it for a moment.

Representative Boreing—Dewey spoke too late.

Representative Pugh—I fear the friends of the hero of Manila should find for him another legal guardian.

H. F. Hillenmeyer, the nurseryman, of Lexington, says that the fall and winter have been very favorable to the fruit interests in Kentucky and he looks for abundant yields of apples, pears, plums and cherries. Peaches have been injured, and strawberries and raspberries may not be up to the average, but blackberries will be very plentiful. Grape vines were never in better condition and can be relied on to yield in fullest measure.

When Roberts captured Cronje's insignificant remnant at Paardeberg and occupied Bloomfontein, all England thanked its fortunate stars—on the collar of "Bobs"—that Boer resistance was finished, and that a new happy era of cakes and ale had dawned.—Washington Times.

A unique and interesting remnant of a love affair of long ago has recently come to light at Chicago Heights. A few days ago W. H. Drake felled a large cottonwood tree and commenced cutting and splitting it for stove wood. In one small section he found a five eighth inch hole, into which a lock of auburn hair had been placed when the tree was small, and wooden peg three inches long driven in, completely filling the cavity and hiding for many years the cherished token. An idea of the length of time that this treasure has remained in its strange casket may be gained from the fact that the depth of the hole, three and one-half inches, reached slightly beyond the center of the tree.

The battered end of the pin seemed to have projected about one-fourth of an inch. From this it is estimated that the diameter of the tree when the pin was driven did not exceed two and one-half inches. When cut down the tree measured 30 inches in diameter at the stump 20 feet to the first limb and stood 75 feet high. Local authorities say that cottonwoods in this section grow about one-half inch in diameter each year, and according to this the hair has remained in its hiding place 41 years.

The ground on which the tree stood was formerly a farm belonging to Jack Furze, a pioneer.—Chicago Chronicle.

The wheat crop in Indiana will be a failure on account of freezing when there was no snow to protect it. In Shelby county alone 100,000 acres have been plowed up and sown in oats.

That Exciting Episode.

Having read in the RECORDER, week before last, an article copied from the Lawrenceburg Register, and entitled an "Exciting Episode" in which he was represented as one of the participants, Judge Riddell makes, for publication, this statement in regard to a matter to which the author of the "Exciting Episode," undoubtedly had reference, but which was based on false data. It may be well to state here that Judge Riddell was on several expeditions having for its object the same as did the one hereinafter related, often going as far as the northern lakes and once over into Canada.

At a very early day a family named Tousey settled on the Kentucky side of the Ohio river opposite Lawrenceburg, Indiana. This settlement was afterwards known as Touseytown, but has long since disappeared from the map of Boone county. Tousey, who died in the early 40's owned several slaves, and these along with other personal property were sold at public auction to settle his estate. At this sale a negro man, his wife and daughter were sold to a son, George Tousey, who resided in Lawrenceburg, they having pursuaded him to make the purchase, promising him they would serve him and his family faithfully in Lawrenceburg until he was satisfied that their services had been worth to him fully the amount of the purchase money. Soon after these negroes were taken to Lawrenceburg, under the influence of third parties they became insolent, refused to serve Tousey, and would insult the female members of his family they chanced to meet on the street. Tousey came to this side of the river and told his friends that he wished a party would go over and capture the three negroes, and said they would be welcome to all they might make out of them. In a few days a party was organized to carry into execution Tousey's wishes. In that party were John S. Woods, John and Neal Riddell, the names of the other six cannot now be recalled. The quarters of the negroes in Lawrenceburg were visited in a few nights thereafter, and the negro man and his wife captured, the girl being away from home at the time. This capture was made and the negroes returned to Kentucky without any excitement on the part of the citizens of the town. The negro man was prepared to defend his home, an old fashioned army saber being his principal weapon, and with this he gave John Riddell a considerable blow on his neck when he rushed into the room, inflicting a wound that left a scar that Riddell carried to his grave. It was said by Riddell's companions that had the point of the saber not struck the low ceiling in its descent and broke the force of the blow that he would have been decapitated. It should be remembered that Cy Riddell was not in the above raid.

Shortly after the above raid it was learned that the negro girl was working for Archie Reed, a brother in-law of the late Robert Mosby, and a hotel keeper at Wilmington, about three miles back of Aurora. Wilmington was then the county seat of Dearborn county, Indiana. A party consisting of John Wood, John, Neal and Cy Riddell and seven others whose names have passed from Judge Riddell's memory, was organized to capture the girl. It was about daylight one bright spring morning that this party rode off the ferry boat at Aurora, and proceeded in a leisurely manner to Wilmington, at which place they arrived in time for breakfast, which they ordered at the Reed house. The Lawrenceburg raid being fresh in the memory of the Wilmington people, the business of this band of Kentuckians in their midst was soon divined, and considerable excitement resulted. While the Kentuckians were at breakfast a Mr. Dills, who held the office of county clerk, and had learned what was up, took the negro girl to a secure hiding place, while others proceeded to secure warrants for the arrest of John S. Wood and John Riddell, who took part in the Lawrenceburg affair, and whom it had been learned were among the crowd in town. Coming out from breakfast the Kentuckians were confronted by the sheriff, who stepped up to Woods, asking, "is this John S. Woods?" to which Woods replied, "it is," when the warrant charging kidnapping was served on him. The officer then asked it John Riddell was in the crowd, when Neal Riddell asked him to let him see the paper. The sheriff handed it to him, and Riddell proceeded to tear it into small bits.

It was now apparent to the Kentuckians that to protract their stay in Wilmington would be at their peril, with no possible chance of accomplishing that for which they had visited Indiana, so after a short conference they mounted their horses and started back, in no particular hurry, although the indications were they might be pursued by a considerable force. Just before reaching the long wooden bridge that spanned Hogan creek back of Aurora, they discovered the sheriff and a posse following, and as they rode off the bridge the officer and his men rode on at the opposite end. At this point Neal Riddell proposed to his companions that they halt and engage the pursuing party in battle, but wiser counsel prevailed and a battle was avoided. As the Kentuckians approached the ferry at Aurora, Geo. Lane, a brother of the notorious jayhawker, James Lane, of Kansas, was standing in his store door on Front st., and seeing that the sheriff and his posse were trying to out flank the Kentuckians, with whose business Laine was acquainted, he called out notifying them of their danger, when they hastened their movements and reached the ferry boat in safety, where they dismounted and prepared for an engagement, but the pursuing party failed to come down the bank, and Hugh Allen, the ferryman, soon landed them safely on Kentucky soil, and thus at about 1 p. m., the same day ended what, at several times during the morning could have been developed into a most exciting raid. This is, no doubt, the episode to which the Register article referred.

Since the Pinkerton police shot down the striking workmen at Homestead in the summer of 1892 the Carnegie profits have grown enormously, partly on account of the tariff, partly because the company had the Government by the throat, so to speak, in the matter of armor plate for the battleships, and partly because labor had to submit and accept whatever wages were offered.

This year the company expects to make between forty and fifty millions of dollars clear profit, and the capital is to be watered on the strength of this for at least ten times the amount at which it now stands. Those who have to pay tribute to the monopoly in the shape of extortionate prices for manufactured steel probably deserve no sympathy—even if they be the taxpayers of the United States—but the poor workmen who have to slave day and night before the great furnaces deserve some commiseration.

A fair profit on the capital actually invested in the Carnegie works would be perhaps two millions of dollars per annum, or about one twentieth of what is to be divided among the stockholders at the end of this year. The other nineteen twentieths would give each of 38,000 men a thousand dollars or twenty dollars a week.

These figures indicate how much good the management of this huge corporation could do among its employes if it would only add a fraction of its enormous profits to their wages.

There is no likelihood, of course, that this will occur to Messrs. Carnegie and Frick, who have once combined, as the proper thing to do. They will doubtless keep on in the old way, and the chief grabber will continue to laugh at the folly of the nation which passes laws to enable him to gather in such vast sums without let or hindrance.—Elizabethtown News.

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern which is not afraid to be generous. The proprietors of Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles and have the satisfaction of knowing it has cured thousands of hopless cases. Asthma, Bronchitis, La grippe and all Throat and Lung diseases are surely cured by it. Call on W. F. McKim, Burlington; M. J. Crouch, Union, or J. G. Oelsner, Florence, druggists, and get a free bottle. Regular size 50c and $1. Every bottle guaranteed.

They think it is a bad place."

FROM CARROLL COUNT

From the amount of tobacco beds under canvas the farmers will make an effort for one of the largest crops of the weed this season than for many years.

On Monday as a man named Ashcraft, of Ethridge, Gallatin county, was crossing the Kentucky river ferry with a big load of tobacco for H. B. Crouch's warehouse at Prestonville, his wagon ran off the side of the ferryboat and the load turned over, bottom side up in the river at the Prestonville landing. After cutting the horses loose one got out on the ferryboat there while the other swam to the Carrollton side, but both got out. The wagon and the tobacco were landed and the tobacco spread out on the bank to dry.

All sorts of stock food is scarcer in Grant county to-day than has been known for many years.

It is said that the corner hotel, known as the Johnson House, will change hands again after county court day.

The prospect of a good crop of wheat in Grant county is better than it has been for years. Fruit prospects are also excellent for all sorts save peaches, which all prognosticators say are killed.

Frank Cook, whose leg was so badly mangled by a branch of a tree which he had assisted in cutting for bees, falling on him some weeks ago, near Stewartsville, was forced to undergo an amputation last Thursday. At last reports he was doing nicely.

The new Catholic church at this place is completed, save for the furnishings, and we suppose the Catholic brethren will dedicate their new edifice in the early spring. It is a neat looking structure from the outside and the interior is very handsome.

Now that spring is really here the promoters of the local telephone line at this place propose to at once begin the work of constructing a connecting line between this place and our sister city of Falmouth. It is understood that the company will also run a line to Burlington connecting with Sherman, probably Crittenden, Mt. Zion, Verona and way points.

An unknown person fired a hay stack for Mit Conley, of the Fairview neighborhood, on the night of the 23d ultimo. He came to town to try to get a bloodhound to track the miscreants, but the track was too cold, and the dogs could not help him. There is no clew to the incendiaries.

Williamstown will have a company of State Guards as soon as the present political muddle is settled. Town marshal, E. B. Clark, has received a commission to raise a company from Gen. Castleman, and J. Q. Barbour has also received a commission from Gen. Collier. If Beckham is decided by the Courts to be the legal Governor, then Mr Clark will at once organize his company. On the other hand, if Taylor is declared the legal Governor, Mr. Barbour will organize the company.

Man born of woman is small cabbage. In infancy he is full of colic, paregoric and catnip, and in old age he is full of cross words and rheumatism. In his youth his maternal ancestor taketh him across her knee and extendeth to him all sympathy in her nature with the heel end of her slipper, and when he is a man full grown he dodgeth the tax collector and the Sheriff the rest of his life. He spreadeth like a camphor tree, and getteth a political job, and his friends cling to him like a sandspur to your pantaleg. He swelleth with vanity and cutteth frozen water for a time, but is melted like wax in a fire at the next convention and cast in the ash barrel, where his name is Dennis. Out of office his friends forget to cling to him like a vine round a rotton stump, and he soon goeth busted, which maketh him lie down in the cow pasture, where the redbugs get in his hair and beneath his underclothing. He dieth out of the world and goeth to a place too warm to wear clothes. Verily, the last end of that man is worse than the beginning, and the band playeth "A Hot Time in the Old Town."—Albuquerque News.

John Glass and family have moved to Covington, intending to make it their future home.

T. B. Castleman and family returned recently from a visit of several days with relatives in Glencoe.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Buckner take this means of thanking their many friends for their unceasing kindness, during their trouble and affliction.

Miss Minnie Cahill and her aunt, Miss Cahill, returned a few days since from a ten days' visit to Mrs. Lou Kroger, of Williamstown. Miss Minnie was delighted with her visit.

Since Doc John Whitson has moved into town and quit keeping company with Dad Clore, he has developed into a worker "from a way back," and can be seen daily with John Buckner either repairing fence or making garden, and we feel confident that, if the weather does not get too hot, Whitson & Buckner will soon overstock the Cincinnati market with vegetables.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Fulton was the scene of a very pretty wedding, on the 28th ult., at 7 o'clock, on which occasion their son, Charles, and Miss Mary E. Glass, were married by Bro. Cram, of the M. E. Church South. After the ceremony the relatives in attendance were invited to partake of a bountiful supper, which was enjoyed by all. The bride and groom have many friends who wish them a long and happy life.

On Saturday evening, the 7th inst., the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Buckner was visited by the angel of death that took their beautiful little daughter Oceola Raymond Buckner, aged 4 years, 8 months and 3 days. Although but an infant she left a sad home of broken-hearted parents and many sorrowing friends. While her death brings a sad loss to her parents and friends it is a priceless gain to little Ocie to be with her heaveuly father, where there is no pain nor sorrow, and she will miss the trials and troubles of this world, as she has been a little sufferer constantly since her birth; her affliction being a spinal trouble. There is no pain—no suffering now, but everlasting happiness for her.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 18, 1900. NO. 26

OUR "plain duty" is to not violate promises made people, especially like people of Porto Rico.

SOME of the Republicans have suggested ex-Governor Bradley as a candidate for Congress in the Louisville district.

THE Covington and Newport Democratic politicians are scrapping again. The trouble in that section has a superabundance of supposed ability to fill offices.

CHINA wants to be informed in regard to those "open door" negotiations. She thinks that she ought at least to be admitted to the rights of the "most favored nation" under the agreement.

IF the Senate shows half as much honesty in regard to Quay—a Republican—as it has shown in regard to Clark—a Democrat—it will honor itself more highly than at present seems probable.

IF one-half the Republicans who condemn the outrage perpetrated by their party against Porto Rico should refuse to support the Republican national ticket this fall, the Democrats will elect a President by a majority too immense to compute.

ONE of the candidates for the Democratic nomination for sheriff in Owen county has named his list of deputies if elected. This has been done in other counties in the State, and gives the people an opportunity to protest, if they choose, against the deputies with whom the sheriff proposes to surround himself.

THE race for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Indiana district immediately across the river is warming up. There are two candidates, F. M. Griffith, the incumbent and John Overmeyer, of North Vernon. The indications are it will be a very pretty finish, and the friends of each of the gentlemen are sanguine of success.

THE Franklin county grand jury that has been investigating the assassination of Senator Goebel, returned ten indictments yesterday. Henry E. Youtsey, James Howard, Henry Howard, Harland Whittaker and "Tallow Dick" Combs are indicted as principals, and Charles Fenley, Caleb Powers, John L. Powers, W. H. Culton and F. Wharton Golden, as accessories. The jury is still investigating.

ENGLAND has spent about $500,000,000 in an attempt to subjugate the Boers, and expects to spend $300,000,000 in that same enterprise again this year. These vast amounts she is putting up against the lives and liberties of the Boers, and not a dollar has she to contribute to the relief of her 5,000,000 subjects in India, where gaunt famine stalks abroad. To the relief of the people of India the United States is call to contribute, while Congress violates a pledge made to the Porto Ricans and votes a tariff tax on them to increase their misery and penury. Would not the United States better go to the relief of the starving thousands in Porto Rico than to aid England in stamping out republics by carrying her burden in India?

THE Porto Ricans expected nothing from Spain but oppression, but when Gen. Miles entered the island and promised them the liberty and protection enjoyed by the citizens of the United States, they had faith in this country making good these promises, and believed a better era had dawned for them, but the passage of the bill that subjects them to a tariff on their trade with this country has dashed to pieces all their hopes of liberty and commercial prosperity, and placed Uncle Sam in the attitude of acting in bad faith with them, showing his hand in that direction on the first occasion offered. The Porto Ricans were jubilant when they read the President's "plain duty" message, and thought they were soon to realize all Gen. Miles had promised them, but the President's sudden change of policy towards them, brought them face to face with the fact that they are to be bound hand and foot in order that the greedy trusts that flourish in this country may pilfer their island at will and unmolested.

Profits from Poultry.

Occasionally we are told that the profits from paultry breeding are principally on paper, and where one makes a success of the business many fail. It is true that people who engage in the business as a specialty make a failure a great many times, but that is never the fault of the business. The average farm flock is badly managed. In fact, it is not managed at all. It simply drifts along like a log in the stream. Yet it is pretty safe to say that there is not a flock of farm poultry that does not pay.

The majority of the poultry on the farm is fed too much grain. Less grain and more green stuff and meat should be fed. Potatoes, onions, beets, carrots or anything of a vegetable nature is cheaper and tends to keep the fowls much healthier, and that means more eggs and consequently more profit. It never seems to occur to the average farmer that the effect of a long continued diet of grain is as injurious to fowls as to cattle, nor that the concentrated grain food gives the best results when diluted or mixed with some bulky succulent material. Green food and meat are great egg producers in themselves, and keep the system of the hen in a healthy condition, no matter what the breed may be. Every poultryman knows how much hens appreciate green food, especially in the winter.

Roots and vegetables are easily grown and they can be kept all winter. When the fowls are to be confined in houses and scratching pens the hen should be made to exercise also. If she is inactive long enough and fed wholly on grain she will become fat and certainly cease laying. The successful plan for exercise is to have a cabbage hung up in the hen house just high enough for the hens to jump up and get a bite, or have a good runway and scatter bright wheat straw over runway and feed your small grain in this. This will keep the fowls busy scratching to obtain the grain.

Again, farmers should take great interest in the breeds. The only way to make a profit is to use that which converts the raw material into the most product in the shortest space of time. In poultry the pure breeds are capable of yielding the greatest number of eggs and the heaviest carcasses at the least cost. The cross-bred fowl or mongrel is an uncertainty. It has no fixed quality, and cannot transmit uniformity in its offspring, and occupies space that can be better filled by pure breeds.

The Best Remedy for Rheumatism.

QUICK RELIEF FROM PAIN.

All who use Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism are delighted with the quick relief it affords. When speaking of this Mr. D. N. Sink, of Troy, Ohio, says: "Some time ago I had a severe attack of rheumatism in my arm and shoulder. I tried numerous remedies but got no relief until I was recommended by Messrs. Geo. F. Parson & Co., druggists of this place, to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. They recommended it so highly that I bought a bottle. I was soon relieved of all pain. I have since recommended this liniment to many of my friends, who agree with me that it is the best remedy for muscular rheumatism in the market." For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington, Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, C. S. Balsly, Bullittsville, O. N. Grant, Bellevue.

THE three cent pieces to be coined under a recent act of Congress will have a hole in the center one-fourth of an inch in diameter. Hereafter when you get a dime with a hole in it it will not be a dime, but a three cent piece.

SINCE the promises made by Gen. Miles to the Porto Ricans have been broken with such impunity, what certainty is there that Aguinaldo's claim that Uncle Sam's agreement with him in regard to squelching the Spanish were violated, is not true?

THE Kansas City convention hall destroyed by fire a few days since, will be replaced by equally as commodious a building in time for it to accommodate the Democratic national convention.

THE Supreme Court of the United States will hear the arguments in the Kentucky Gubernatorial contest on Monday the 30th day of this month.

There will be basket meeting at Woolper school house on the fifth Sunday in this month, Revs. Kirtley and Hoover preaching.

REPUBLICAN COMMENT.

[Omaha Bee, Rep.]

In view of the fact that two of the three Republican Judges concurred in the decision, it can not fairly be regarded as a partisan judgment. * * * * This should end the contest.

o o o

[Minneapolis Times, Rep.]

Taylor should bow to the ruling of the court and let white winged peace brood over the "dark and bloody ground" again. It is almost time for another election and 'twere well to be off with the old disturbance before the new one is started.

o o o

[Philadelphia Telegraph, Rep.]

Its action is based on such sound technical reasoning that there would seem to be no chance for its reversal by the Supreme Court of the United States, even if that tribunal should assume jurisdiction in the case, which is more than doubtful.

o o o

[New York Tribune, Rep.]

So far as we are able to ascertain, the general opinion of the country, without regard to party, coincides with the judgment of the Kentucky courts, that under the law, however odious—the Legislature had full authority to declare Goebel and Beckham elected, and that its decision was legally effected under conditions for the peculiar character of which the majority was not responsible.

[Indianapolis Journal, Rep.]

Probably the Kentucky Court of Appeals could not do otherwise than grant a writ of error from its decision in the contested election case to the Supreme Court of the United States, but it may be doubted if the latter will take jurisdiction of the case. The controversy is so political, involving State laws and the exercise of discretionary power by the Legislature, that the Supreme Court may well decline to meddle with it.

[Detroit Journal, Rep.]

The records of the Legislature are final and conclusive. The court can not go behind them. Six or the seven Judges concur in the general conclusion, and one of the three Republican members dissents. The conclusion is one that can not be assailed without arguing that the law of the State is void or voidable. * * * If he wishes to go to the Supreme Court of the United States to test the Goebel law he will do his party in Kentucky and elsewhere a great service by going as Governor-elect, and not as a usurper or incumbent of an office that his own State's court has decided belongs to another.

To an interviewer Kentucky's Congressmen expressed themselves as follows in regard to Dewey's candidacy:

Senator Blackburn—What party would nominate Admiral Dewey? Certainly not the Democracy, for Bryan is our candidate. And what platform will he run upon? The woman suffrage platform, I suppose.

Senator Lindsay—Oh, this is only a woman's affair. Dewey was named at an afternoon tea.

Other Kentuckians expressed themselves as follows:

Representative Allen—I am for Bryan first, last and always.

Representative Wheeler—Bryan is my choice against the world, the flesh and the devil.

Representative Gayle—I will vote for any man who can lead the Democratic party to victory.

Representative Smith—I am for Bryan. Dewey is not in it.

Representative Gilbert—I don't know whether Dewey is a Democrat or a Republican, so will vote for Bryan.

Representative Turner—Dewey's candidacy is ridiculous. He won't be in it for a moment.

Representative Boreing—Dewey spoke too late.

Representative Pugh—I fear the friends of the hero of Manila should find for him another legal guardian.

H. F. Hillenmeyer, the nurseryman, of Lexington, says that the fall and winter have been very favorable to the fruit interests in Kentucky and he looks for abundant yields of apples, pears, plums and cherries. Peaches have been injured, and strawberries and raspberries may not be up to the average, but blackberries will be very plentiful. Grape vines were never in better condition and can be relied on to yield in fullest measure.

A unique and interesting remnant of a love affair of long ago has recently come to light at Chicago Heights. A few days ago W. H. Drake felled a large cottonwood tree and commenced cutting and splitting it for stove wood. In one small section he found a five eighth inch hole, into which a lock of auburn hair had been placed when the tree was small, and wooden peg three inches long driven in, completely filling the cavity and hiding for many years the cherished token. An idea of the length of time that this treasure has remained in its strange casket may be gained from the fact that the depth of the hole, three and one-half inches, reached slightly beyond the center of the tree.

The battered end of the pin seemed to have projected about one fourth of an inch. From this it is estimated that the diameter of the tree when the pin was driven did not exceed two and one-half inches. When cut down the tree measured 30 inches in diameter at the stump 20 feet to the first limb and stood 75 feet high. Local authorities say that cottonwoods in this section grow about one-half inch in diameter each year, and according to this the hair has remained in its hiding place 41 years.

That Exciting Episode.

Having read in the RECORDER, week before last, an article copied from the Lawrenceburg Register, and entitled an "Exciting Episode" in which he was represented as one of the participants, Judge Riddell makes, for publication, this statement in regard to a matter to which the author of the "Exciting Episode," undoubtedly had reference, but which was based on false data. It may be well to state here that Judge Riddell was on several expeditions having for its object the same as did the one hereinafter related, often going as far as the northern lakes and once over into Canada.

At a very early day a family named Tousey settled on the Kentucky side of the Ohio river opposite Lawrenceburg, Indiana. This settlement was afterwards known as Touseytown, but has long since disappeared from the map of Boone county. Tousey, who died in the early 40's owned several slaves, and these along with other personal property were sold at public auction to settle his estate. At this sale a negro man, his wife and daughter were sold to a son, George Tousey, who resided in Lawrenceburg, they having pursuaded him to make the purchase, promising him they would serve him and his family faithfully in Lawrenceburg until he was satisfied that their services had been worth to him fully the amount of the purchase money. Soon after these negroes were taken to Lawrenceburg, under the influence of third parties they became insolent, refused to serve Tousey, and would insult the female members of his family they chanced to meet on the street. Tousey came to this side of the river and told his friends that he wished a party would go over and capture the three negroes, and said they would be welcome to all they might make out of them. In a few days a party was organized to carry into execution Tousey's wishes. In that party were John S. Woods, John and Neal Riddell, the names of the other six cannot now be recalled. The quarters of the negroes in Lawrenceburg were visited in a few nights thereafter, and the negro man and his wife captured, the girl being away from home at the time. This capture was made and the negroes returned to Kentucky without any excitement on the part of the citizens of the town. The negro man was prepared to defend his home, an old fashioned army saber being his principal weapon, and with this he gave John Riddell a considerable blow on his neck when he rushed into the room, inflicting a wound that left a scar that Riddell carried to his grave. It was said by Riddell's companions that had the point of the saber not struck the low ceiling in its descent and broke the force of the blow that he would have been decapitated. It should be remembered that Cy Riddell was not in the above raid.

Shortly after the above raid it was learned that the negro girl was working for Archie Reed, a brother in-law of the late Robert Mosby, and a hotel keeper at Wilmington, about three miles back of Aurora. Wilmington was then the county seat of Dearborn county, Indiana. A party consisting of John Wood, John, Neal and Cy Riddell and seven others whose names have passed from Judge Riddell's memory, was organized to capture the girl. It was about daylight one bright spring morning that this party rode off the ferry boat at Aurora, and proceeded in a leisurely manner to Wilmington, at which place they arrived in time for breakfast, which they ordered at the Reed house. The Lawrenceburg raid being fresh in the memory of the Wilmington people, the business of this band of Kentuckians in their midst was soon divined, and considerable excitement resulted. While the Kentuckians were at breakfast a Mr. Dills, who held the office of county clerk, and had learned what was up, took the negro girl to a secure hiding place, while others proceeded to secure warrants for the arrest of John S. Wood and John Riddell, who took part in the Lawrenceburg affair, and whom it had been learned were among the crowd in town. Coming out from breakfast the Kentuckians were confronted by the sheriff, who stepped up to Woods, asking, "is this John S. Woods?" to which Woods replied, "it is," when the warrant charging kidnapping was served on him. The officer then asked it John Riddell was in the crowd, when Neal Riddell asked him to let him see the paper. The sheriff handed it to him, and Riddell proceeded to tear it into small bits.

It was now apparent to the Kentuckians that to protract their stay in Wilmington would be at their peril, with no possible chance of accomplishing that for which they had visited Indiana, so after a short conference they mounted their horses and started back, in no particular hurry, although the indications were they might be pursued by a considerable force. Just before reaching the long wooden bridge that spanned Hogan creek back of Aurora, they discovered the sheriff and a posse following, and as they rode off the bridge the officer and his men rode on at the opposite end. At this point Neal Riddell proposed to his companions that they halt and engage the pursuing party in battle, but wiser counsel prevailed and a battle was avoided. As the Kentuckians approached the ferry at Aurora, Geo. Lane, a brother of the notorious jayhawker, James Lane, of Kansas, was standing in his store door on Front st., and seeing that the sheriff and his posse were trying to out flank the Kentuckians, with whose business Laine was acquainted, he called out notifying them of their danger, when they hastened their movements and reached the ferry boat in safety, where they dismounted and prepared for an engagement, but the pursuing party failed to come down the bank, and Hugh Allen, the ferryman, soon landed them safely on Kentucky soil, and thus at about 1 p. m., the same day ended what, at several times during the morning could have been developed into a most exciting raid. This is, no doubt, the episode to which the Register article referred.

Since the Pinkerton police shot down the striking workmen at Homestead in the summer of 1892 the Carnegie profits have grown enormously, partly on account of the tariff, partly because the company had the Government by the throat, so to speak, in the matter of armor plate for the battleships, and partly because labor had to submit and accept whatever wages were offered.

This year the company expects to make between forty and fifty millions of dollars clear profit, and the capital is to be watered on the strength of this for at least ten times the amount at which it now stands. Those who have to pay tribute to the monopoly in the shape of extortionate prices for manufactured steel probably deserve no sympathy—even if they be the taxpayers of the United States—but the poor workmen who have to slave day and night before the great furnaces deserve some commiseration.

A fair profit on the capital actually invested in the Carnegie works would be perhaps two millions of dollars per annum, or about one twentieth of what is to be divided among the stockholders at the end of this year. The other nineteen-twentieths would give each of 38,000 men a thousand dollars or twenty dollars a week.

These figures indicate how much good the management of this huge corporation could do among its employes if it would only add a fraction of its enormous profits to their wages.

There is no likelihood, of course, that this will occur to Messrs. Carnegie and Frick, who have once combined, as the proper thing to do. They will doubtless keep on in the old way, and the chief grabber will continue to laugh at the folly of the nation which passes laws to enable him to gather in such vast sums without let or hindrance.—Elizabethtown News.

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern which is not afraid to be generous. The proprietors of Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles and have the satisfaction of knowing it has cured thousands of hopless cases. Asthma, Bronchitis, La grippe and all Throat and Lung diseases are surely cured by it. Call on W. F. McKim, Burlington; M. J. Crouch, Union, or J. G. Oelsner, Florence, druggists, and get a free bottle. Regular size 50c and $1. Every bottle guaranteed.

Fruit farms are being developed in the south. In one place in North Carolina there are strawberry farms of fifty acres. The berries are large. The peach orchards are being cultivated. Several kinds of fruit are being raised, and the enterprises have been very successful.

The Hamburg-American steamer Deutschland, recently launched at the Vulcan yards in Stettin, will be next to the largest passenger vessel afloat. She is expected to be the fastest craft ever propelled by steam, and will contain features never before attempted on an ocean steamship.

Gen. Botha (pronounced Boat-a) is a farmer, and modestly claims to know more about sheep raising than he does about fighting. He is only 36 years of age and almost every year of that time he has spent in raising sheep and cattle on the large ranges of land in the Vryheid district of the Transvaal.

While South African soldiers have been facing cannons the servants of the astronomical observatory in another part of South Africa have been peacefully gazing through their telescopes, and have discovered a little star of the eighth magnitude, which is the swiftest traveler that has yet been found among the stellar hosts.

John MacGowan, of Clay county, Florida, claims to be the oldest pensioner in this country. According to papers now on file in Wasoington he is 121 years old. He was born in Ireland on March 15, 1779, and came to this country in 1804. He enlisted in the 17th Connecticut regiment in 1863 when he was 84 years old. The pension officials are inclined to believe his statement.

People keep asking whether it should be spelled Porto Rico or Puerto Rico. The Spaniards spell it with a "u," and the board of geographical names, appointed by the United States government to decide disputes in spelling and pronneciation, adopted the Spanish style, but Senator Foraker's bill establishing a civil government on that island provides that the official spelling shall be Porto Rico.

A New York doctor says: "I know of several girls who have died from sipping ices through a straw. This is the reason: In sucking the ices up the cold substance strikes the palate of the mouth and cools the head. Then when the young women walk in the sun and exert themselves the cold reacts, giving them a severe headache, which is later followed by a fever, and in some cases death has resulted."

Views have been taken of the orchards of the Messrs. Miller and Pancake, in the vicinity of Romney, W. Va., for exhibition at the Paris exposition. These orchards are the largest in the world, comprising 250,000 peach and plum trees. They planted 181,000 trees the last year and cleared for planting 1,735 acres of timber land. The first season their orchards came into bearing they shipped one hundred car loads of peaches and plums.

Probably the greatest profit ever enjoyed by the government as a result of the destruction of money was in connection with the fractional currency or shinplasters issued during the civil war. The total amount issued was $368,724,079, of which $6,880,553 has never been presented for redemption. A large amount has been preserved as curios by collectors and occasionally even now it is offered for redemption.

It is a recognized fact that American women can tour the earth alone and with safety. This was exemplified in Naples recently, when a thief attempted to rob Mrs. Burges and her daughter, of Boston, as they were leaving a shop. The thief tried to seize the purse from Mrs. Burges, who promptly took him by the throat, threw him to the ground, and, recovering her property, with the utmost composure requested him to "be off."

A French Canadian trapper, Joseph Zolique La Joie, says he has discovered the North Pole. According to his own statement, he ran up against the pole while drifting on an ice floe. On his unwilling journey, La Joie ate several of his dogs, and all the fish he could find. He struck land after a cold journey of long duration, and was taken in charge by a Polar race of Indians, who took him upon a mountain that gave forth a volcanic light. This mountain, La Joie firmly believes, is the North Pole.

When Queen Victoria visited Ireland in 1849 she spent a brief time in Belfast. She was accompanied by the prince consort. As he gazed at a collection of linens in the white-linen hall, his royal highness conceived the idea of an international exhibition of the manufacturers and products of the world. On the return of Prince Albert to London he consulted the late Earl Granville, who corroborated the idea, and the result was the great exhibition in Hyde Park, London, in [illegible] enterprise of the kind [illegible] seen.

THE PARIS EXPOSITION

Immense Crowds Flock Into the Grounds on Sunday.

The American National Pavilion Remained Closed, as Did Most of the Other Pavilions, Many of Them Not Being Finished.

Paris, April 15.—Saturday the world's fair of 1900 was officially opened. The weather was bright.

The opening ceremonies began at 2 p. m., when President Loubet, the official party, followed by the foreign ambassadors in full dress, the ministry and the exposition commissioners went to the Halle De Fester. The hall was gorgeously decorated. The ceremonies opened with the singing of the Marseillaise. Then M. Millerand, minister of commerce, made a speech handing the exposition over to President Loubet. The president replied, and declared the exposition open.

Americans especially will be proud of their country's display at this world's fair, for the United States stands second only to France herself in number of exhibitors, which treble those of any foreign country. The following is a table of exhibitors, which speaks eloquently of American enterprises:

France	30,000
United States	6,564
Belgium	2,500
Germany	2,000
Italy	2,000
Russia	1,500
Scandinavia	1,400
Austria	1,000
Great Britain	600
The British Colonies	600

America occupies 229,622 square feet with her 47 distinct exhibition spaces in the main exposition grounds, 14 in the Vincennes annex, excluding the ground covered by our eagle surmounting the national pavlol on the Quai d'Orsay. American enterprise, however, is not only shown in the size of her representation, but also in the preparedness of her installation, as compared with that of most of the other countries, and it can safely be said that but for the dilatoriness of French workmen and methods the United States exhibit would have been exposed to their showcases to Saturday's visitors. Unfortunately French tardiness has hampered all American efforts to rush matters.

Paris, April 16.—Glorious weather favored the opening of the exposition to the general public Sunday and immense crowds flocked into the grounds. The area of the exhibition, however, is so great that nowhere was there any crush. The visitors were mainly composed of provincials and foreigners. Comparatively few Parisians were to be seen. Aware of the great backwardness of the preparations they remained away for the most part.

The management demanded two entrance tickets for morning admission, one for afternoon admission and two during the evening, when the Eiffel tower and the palaces on the Champ de Mars were illuminated. But there were absolutely no attractions provided, not even a band of music, and the people promenaded in front of the empty and in many cases unfinished buildings and along roads where only in the case of the main avenues had the work of paving been completed.

Visitors who left the central arteries found their pathway filled with pitfalls and heaped with debris, some thoroughfares resembling mere bridle paths. The crowd, however, was perfectly good natured and took the matter philosophically. Hardly a murmur was heard anywhere in the way of criticism.

The moving sidewalk, access to which cost 50 centimes, proved a great success, and was thronged throughout the day.

The American national pavilion remained closed. So also did most of the other pavilions for the excellent reason that their interiors are still unfinished.

Two hundred and fifty thousand persons visited the exposition during the day.

Customs Receipts at Havana.

Washington, April 15.—The division of customs and insular affairs of the war department gave out for publication Saturday the statement that the receipts at the Havana customs house for the first three months of 1900 were $2,426,414, against $2,348,888 for the same period of 1899, an increase for the three months of 1900 of $777,525. The February receipts alone were $967,682, while those for March were $1,006,259.

Fortune for a Widow.

Owosso, Mich., April 15.—Mrs. Lizzie Pentlock, a young widow with two children, has fallen heir to a fortune estimated at $300,000 by the death of her uncle, John Sweney, in New York city. Mrs. Pentlock has been living in poverty.

Secretary Long's Ambition.

Murderer Sentenced.

Princeton, Ind., April 16.—William Boyd was found guilty of murder in the first degree and sentenced to prison for life. Boyd's conviction is for the murder of Simon Sikora, a Jew, [illegible] last November.

DOINGS IN THE ORIENT.

The Emperor of China Escaped From Pekin—Battle With the "Boxers"—Another Collision.

Victoria, B. C., April 16.—The steamer Rio Jan Maru, which has just arrived here from the Orient, brings a strange story of a Chinaman who was arrested at Wuchang. After lying in jail and being beaten he proclaimed himself to be the emperor. He claimed he had escaped from the palace, where he had been imprisoned by the empress dowager, and has since been traveling incognito. He possesses documents bearing the seal of the court of Pekin identifying him as the emperor.

A party of British government surveyors engaged on the work of defining the Burmese boundary had a collision with a large body of Chinese laborers who some time ago waylaid and murdered Consul Lytton, Maj. Kyttle and Mr. Sutherland, of the former boundary survey party. This time the Chinese were completely routed, 80 being killed and many injured.

Official advices have been received at Pekin of a severe engagement between the imperial Chinese troops and a large body of "Boxers," a secret society. The battle, which was indecisive, occurred at Yen Chin, in Pechili province. About 4,000 men were engaged, the forces being equally divided. The casualties were very heavy.

COTTON CROP CENSUS.

An Expert Special Agent Has Been Appointed to Obtain Complete Returns.

Washington, April 16.—There is probably no single fact the knowledge of which is more interesting and important to the southern people than the amount of the cotton crop. The present methods of ascertaining the magnitude of the cotton crop are unsatisfactory. There is one method of ascertaining the amount of the crop exactly, for there is one process—that of ginning—to which all cotton for any commercial or industrial use whatever must be subjected. If one could obtain from all the cotton gins of the country reports of the amount of staple they have turned out, the precise aggregate of the whole crop would be known.

It is proposed to apply this process in taking the twelfth census, the field work of which is to begin on June 3. An expert special agent has been appointed whose sole duty will be to obtain returns from all the ginning and baling establisiments in the cotton growing region. No ginnery is too small or insignificant to be visited and asked for a return.

CYCLONE IN TEXAS.

Eight Houses Wrecked and Several Lives Lost at Royse, Thirty Miles From Dallas.

Dallas, Tex., April 16.—A special to the News from Royse, Tex., dated April 16, 2 a. m., says:

"A cyclone struck this place at midnight and it is believed that several lives have been lost. Eight houses were wrecked and at this hour the greatest excitement prevails.

"There has been an electric display early in the night, and ominous clouds had gathered in the northwest. There was, however, but little wind. A light breeze prevailed until about 15 minutes before the cyclone. This came almost without warning.

"A man in a buggy was lifted from his seat and blown 100 yards.

"Telegraph and telephone lines were destroyed."

Royse is 30 miles north of Dallas.

Price of Soft Coal Advanced.

Chicago, April 15.—Mine operators representing over a dozen mines in Indiana and Illinois held a secret meeting at the Great Northern hotel. After the meeting it was reported they had agreed to increase still further the price of soft coal, but how much was not stated. It was claimed that under the present wage scale to miners it was impossible to operate mines at a profit without raising prices.

BOERS RETAKE A TOWN

The Royal Irish Fusiliers Were Compelled to Evacuate Rouxville.

It Is Reported That Seven Thousand Boers Are at Wepener—The British War Office Claims to Have No News From the Front.

Kimberley, April 14.—The town guard has been remobilized and guns have been remounted at the forts owing to the fears of the populace that the Boers will again attempt a siege. A battalion of the Scottish Rifles has arrived and the redoubts around the town are manned with regular troops. The military authorities, however, regard these fears as groundless.

Pretoria, Wednesday, April 11.—United States Consul Hay, in an interview had here, says that the report that Capt. Reichman, the United States military attache, participated in the fight near Sannas Post is absolutely false. Capt. Reichman, it is said, was occupied most of the time attending upon the wounded Dutch military attache, Lieut. Nix, who has since died.

London, April 15.—The only development reported thus far Saturday in the cable dispatches received here from South Africa is the heavy bombardment of the British trenches at Warrenton, April 13, but which resulted in no damage, the Boers, apparently, being under the impression that the British meditated an attack.

Maj. Gen. Sir Frederick Carrington accompanied by detachments of bushmen and Scotch scouts, sailed Saturday from Cape Town for Beira, Portuguese East Africa.

Beyond the mysterious Cape Town hints regarding the early expectation of good news about Mafeking, there is no further information at hand in connection with the beleaguered town, which now must be in great straights.

Milan, April 15.—The Boer peace commissioners started for The Hague Saturday afternoon. Dr. Leyds, the diplomatic agent for the Transvaal, accompanying them as far as Brussels.

Aliwal North, April 14.—Five hundred Boers under Commandant Swanepoel forced the Royal Irish rifles to evacuate Rouxville. The former landdrost, who had been acting for the British, offered to go to the front to prove himself a true Free Stater, and almost to a man the Free Staters who had taken the oath rejoined the Boers. Nearly every one produced a Mauser. Looting, however, was repressed.

It is officially reported that the British losses at Wepener in four days fighting were 18 men killed and 132 wounded. Among the casualties are Quartermaster Williams, Lieut. Halford and Lieut. Duncan.

It is reported that there are 7,000 Boers at Wepener.

Sir Godfrey Lagdon, resident commissioner at Maseru, telegraphs that no shelling has been heard from the direction of Wepener to-day.

A regiment of British infantry and a battery of artillery arrived Friday.

Gen. Brabant's headquarters and all the mounted troops have gone to Rouxville.

The Northern Post asserts that the Rouxville district furnished 1,000 recruits to the Boer forces as the result of the invasion last week.

Fourteen sympathizers have been imprisoned. The Boers admit having shot Mr. Giney, the hotel keeper, for taking forage to the British. A paymaster with £1,400 was captured.

London, April 16.—The war office has nothing to communicate to the public. It may be taken for granted that the rumor of Gen. Brabant's victory at Wepener is premature. With the remainder of his force he left Aliwal North for Rouxville, and there has scarcely been time for an engagement.

There is practically no fresh news this morning. All the Bloemfontein dispatches, however, breathe a confident tone. There seems to be a heavy demand on the railway for so large an army leaves the populace bare of everything save the absolute necessities of life.

The utmost Lord Roberts will be able to do for some time to come will be in the direction of clearing the Boers from the southern part of the Free State.

The dispatches announce the approach of winter. The first pinch of frost has been felt at Bloemfontein, where considerable rain has fallen.

London, April 16.—The Cape Town correspondent of the Daily Telegraph telegraphing Sunday, says: "An unconfirmed report is in circulation here that Gen. Brabant has inflicted a crushing defeat upon the Boers at Wepener, capturing guns and taking prisoners."

London, April 16.—The Bloemfontein correspondent of the Times telegraphing Sunday, says: "It is reported that reinforcement for the Boers, with 60 wagons, have arrived at Dewetsdorp en route for Wepener. This should precipitate an action."

Dewey and Bryan to Meet.

Chicago, April 14.—Adm. Dewey and William Jennings Bryan will meet here Tuesday evening, May 1, for the first time since the hero of Manila announced he was a presidential candidate. Both the distinguished guests are aware of the prospective meeting.

Money Hid Under the Carpet.

Tipton, Ind., April 16.—Homer Idlay concealed $400 under the carpet in his bedroom, and as a result is minus that amount. In the absence of his family unknown persons found the money.

DEATH RELEASED HIM.

An Aged Mother Went to Meet Her Convict Son With a Pardon and Found That He Had Just Died.

Atlanta, Ga., April 15.—Armed with a pardon from the governor for the release of her boy, Charles McGee, his old mother hastened to the scene of her son's confinement, and so anxious was she to reach her son and impart to him the good news of his release that she called a passing cab and gave the driver instructions to lose no time. When the driver halted at the camps the mother rushed in to the guard in charge. She nervously handed him the paper which meant freedom to her son.

"The governor's pardon is unnecessary," said the guard tenderly. "Your son died a few minutes ago. You come too late with your pardon."

Mrs. McCabe, bowed with grief, returned to the city and made arrangements for the burial of her son. The boy had been sent to the convict camp for 12 months for a misdemeanor. He had served five months of his term, but his health had been failing for some time.

BANANA TRUST.

The National Association of Dealers Meets in Chicago to Formulate Opposition.

Chicago, April 15.—Banana dealers from all the central and western states met here, to attend a special session of the National Banana Jobbers' Association of the United States. The object of the meeting was to take action in regard to the alleged monopoly in the importation of bananas, which, it is said, is now almost completely controlling the trade in this country. Several plans were suggested for fighting the so-called trust, one of the most favorably received being the purchase by the association of banana plantations in Spanish Honduras and other Central and South American countries and a line of steamers of its own. The formation of an independent association of western dealers was also discussed at length.

STRUCK A MULE.

A Freight Train Wrecked, Killing Two Men and Seriously Injuring Five Others.

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 16.—A through freight train on the Southern railway struck a mule and was wrecked while running at full speed near Huntsville, Ala. The engineer, Percy Armstrong, and the fireman, Sandy Osborne, were killed and five of the train crew were seriously injured.

The engine plunged down a steep embankment. The freight cars crowded upon the overturned engine and instantly caught fire, and suffocated and crushed to death in the cab both engineer and fireman, who had resolutely stuck to their posts. The wreck caused a delay of 12 hours in the running of trains on the Memphis division.

INSURGENTS ACTIVE.

A Force of 300 Attacked 30 Men of the 32d Infantry—Two of the Americans Were Killed.

Manila, April 15.—The insurgents, supposedly Mascado's command, are again active about the Mariveles mountains across the bay from Manila. A force estimated at 300 attacked Balanga where three companies of the 32d infantry are stationed on Monday night, but were easily repulsed. Friday they attacked Capt Goldman with 30 men of the 32d regiment near Orion killing two Americans. Goldman then retired.

The transport Thomas sails Sunday taking Gen. Theodore Schwan and 500 discharged and sick soldiers.

Coal Mines Closed.

Knoxville, Tenn., April 15.—The Thistle and Fraterville coal mines, operated by the Coal Creek Coal Co., near this city, are closed. Three hundred men have struck demanding that four union men who had been discharged be reinstated. The strike is very orderly. The miners were given notice to return to work Saturday or to remove their mining tools and vacate the company's tenant houses. Nothing has yet been done.

Southern Authoress Dead.

Mobile, Ala., April 15.—Mrs. Elizabeth Whitfield Bellamy, authoress, is dead at her home in this city, aged 63 years. She was the widow of Dr. Edward C. Bellamy, surgeon in the confederate army. Her best known work, "Old Man Gilbert," had a large vogue because of its faithful portrayal of southern social conditions. Her last novel, "Trials of Penny Lancaster," appeared last year.

Coming to Kentucky.

San Francisco, April. 15.—Mrs. Henry F. Lawton, widow of the general, came up from her home in Redlands and will be the guest of Gen. Shafter for a few days while closing up some business affair previous to taking up permanent residence with her family in Kentucky.

Demands of Cigar Makers.

New York, April 16.—The 5,000 cigar makers who have been locked out have declared a strike and say now that they will not return to work until a raise of from $2 to $3 per week is made in their wages. A general strike is threatened.

Line to a New Coal Field.

London, Ky., April 16.—The Louisville & Nashville railroad will shortly build a branch line from Pittsburgh, this county, to Manchester, Clay county, where there are rich coal and oil fields.

ITEMS OF INTEREST FOR DEMOCRATS.

Resignation of Webster Davis, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, and its Significance—Blunders of President McKinley—Democratic Prospects—The Ship Subsidy.

(Special Correspondence.)

The protest against President McKinley by his own party continues. The resignation of Webster Davis, assistant secretary of the interior, is one of the severest blows ever given the administration.

To put it briefly, Mr. Davis resigns because he wishes to be free to tell the people the exact conditions of the Boers and what he learned of them during his recent visit to South Africa. He cannot do this and retain his important position under this administration. President McKinley is so thoroughly committed to the Anglo-American understanding that he will not allow an employe of the government to tell the facts about the Boers, who are making such a brave struggle for liberty.

Popular sympathy has been with the Boers all along and Mr. Davis' course cannot but accentuate the indignation against McKinley for his pro-British attitude.

Mr. Davis is an orator of splendid ability. He stands high in the councils of the republican party. He went to South Africa with an unprejudiced mind. He is now enthusiastic in behalf of the Boers on account of the things he has actually witnessed. He says the British censorship has not permitted the Boers' side of the question to be known. He proposes that it shall be known.

Mr. Davis' first speech on the subject will be given in Washington, but he will be in demand all over the country. In addition to the recital of a thrilling story of Boer patriotism, every speech will be of necessity an earnest protest against President McKinley's policy. That a man of such ability and heretofore a loyal republican should be arrayed against the administration on so important an issue is enough to deepen the gloom and discouragement which has characterized the republican counsels for some time.

McKinley's Blunders.

There begins to be serious question whether McKinley is after all a probable candidate for reelection. He has piled up such a mountain of blunders and has so thoroughly offended the powerful and able men in his own party, that even at this late day the republicans seem to be casting about for a more available candidate.

The movement is a quiet one, but there are indications in Washington that the search for the man is being made. The republicans cannot conceal their anxiety over the outcome of the presidential election, and it is becoming more apparent every day that they fear defeat on account of the division in their own ranks. It can hardly be said that any one candidate is being mentioned in McKinley's stead. In fact it seems difficult to pick one who would combine the requisite qualities for an enthusiastic and united party campaign. Still the feeling against McKinley has been gathering force. The Webster episode gave it renewed momentum.

Democratic Prospects.

Democrats in congress are much pleased over the recent action of the democratic national committee in sending out warning that all delegates sent to Kansas City should be instructed. The nomination of Bryan and reaffirmation of the Chicago platform seem to be conceded without question, but it is thought that no precaution should be spared to make assurance doubly sure. In Washington the local Bryan enthusiasm is very marked and the democratic leaders in congress receive encouraging reports from their constituents as to the prospects of democratic success in the campaign. While the republicans are constantly divided by quarrels and seem to be getting farther and farther away from the people, the democratic harmony and enthusiasm increases in like proportion.

No Pretense of Principle.

During the closing hours of the senate debate on the Porto Rican bill all pretense of principle was dropped and the discussion dropped merely to the plane of party tactics and political expediency. Senator Depew, who bids fair to become as much of an oratorical nuisance as the youthful Beveridge, quoted statistics whose inaccuracy might pass muster in an after-dinner speech, but they made the republicans look rather weary and melancholy. Senators Spooner and Cullom could find no better arguments than to plead for time in which to let the "great and good McKinley" work out the unconstitutional salvation of Porto Rico.

The Ship Subsidy Grab.

The ship subsidy $9,000,000 grab is being rushed through the house. Representative Grosvenor, of Ohio, champions it in a long introductory report in which various arguments are very plausibly put. The only trouble is that the alleged facts on which the arguments are based do not exist at all. From start to finish the bill is a Standard Oil subsidy. It is designed to give every Standard Oil tank steamer a subsidy which would build it three times over every two years.

Much ado is made by Representative Grosvenor over the high wages to be paid to American seamen on subsidized vessels. The fact is that the bill only provides for American officers and the crew may be Lascars or Japs for anything the shipping trust cares. The one thing certain is that the cheapest kind of seamen will be employed. Conditions and wages are already so bad on American-owned vessels that American seamen cannot be persuaded to man them. The subsidy bill is for the benefit of the trust owners and not the trust employed seamen.

ADOLPH PATTERSON.

TRUST AGAINST TRUST.

The Republican Bluff About Action Against the Monopolistic Combines.

The republican party, which, according to one of its ablest exponents, always knows how to get out of its dilemmas, realizes that something startling will have to be done, and done at once, to assure the American people that it is opposed to the trusts. The size of the undertaking it proposes may well be realized from the condition of public sentiment throughout the country at the present time. The relations between the administration and the Standard Oil bunk in New York; the abandonment of the president's free trade position with regard to Porto Rico, on the demand of other trusts; the exposure of the Idaho bull pen horrors inflicted upon American miners by negro soldiers employed for the purpose at the dictation of trust magnates—these and other like developments have made it indeed no easy task for the party in power, placed in power by and for the benefit of the trusts, to convince the citizenship of the United States that its dearest wish is to throttle and destroy the thing upon which it lives and thrives, and to which it owes allegiance unlimited by humanity, honor, law or constitution. When the republican party talks about action against the trusts it is too much like "casting out devils, in the name of Beelzebub, prince of devils," not to be humorous.

Still, the party of Hanna, Rockefeller & Co. is not without effrontery, among its other virtues, and it seriously proposes an attempt to convince American voters that if once more trusted with control of national affairs it will never sleep until the last trust is rooted out of the union. In order that there shall be no question of republican good faith, or that Mr. McKinley is not a sturdy anti-trust man, just as in 1896 he was a bimetallist and a civil service reformer, the proprietors of the administration are being urged to keep their profits and operations as much under cover as possible until after the presidential election. This method of assuaging public wrath is being pushed to the extent of inducing the warring partners in the Carnegie trust to postpone their litigation until next winter, when the fact that a protected infant industry can make a profit of $42,000,000 in one year out of the gold mine of Dingleyism will be no longer harmful to the party for immediate purposes.

The republican brethren are good, or mean to be; but it is strictly a post facto goodness that they intend. They will only attempt to crush the hydra-headed monster of monopoly with a constitutional amendment, which they will kill as soon as the proposition has served its purpose in the campaign.—Washington Times.

——The neatness with which the republicans have spiked all their guns in this Porto Rican affair is illustrated when one analyzes the desperate claim that a tariff on island goods is necessary to prevent the United States from being flooded with cheap products, and the American laboring man from being smothered under the competition of tropical cheap labor. If free trade with Porto Rico means such dreadful things, why in the name of sanity has a bill just passed the senate providing for absolute free trade with Hawaii? Hawaii is tropical, and it is full of Japanese and Chinese coolies, who supply the cheapest labor in the world. Does Senator Hanna maintain that the American laboring man has nothing to fear from free trade with Hawaii, while free trade with Porto Rico would mean his ruin? Come, Mr. Hanna, treat the American people as if they had some little intelligence.—Springfield Republican.

——We have made a most deplorable departure, under this administration, from the international policy that made us the greatest and most envied of nations. We are apparently on the eve of imperialism. We threaten the attempt to assimilate an empire and a republic. We have served notice on the world that we think more of protection than of our boasted love of human liberty and equality. If this be done, we shall have forfeited the moral right to insist that the maintenance of republics in South and Central America must not be interfered with by the powers of the old world. We are deliberately inviting all sorts of trouble.—Detroit Free Press.

——Do you know any reason why the government of the United States should take away your money, under the cover of bounty payments, and give it to another? And that other man already rich? This is the ship bounty scheme. Going further, do you know any reason why government should take away your money, under cover of "protection," in any form, and give it to another? — Portland Oregonian (Rep.).

——There will be no relief from the robber trusts until the people turn out the rascals who enact laws licensing these corporations to indulge in commercial plunder and who render inoperative and useless statutes enacted to put a check on their inordinate greed and ruthless extortions.—Kansas City Times.

THE RESURRECTION.

Dr. Talmage's Easter Sermon Rings All the Bells of Gladness.

Blooming Flowers, Emblematic of Paradise, Fitly Celebrate the Bursting of Christ's Tomb—A Season of Rejoicing.

This sermon of Dr. Talmage rings all the bells of gladness, especially appropriate at this season, when all Christendom is celebrating Christ's resurrection; text, John 19:41, "In the garden a new sepulcher."

Looking around the churches this morning, seeing flowers in wreaths and flowers in stars and flowers in crosses and flowers in crowns, billows of beauty, conflagration of beauty, you feel as if you stood in a small heaven.

You say these flowers will fade. Yes, but perhaps you may see them again. They may be immortal. The fragrance of the flower may be the spirit of the flower; the body of the flower dying on earth, its spirit may appear in better worlds. I do not say it will be so. I say it may be so. The ancestors of those tuberoses and camellias and japonicas and jasmines and heliotropes were born in paradise. These apostles of beauty came down in the regular line of apostolic succession. Their ancestors during the flood, underground, afterward appeared.

The world started with Eden; it will end with Eden. Heaven is called a paradise of God. Paradise means flowers. While theological geniuses in this day are trying to blot out everything material from their idea of Heaven, and, so far as I can tell, their future state is to be a floating around somewhere between the Great Bear and Cassiopeia, I should not be surprised if at last I can pick up a daisy on the everlasting hills and hear it say: "I am one of the glorified flowers of earth. Don't you remember me? I worshiped with you on Easter morning in 1900."

My text introduces us into a garden. It is a manor in the suburbs of Jerusalem owned by a wealthy gentleman by the name of Joseph. He belonged to the court of 70 who had condemned Christ, but he had voted in the negative, or, being a timid man, had absented himself when the vote was to be taken. At great expense he laid out the garden. It being a hot climate, I suppose there were trees broad branched, and there were paths winding under these trees, and here and there were waters dripping down over the rocks into fish ponds, and there were vines and flowers blooming from the wall, and all around the beauties of kiosk and aboriculture. After the fatigues of the Jerusalem courtroom, how refreshing to come into this suburban retreat, botanical and pomological!

Wandering in the garden, I behold some rocks which have on them the mark of the sculptor's chisel. I come nearer, and I find there is a subterranean recess. I come down the marble steps, and I come to a portico, over which there is an architrave, by the chisel cut in to representations of fruits and flowers. I enter the portico. On either side there are rooms—two or four or six rooms of rock, the walls of these rooms having niches, each niche large enough to hold a dead body. Here is one room that is especially wealthy of sculpture.

The fact is that Joseph realizes he cannot always walk this garden, and he has provided this place for his last slumber. Oh, what a beautiful spot in which to wait for the coming of the resurrection! Mark well this tomb, for it is be the most celebrated tomb in all the ages. Catacombs of Egypt, tomb of Napoleon, Mahal Taj, of India, nothing compared with it. Christ has just been murdered, and His body will be thrown to the dogs and the ravens, like other crucified bodies, unless there be prompt and efficient hindrance. Joseph, the owner of this mausoleum in the suburbs of Jerusalem cannot pay for Bethlehem manger and Calvarean cross and Pilate's ruffian judiciary. Post mortem honors cannot atone for ante mortem ignominies.

Again, standing in this garden of the sepulcher, I am impressed with the fact that floral and arboreseent decorations are appropriate for the place of the dead. We are glad that among flowers and sculptural adornments Christ spent the short time of His inhumation.

I cannot understand what I sometimes see in the newspapers where the obsequies are announced and the friends say in connection with it: "Send no flowers." Rather, if the means allow—I say if the means allow—strew the casket with flowers, the hearse with flowers, the grave with flowers. Put them on the brow—it will suggest coronation; in their hand—it will mean victory.

Christ was buried in a garden. Flowers mean resurrection. Death is sad enough anyhow. Let conservatory and arboretum contribute to its alleviation. The harebell will ring the victory; the passion flower will express the sympathy; the daffodil will kindle its lamp and illumine the darkness. The cluster of asters will be the constellation. Your little child loved flowers when she was living. Put them in her hand now that she can go forth no more and pluck them for herself. On sunshiny days take a fresh garland and put it over the still heart.

Brooklyn has no grander glory than its Greenwood, nor Boston than its Mount Auburn, nor Philadelphia than its Laurel Hill, nor Cincinnati than its Spring Grove, nor San Francisco than its Lone Mountain. But what shall we say of those country graveyards, with the vines broken down and the grass aslant and the mound caved in and the grass [illegible] seal of letter was ever more easily broken than that seal of the sanhedrin on the door of the tomb. The dead body in the niche in the rock begins to move in its shroud of fine linen, slides down upon the pavement, moves out of the portico, appears in the doorway, advances into the open air, comes up the marble steps. Having left His mortuary attire behind Him, He comes forth in workman's garb, as I take it, from the fact that the women mistook Him for the gardener.

That day the grave received such shattering it can never be rebuilt. All the trowels of earthly masonry can never mend it. Forever and forever it is a broken tomb. Death, taking side with the military in that fight, received a terrible cut from the angel's spear of flame, so that he himself shall go down after awhile under it. The king of terrors retiring before the King of Grace! The Lord is risen! Let earth and Heaven keep Easter today! Hosanna!

Some things strike my observation while standing in this garden with a new sepulcher. And, first, post mortem honors in contrast with ante mortem ignominies. If they could have afforded Christ such a costly sepulcher, why could not they have given Him an earthly residence? Will they give this piece of marble to a dead Christ instead of a soft pillow for the living Jesus? If they had expended half the value of that tomb to make Christ comfortable, it would not have been so sad a story. He asked bread; they gave Him a stone.

Christ, like most of the world's benefactors, was appreciated better after He was dead. Westminster abbey and monumental Greenwood are the world's attempt to atone by honors to the dead for wrongs to the living. Poet's corner in Westminster abbey attempts to pay for the sufferings of Grub street.

Go through that Poet's corner in Westminster abbey. There is Handel, the great musician, from whose music you hear to-day; but while I look at his statue I cannot help but think of the discords with which his fellow musicians tried to destroy him. There is the tomb of John Dryden, a beautiful monument; but I cannot help but thing at 70 years of age he wrote of his being oppressed in fortune and of the contract that he had just made for a thousand verses at sixpence a line. And there, too, you find the monument of Samuel Butler, the author of "Hudibras;" but while I look at his monument in Poet's corner I cannot but ask myself where he died. In a garret. There I see the costly tablet in the Poet's corner—the costly tablet to one of whom the celebrated Waller wrote: "The old blind schoolmaster, John Milton, has just issued a tedious poem on the fall of man. If the length of it be no virtue, it has none." There is a beautiful monument to Sheridan. Poor Sheridan! If he could only have discounted that monument for a mutton chop!

Oh, you unfilial children, do not give your parents so much tombstone, but a few more blankets—less funeral and more bedroom! If five per cent. of the money we now spend on Burns' banquets could have been expended in making the living Scotch poet comfortable, he would not have been harried with the drudgery of an excise-man. Horace Greeley, outrageously abused while living, when dead is followed to Harlem Greenwood by the president of the United States and the leading men of the army and navy. Massachusetts tries to atone at the grave of Charles Sumner for the ignominious resolutions with which her legislature denounced the living senator. Do you think that the tomb at Springfield can pay for Booth's bullet?

Oh, do justice to the living! All the justice you do them you must do this side the gates of the Necropolis. They cannot wake up to count the number of carriages at the obsequies or to note the polish of the Aberdeen granite or to read epitaphial commemoration. Gentleman's mausoleum in the suburbs of Jerusalem cannot pay for Bethlehem manger and Calvarean cross and Pilate's ruffian judiciary. Post mortem honors cannot atone for ante mortem ignominies.

Again, standing in this garden of the sepulcher, I am impressed with the fact that floral and arboreseent decorations are appropriate for the place of the dead. We are glad that among flowers and sculptural adornments Christ spent the short time of His inhumation.

I cannot understand what I sometimes see in the newspapers where the obsequies are announced and the friends say in connection with it: "Send no flowers." Rather, if the means allow—I say if the means allow—strew the casket with flowers, the hearse with flowers, the grave with flowers. Put them on the brow—it will suggest coronation; in their hand—it will mean victory.

Christ was buried in a garden. Flowers mean resurrection. Death is sad enough anyhow. Let conservatory and arboretum contribute to its alleviation. The harebell will ring the victory; the passion flower will express the sympathy; the daffodil will kindle its lamp and illumine the darkness. The cluster of asters will be the constellation. Your little child loved flowers when she was living. Put them in her hand now that she can go forth no more and pluck them for herself. On sunshiny days take a fresh garland and put it over the still heart.

Brooklyn has no grander glory than its Greenwood, nor Boston than its Mount Auburn, nor Philadelphia than its Laurel Hill, nor Cincinnati than its Spring Grove, nor San Francisco than its Lone Mountain. But what shall we say of those country graveyards, with the vines broken down and the grass aslant and the mound caved in and the grass [illegible] cattle? Indeed, were your father and mother of so little worth that you cannot afford to take care of their ashes? Some day turn out all hands and straighten the slab and bank up the mound and cut away the weeds and plant the shrubs and flowers.

Some day you will want to lie down to your last slumber. You cannot expect any respect for your bones if you have no deference for the bones of your ancestry. Do you think these relics are of no importance? You will see of how much importance they are in the day when the archangel takes out his trumpet. Turn all your cemeteries into gardens.

Again, standing in this garden of the new sepulcher, I am impressed with the dignity of private and unpretending obsequies.

Joseph was mourner, sexton, liveryman—had entire charge of everything. Only four people at the burial of the King of the Universe! Oh let this be consolatory to those who through lack of means or through lack of nequaintance have but little demonstration of grief at the graves of their loved ones. Long line of glittering equipage, two rows of silver handles, casket of richest wood, pallbearers gloved and scarfed, are not necessary. If there be six at the grave, Christ looks down from Heaven and remembers that is two more than were at His obsequies.

Not recognizing this idea, how many small properties are scattered and widowhood and orphanage go forth into cold charity! The departed left a small property which would have been enough to keep the family together until they could take care of themselves, but the funeral expenses absorbed everything. That went for crape which ought to have gone for bread. A man of moderate means can hardly afford to die in any of the great cities. By all means, do honor to the departed, but do not consider funeral pageant as necessary. No one was ever more lovingly and tenderly put away to sepulcher than Christ our Lord, but there were only four people in the procession.

Again, standing in this garden with a new sepulcher, I am impressed with the fact that you cannot keep the dead down.

Seal of sanhedrin, company of soldiers from the tower of Antouia, floor of rock, roof of rock, walls of rock, door of rock, cannot keep Christ in the crypts. Come out and come up He must. Come out and come up He did. Prefiguration. First fruits of them that slept. Just as certainly as we come down into the dust, just so certainly we will come up again. Though all the granite of the mountains were piled on us we will rise. Though buried amid the corals of the deepest cavern of the Atlantic ocean, we will come to the surface.

With these eyes we may not look into the face of the noonday sun, but we shall have stronger vision, because the tamest thing in the land to which we go will be brighter than the sun. We shall have bodies with the speed of the lightning. Our bodies improved, energized, swiftened, clarified — mortality, immortality. The door of the grave taken off its hinges and flung flat into the dust.

Oh, my brethren, death and the grave are not so much as they used to be; for while wandering in this garden with the new sepulcher I find that the vines and flowers of the garden have completely covered up the tomb. Instead of one garden there are four gardens, opening into each other—garden of Eden, garden of the world's sepulcher, garden of the earth's regeneration, garden of Heaven. Four gardens. Bloom, O earth! Bloom, O Heaven! Oh, my friends, wake up to gladness on this Easter morning! This day, if I interpret it right, means joy—it means peace with Heaven, and it means peace with all the world.

Oh, bring more flowers! Wreathe them around the brazen throat of the cannon; plant them in the desert, that it may blossom like the rose; braid them into the mane of the returned war charger. No more red dahlas of human blood. Give us white lilies of peace. All around the earth strew Easter flowers. And soon the rough voyage of the church militant will be ended, and she will sail up the Heavenly harbor, scarred with many a conflict, but the flag of triumph floating from her topgallants. All Heaven will come out to greet her into port, and with a long reverberating shout of welcome will say: "There she comes up the bay, the glorious old ship Zion! After tempestuous voyage she drops anchor within the veil."

Mail Shirt of a Dervish Warrior.

The shirt is made of rings, every ring from a piece of steel wire 1/7 inches long and about one-sixteenth of an inch thick. The ends of the piece of wire are flattened out, holes are punched through them, one end is turned on to the other, and they are fastened together by a small rivet. Every ring connects four others. The wire differs somewhat in thickness, not by design seemingly so as to make one part of the shirt stronger than another, but from material of uniform thickness running short. In parts where the rings are free to jiggle together they are worn very thin. Round the neck is a band of three thicknesses of red leather, stiff like the stock worn formerly in our army. It is 2¾ inches high, and on the outside is decorated with ornamental lines like toolings made by a bookbinder.—Notes and Queries.

Mrs. Susan Clore gathered and sold 75 dozen eggs from her poultry, last week. Her fowls are almost exclusively the Silver Winged Wyandotts. Heard Holland Goodridge say the other day that he had weaned himself from drinking sweet milk about a month since on account of his cows drying up, and that he had lost 13 lbs. of flesh in the time. This goes to prove that it is a mistaken idea to wean a calf until grass comes.

Late last evening a report was received by our worthy president of the Fox Hunting Club, that a large Sand Hill Crane was committing depredations over on Hubert Conner's farm, trampling down grass, browsing off the shrubbery, &c. Watson, on High st., Mrs. Malvina Swetman sat at dinner with her daughters, Mrs. Fannie Harris and Mrs. Allie Moffutt, with her grand daughter, Mrs. J. H. Watson and her great grand daughter Carrie Gertrude Watson. Mrs. David Hicks and Miss Roxana Jones also participated in the festivities. Mrs. Leslie Vallandingham also entertained very handsomely at dinner, and so did many others, the particulars being practically unattainable.

The horse, buggy, lap robe and harness mentioned in last week's issue of this paper, were captured in Winchester, last Friday. The thief had taken the top off the buggy and throw it away, but the curtains under the seat gave him away. He had sold the outfit for $20, receiving $1 in cash and a check for $19, payment of which had been stopped, the purchaser having become suspicious. There is no kind of doubt expressed here but that the steal was managed by a party or parties either living in the vicinity or having such an intimate knowledge of the country as to have known not only where the boodle was, but also how to leave the country without attracting observation. The purchaser says the man gave his name as Smith, of Covington. There should be no trouble about identifying the man, Smith being such an uncommon name in populous cities.

Spencer Aylor and wife came over from Limaburg, Saturday afternoon, and remained over Sunday with Mrs. Aylor's parents.

House cleaning is quite the fad now, but your humble writer intends abandoning that pleasant and important feature for a time, at least.

We hear that Harvey Aylor will leave us soon for Colorado. The report may not be true, but if it is we lose one of our valuable citizens.

Communion services were held at the church last Sunday morning; Easter services in the afternoon, and Christian Endavor meeting in the evening.

The Sunday School is progressing exceedingly well if it is conducted by so many youthful officers. They are fine workers, and we hope their efforts will not relax.

The Rainbow Fete at the hall promises to be very entertaining as well as successful. Come one, come all; come big, come small. Bring your whole family, dogs and cats included.

Peter Hager of the East Bend neighborhood, was in town Friday, and gave us the following items: Mrs. Hager has 75 young chickens and 35 hens now setting. Wheat is looking badly, but has improved some in the last few weeks. Not as large an acreage of potatoes as usual has been planted in his neighborhood this spring.

Samuel H. Stephens, from the quantity of whose white hairs one would judge, has been eligible to jury service for "nigh on to" 50 years, says the term of Circuit Court just passed was the lightest term on a fellow's pocket book he ever struck, owing to the fact that there were several candidates on hand to take care of and feed his horse, and to insist on him taking dinner with them every day.

A couple of horse traders from the "north end" met in Burlington, one afternoon last week, and what they told eachother about horses would make a book. One of them, it is believed, came to town to do a certain attorney, but he was not as anxious to purchase a very valuable animal at a very low price, as the seller hoped to find him, consequently he did not walk home and carry his saddle.

"As a rule we pass in blasphemous silence the sins of commission and commission committed by the proof-reader. He is one of the necessary burdens of fallen man—one of the punishments inflicted because of that apple-eating in the Garden of Eden. And when Job so fervently exclaimed 'Oh, would that my enemy would write a book;' he was consumed with an implacable hatred and condemned his enemy to the torments of a proof-reader.—Lexington Leader.

O. J. Ryle returned from Hathaway the latter part of last week. While in that neighborhood he learned some additional particulars in regard to the ancient graveyard on S. H. Marshall's farm, and about which an item appeared in these columns, last week. He says one of the skulls but recently taken from a grave there had an Indian arrow head in it, which entered through the forehead. The arrow head was found beneath the skull in the grave. Mr. H. P. Marshall, of Waterloo, says his father, the late John Marshall, who came to this county at a very early day, had been heard speak of this burying place of an unknown people, and say that no one, not even the Indians could give any information in regard thereto.

CIRCUIT COURT.

William Smith, colored, who, in a fit of jealousy, terrorized his sweetheart and two of her nearest female relations in Florence on the night of the 27th of last December, by a reckless use of his pop, got one year in the pen. The trial consumed a good part of the day, last Friday, and was a very interesting proceedings on account of the "never-let-up-manner" in which the three colored women testified against William. He was well satisfied with the verdict, which was for a shorter period than his attorney, O. M. Rogers, expected.

The suit of Crowe against the North Ky. Agricultural Association for $5,000 for arresting and charging him with entering the grounds by climbing over the fence, one day during its exhibition, last fall, occupied about four hours time Friday afternoon. Nine of the jury returned a verdict for $50 against the defendant. The three jurors who refused to sign the verdict were for giving the plaintiff a verdict for one cent only. The verdict was for exactly the amount the defendant offered the plaintiff as a compromise just before the trial began. Dickerson, Dyas and Curley for plaiutiff; Lassing & Riddell and J. G. Tomlin for defendant.

To the Hon. John W. Green, Judge of the 15th Judicial District: We, your grand jury, would respectfully report that we have been in session five days, examined 23 witnesses and found four indictments. We have investigated six alleged violations of law, but the evidence before us was not such as would support an indictment, and we ignored these charges. We have examined all of the public buildings and find them well kept and in good condition, except the jail floor needs some repairs, and the plastering in the Court-room needs repairs. All of which is respectfully reported.

M. S. ROUSE, Foreman.

SWYGERT, ILL., April 8th, 1900.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

I am still at the place I first landed, and am better satisfied with people and the country every day. Some of the boys came out here and went back, but I can see no reason why they should not like this country. It is true it is pretty windy and pretty muddy here, but the mud is drying up and the grass is beginning to grow, and everything has begun to have the appearance of summer.

I think those boys who came out here and lost their shoes in the mud, did not want to keep them on very badly. This country is everything a laboring man could ask for. I have a good, steady job at $1 20 per day the year round. There are six other Boone boys in this neighborhood—one at Fairberry and five at Tuscola, who are getting $20 a month, board and washing, and they are not required to kill themselves at work, either. A good, honest day's work is all anyone asks.

When a young man leaves home for the first time he is naturally inclined to homesickness, but when he feels it coming on he should remember that he can not remain at home always, and work on, when he will soon come around alright.

Willie Worford (commonly known as the towheaded German boy of Flickertown), arrived here last Wednesday, and had not been here five hours before two men were after him to work for them at $20 a month. He went to work Friday at the above named price, and when I saw him today he said that he was more than satisfied with his place, and that he had come to stay.

Hoping this will find everybody in old Boone well and happy, I am

Yours Truly, BERT SMITH.

Caught a Dreadful Cold,

Marion Kooke, manager for T. M. Thompson, a large importer of fine millinery at 1658 Milwaukee Avenue, Chicago, says: "During the late severe weather I caught a dreadful cold which kept me awake at night and made me unfit to attend my work during the day. One of my milliners was taking Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a severe cold at that time, which seemed to relieve her so quickly that I bought some for myself. It acted like magic and I began to improve at once. I am now entirely well and feel very pleased to acknowledge its merits." For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington; Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg; O. N. Grant, Bellevue, C. S. Baisly, Bullittsville.

A CARD.

In last week's issue of your paper the Walton correspondent unintentionally places me in rather an unpleasant position before my friends. In justification to myself I will say this: One day last fall, just before Mr. Hind left for California he came to me and said, "Mr. Smith, I understand you are coming to Walton, and I would like to sell you my drug store." I told him that I was not ready to come yet, but would see him before I bought a store. Some time later I concluded to look after the matter, and wrote to Mr. Hind and asked him if he still wanted to sell his store. His answer was: "Yes, but he would be home soon and we could arrange the business." A few weeks later Mr. Hind came back and I went to see him. He told me that the store would invoice about—— and I thought differently. However, I told him that I would take the store at the invoice price, and he said that he would take the usual per cent. off the fixtures. We then arranged the financial particulars in detail. He told me to come in on Monday and commence the inventory, he making no conditions as to how much it would have to amount to. After it was finished, I told him that I would take the store and he said all right, but he would like a day or two to look over the work. I left him thinking everything was going smoothly, but when I met him a day or two afterwards, he told me he had been offered more money and that the invoice was not enough. I told him he should have told me before and I would not have gone to so much expense and trouble. No, the whole trouble was this: The store did not bring as much as he thought it would. However, if it had brought ——, Webb Smith would have had it to pay. A. W. SMITH.

Certain of Combs' friends were abroad feeling the republicans' pulse, with a view to ascertaining how Combs' boom would be received. Unless Taylor should ask the nomination, it seems highly probable that Combs will be in the race.

It seems to be the desire of both sides that the matter be disposed of as soon as possible.

Two Car Loads of Fast Stock Will Be Shipped East From Louisville.

Louisville, Ky., April 14.—Charley Patterson arrived from Memphis with his string of horses. He will ship his horses east with Madden's string, making up two full car loads, next Saturday. Mr. Patterson brought with him 17 horses. He brought along several belonging to owners at Churchill Downs, and which had been sent to Memphis in anticipation of being able to take down a purse or two. But the track at Memphis proved to be so bad that the Louisville horses were brought home.

Among the most noted belonging to Mr. Patterson, and which were brought to Louisville, were Lamplighted Handwork, Historian, Quiz, Delnarch and Kentucky. Several others, who have failed to show Mr. Patterson anything, were brought along, and will be sent to Lexington and turned out, as it will prove unprofitable to continue them in training. Handwork, by Hanover—Workmate, is thought to be the best two-year-old in Patterson's string, and he will be sent east to run for some of the rich prizes there. It is said that Patterson has some good three-year-olds that have never been shown in public, and that they will be sent east for the purpose of surprising some of the bookmakers on the big tracks.

In the fury of his excitement, he says, he does not know how many licks he struck her but did not kill her the first stroke.

His confession was brought about by Sheriff Combs. He has had no examining trial yet. It is thought he will plead insanity. There is much feeling in the community against the fellow.

IMPERIALISM AND PORTO RICO

Issues Based Upon Constitutional and Human Grounds That Will Help Democrats.

A few weeks ago it would have required the gift of a second sight to discover that out of the seemingly simple matter of the fiscal government of Porto Rico would spring an issue that would, for a time at any rate, split the republican party in twain and cause more discussion, more dissension within the party ranks than has been witnessed since the days when the president strove to prevent war with Spain for the liberation of Cuba. In a sense the Porto Rico tariff will be a leading issue of the campaign. Its importance proceeds, however, not wholly from the immediate issue involved in congress—that of raising revenue from and for the Porto Ricans—but rather from the fact that it is one incident, and a glaring one, in what the democrats believe to be the steady progress of this administration away from republican principles toward the establishment of empire. It is one chapter in the fast growing history of imperialism in America, and that issue—the issue of imperialism—will beyond doubt be one of the most vital issues of the campaign. It is peculiarly fitting that a democratic convention, held on the anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence, should stand as the opponent of a plan to tax a dependency without granting it representation in the taxing body—and that is the plan which the republican house of representatives now proposes and which the president, after some vacillation, has expressed his willingness to accept.

But the whole programme of imperialism is an antagonism to those ideas which were enunciated in the immortal declaration, and which are the foundation of our national existence. So obvious is this that the more logical, though less politic, defenders of imperialism have been compelled to throw overboard both the Declaration of Independence and the constitution, declaring the one a mere collection of fine-sounding but impractical phrases and the other to have been outgrown. The democratic party will stand as the defender of the constitution, the unfaltering champion of every word and phrase in Thomas Jefferson's declaration of defiance to that British power under whose wing to-day it seems the United States is expected to nestle for protection.

Nor is this issue of anti-imperialism a constitutional one alone. It is broadly human, eminently a moral issue. The anti-imperialist sympathizes with the Boers in their struggle for national independence against a robber monarchy, but he finds an imperialist administration turning a cold shoulder to the South African republics and coddling Great Britain. The anti-imperialist does not believe that the way to make the United States respected and popular in the east is to shoot down remorselessly men who are struggling for the liberties which they were led to believe we had come thither to help them secure. He thinks there is a better future for the flower of our young manhood than to be used as food for powder or sacrificed to the deadly climate of a distant tropical archipelago. He holds that imperialism and militarism go hand in hand, and believes with the fathers of the republic that a great standing army is a menace to the people. He knows that a policy of despotism pursued toward foreign peoples will in due time be employed by our governing classes for the subjugation of our own people, and he points to the year of military despotism and martial law in the Coeur d'Alene as an early proof of this fact.

For these reasons anti-imperialism will be an issue in the coming campaign that will not down. Among all it will doubtless lead.—Willis J. Abbott, in Chicago Times-Herald.

In Cahoots with England.

If anything more were needed to prove that there is a secret compact between this administration and Great Britain it would seem to have been furnished by the act of Secretary John Hay in sending the message he did to England in regard to intervention in the South African war. The wording of that offer was such that it gave England the opportunity she had been very anxious for to answer in such terms that any intervention from any quarter is precluded. It would almost seem that the message of Hay must have been written by Salisbury himself. A friend in need is a friend indeed. The McKinley administration has shown itself to be that kind of a friend to England right at the critical time when that grasping empire was in the act of committing the greatest crime of the ages in crushing the twin republics of South Africa. England rejoices, of course, while all the world looks on with sadness.—Cleveland Recorder.

Consistent Enough.

"To tell the truth," said the Ohio senator, "that Porto Rico mess, between ourselves, has hurt you."

The candidate for a second term thrust his right arm into his left lappel.

"Never!" he declared, majestically.

"But," urged the Ohio senator, "first you said our plain duty was to give Porto Rico free access to our markets and then you raised a tariff barrier against her."

"When I spoke of our plain duty," said the candidate for a second term, "the place was spelled Porto Rico. When the official spelling was changed to Puerto Rico the official policy had to be changed, too."

The Ohio senator was speechless with admiration.—Press Bulletin.

——McKinley waited until too late to be of service to the South African republics, and then made his offer of mediation in such a way as to invite rejection by England.—Press Bulletin.

POST THE DELEGATES.

The Chicago Platform Should Be Reaffirmed and Closely Adhered To.

What is a fair test of party sincerity during the coming campaign? Necessarily this: "A reaffirmation of the Chicago platform."

It is also the essential test for every public man and newspaper professing democratic allegiance. It is, moreover, the only test that can safely be applied to all delegates to the national convention at Kansas City, for it is they who will nominate such candidates only who were openly and actively loyal to that platform in 1896 and have remained steadfast ever since.

There are men in many of the states who departed from party fealty in 1896, deserted Bryan, the selected leader of the party, abandoned principles dear to the people and aided in the election of William McKinley, and ratified the evils of trusts and its train of militarism. These men are now attempting to return to the party, and they come with mere lip service. They hypocritically condole with it and offer the ir assistance to give it success.

While the democratic party is great and broad enough to permit these renegades to return to its bosom, it cannot sanction their betrayal of it by permitting them to take up the lines they left when they departed. It would be an irretrievable error, a gross blunder, to admit them to the privileges of full membership without a long novitiate of good works to manifest the reawakened faith in them, and it is the province of a democratic newspaper to warn the public against the oily arguments of these men of suspicious faith. They have enjoyed the fleshpots of Egypt and will return to them at the first opportunity.

They are leagued in a conspiracy to throw the democratic party back into the clutch of the plutocracy whence it was saved in 1896. That conspiracy exists, and it is being perfected by the selfish politicians who dominated the party prior to 1896. It is being managed and financed by the wealth which the Whitneys, the Lamonts, the Benedicts and the Dickinsons drew from the trusts which are making herculean efforts to control the national administration for their own sordid gain.

The wishes of the people are law to the democratic party, and its national convention will gratify their desires unless the people themselves submit to the treachery of these Pharisaical conspirators.

Bind all delegates down to the most rigid instructions. This saved the party in 1896, and it will save it in 1900. These instructions must be uniform and unchangeable, from the district to the state convention, and from the latter to the national convention, for it is in the latter that men must alone be nominated who were loyal to the Chicago platform in 1896 and have never wandered from it since. Beware of the pernicious influence of plutocracy, which is ever active, and let this be the shibboleth:

Reaffirmation of the Chicago platform and the nomination of men who stand for all it means.

Regard all opposition to this instruction of delegates as strong evidence of doubtful party loyalty and the badge of a conspirator against the party success. Let this be the motto:

INSTRUCT!! INSTRUCT!! INSTRUCT!!—Press Bulletin.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

——Our duty to Porto Rico is at present, not only plain, but positively unattractive to Mr. McKinley.—Albany Argus.

——Perhaps by "cowards in the senate," Speaker Henderson means those senators that respond to Senator Hanna's whip.—Indianapolis News.

——Mr. Hanna's idea is that republican unpopularity can be cured by a large campaign fund. This great statesman has a large surprise in store for him this fall. He has never seen the American people engaged in settling a moral issue at the ballot box, and he will behold that spectacle this year.—Atlanta Constitution.

——The revolt in the ranks of the republicans over the principle of protection has become serious. If it is not checked before the presidential campaign begins public sentiment will run so strongly against the republican party that the success of the democratic party will be almost certain.—Savannah News.

——The impression is rapidly gaining ground that the next house of representatives will be democratic. Gains in the middle west are already conceded by the republican newspaper organs of that section, who protest against the Porto Rican tariff bill as endangering both the reelection of President McKinley and that of many republican representatives in congress.—Buffalo Courier.

——The republican party, strive as it may against the tide, must either abandon protection or abandon expansion. The two policies are incompatible. In the endeavor to reconcile individual greed with national growth the party is making itself the mock of the world. It has apparently assumed responsibilities which it is incapable of rightfully discharging. It will have a stern settlement to make when it shall again appeal to the country for a vote of confidence.—Philadelphia Record.

——Nobody has any right to be surprised at the potency of the tariff and trust machines with the president and congress. The present is a machine administration. It is the unremitting work of the machines, under the skillful, audacious and lavish management of Mr. Hanna, that makes Mr. McKinley formidable for renomination. The sentiment of the country is against him, but the organization has gone so far that it is almost impossible to make headway against it.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

WALTHAM WATCHES

Sir Joshua Reynolds when asked by an ambitious young painter with what he mixed his colors, replied, "With brains, sir." So in watch making; it is not alone the value of the jewels that makes a first class watch---it is the brains that have planned its construction. Mechanical skill and knowledge have made Waltham Watches the best in the world.

Waltham Watches are for sale by all retail jewelers.

WABASH

Wonderfully Convenient

Poor connections are the bane of traveling. Here are some good ones. Trains from the Southeast which reach St. Louis in the evening, without exception arrive between six o'clock and twenty-five minutes past seven. At half-past seven the Wabash "Cannon Ball" leaves for Omaha—that's one good one.

At 7.55 next morning you are in Omaha (via any other route not much before noon). At 8.20, only twenty-five minutes after you arrive, the "Overland Limited" starts for Ogden, Salt Lake, Butte, Helena, San Francisco, Spokane, Portland and Seattle—there's another.

A folder—simple, complete—tells all about it; something worth knowing. If you want to reach any western city, you can have full, specific information about your best train and connections, railroad and sleeping car fares, etc., and the rate will be right.

THE MEASURE SIGNED.

The Porto Rico Tariff and Government Bill a Law of the Land.

An Epitome of the Customs Regulations and the Scheme of the Civil Government for the Island.

Washington, April 13.—The president signed the Porto Rican tariff and civil government bill. Only Secretary Root and Mr. Cortelyou, the assistant secretary to the president, were present when the bill became a law.

The bill provides that from the date of the passage of the act the same customs duties are levied on all goods entering Porto Rico from foreign countries as are levied on the same goods entering the United States, save that coffee, which has free entry into the United States is to pay a duty of 5 cents per pound on entering Porto Rico.

Scientific, literary and artistic works and books and pamphlets printed in the English language may enter Porto Rico free of duty. The tariff section of the bill relating to duties between the United States and Porto Rico provides that all merchandise coming into the United States from Porto Rico and coming into Porto Rico from the United States shall be entered at the several ports of entry upon payment of 15 per cent. of the duties which are required to be levied, collected and paid upon like articles of merchandise imported from foreign countries.

The duties collected under this section shall be placed at the disposal of the president to be used for the good and benefit of Porto Rico until the government of Porto Rico shall have been organized, when the moneys collected shall be turned into the local treasury of Porto Rico.

The governmental provisions of the bill are: The capital shall be at San Juan. Persons who were Spanish subjects April 11, 1899, and who have not elected to preserve the allegiance to Spain are held to be citizens of Porto Rico and entitled to the protection of the United States. The designation of the body politics is under the name "The People of Porto Rico."

The laws and ordinances of Porto Rico now in force shall continue in full force and effect, except as altered by this act, or by military orders and which are not inconsistent with the laws of the United States.

The old law forbidding the marriage of priests and ministers is repealed.

The vessels of Porto Rico are to be naturalized and admitted to the benefits of the United States coasting laws. Porto Rico coin to be muted, the peso being rated at 60 cents in the exchange. Three months after the act takes effect Porto Rico coins are not to be legal tender. The governor is to be appointed by the president and hold his office for four years, having the powers conferred on governors of territories of the United States, but is to make his reports through the secretary of state to the president. An executive council is to be appointed by the president and confirmed by the senate, consisting of a secretary, attorney general, treasurer, auditor, commissioners of interior and education and five other persons, to hold office for four years. The council is the upper branch of the legislature five of whom shall be natives of Porto Rico. The other branch shall be a house of delegates, to consist of 35 members elected biennially by the qualified electors. Porto Rico is divided into seven districts, each with five delegates. The qualifications for voters are at "such elections all citizens of Porto Rico shall be allowed to vote who have been bona fide residents for one year and who possess the other qualifications of voters under the laws and military orders in force on March 1, 1900, subject to such modifications and additional qualifications and such regulations and restrictions as to registration as may be prescribed by the executive council.

The judicial power is vested in courts already established, the chief justice and associate justices and marshals to be appointed by the president, judges of the district courts, and other officers by the governor of Porto Rico. There is also a United States district court established similar to other territories.

The salaries of all officers appointed by the president are: Governor, $3,000; secretary, attorney general auditor, commissioner of the interior $4,000 each; treasurer, $5,000; commissioner of education, $3,000; chief justice supreme court and United States district judge, $5,000 each; associate justices, $4,500 each; two marshals, each $3,000; district attorney, $4,000. No export duties are to be collected, but taxes and licenses may be levied. On the regular election day in November and every two years thereafter Porto Rico may choose a commissioner to represent the island at Washington, salary, $5,000.

A HINT FOR SPRING.

When Housekeepers Are Brightening the Interiors of Their Homes.

Now that the backbone of this remarkable winter is broken, housekeepers are remarking the dingy look of the home interior. The question of new wall coverings is up. Paper is dear and short lived; kalsomines are dirty and scaly; paint is costly. The use of such a cement as Alabastine, for instance, will solve the problem. This admirable wall coating is clean, pure and wholesome. It can be put on with no trouble by anyone; there is choice of many beautiful tints; and it is long lasting.

Certainly a Prize Thought.

A teacher of music in one of the public schools of the south desired to impress the pupils with the meaning of the signs "f" and "ff" in a song they were about to sing. After explaining that "f" meant forte, he said: "Now, children, if 'f' means forte, what does 'ff' mean?"

Silence reigned for a moment, and then he was astonished to hear a bright little fellow shout:

"Eighty!"—New Lippincott.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. SENATORIAL COURTESY.

The Gentleman from the South Gave Way and the Senate Was Adjourned.

Senator Pettus, of Alabama, is the most owl-like member of the senate. He is so ponderously solemn that he is unconsciously humorous.

Mr. Pettus will be 80 years old next July. He belongs to the old school of southern statesmen now fast disappearing. It is easy to see, in the dogmatic manner in which he lays down the law to his senatorial colleagues, that he has been a judge. He speaks with great deliberation, at the rate of about six words a minute, and each word is emphasized by the waving of his chin whiskers. His gestures are confined to a wide sweep of his arm from his body and an inverse motion. Everything he does or says is serious. Even when he wants the senate to adjourn, he goes about it in a way that is the very quintessence of solemn dignity. For instance, the other afternoon, when Mr. Spooner was talking on the Quay case, Mr. Pettus arose.

"I should like to ask the senator to give way for a motion, if he pleases," remarked Mr. Pettus, uttering each word as if the fate of the nation depended upon the answer.

"I will agree to anything the senator wants me to," replied Mr. Spooner, smilingly, "except to vote against my convictions on a constitutional question."

"I am not asking you to do that," said Mr. Pettus, still mysterious, "but I want you to give way to a motion."

"Well, what is it?" asked Mr. Spooner.

"It is to adjourn," answered Mr. Pettus, in his melancholy voice and without a smile.

Every member of the senate laughed, and the motion to adjourn was carried.—Washington Post.

BELIEVES IN HORSE SENSE.

Veterinarian Converted by a Sick Steed That Sought a Doctor.

"Experience has convinced me that there is such a thing as horse sense," said a veterinary surgeon who has a shop on the South side. "A friend of mine had a beautiful chestnut driving mare that was subject to severe spells of colic. About a year ago she got very sick and Jones, the owner, brought her over here for treatment. I cared for her, and she seemed as grateful as a human being might, rubbing her nose against my coat sleeve, and showing her affection in her dumb way.

"One day about six months ago up she came to the door of the shop, moaning and evidently suffering acutely. I treated her again and she got better. I found out afterward that there was no one at her home stable that day and that she had worked the halter off and had set out to find the doctor."

"Curious circumstance," said the man who had heard the story.

"But that's not all of it," said the doctor. "Three days ago I came down to my office in the morning about nine o'clock. There lay the chestnut mare in front of the door—dead. She had been taken sick, had made her way as before to the shop in the night, and found nobody there to give her medicines, and she had died. Now, if this story isn't proof that a horse can reason I would like to hear something to beat it."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

FAIR WOMEN SPEAK.

Pe-ru-na Works Wonders for the Gentler Sex in Catarrhal Ailments.

MRS. COLONEL HAMILTON.

That Pe-ru-na has become a household remedy in the home of Mrs. Colonel Hamilton is well attested by a letter from her, which says: "I can give my testimony as to the merits of your remedy, Pe-ru-na. I have been taking the same for some time, and am enjoying better health now than I have for some years. I attribute the change to Pe-ru-na, and recommend Pe-ru-na to every woman, believing it to be especially beneficial to them." Mrs. Hamilton's residence is 259 Goodale street, Columbus, Ohio.

Mrs. Margaretha Dauben, No. 1214 North Superior street, Racine City, Wis., says: "I feel so well and good and healthful now that pen cannot describe it. Pe-ru-na is everything to me. I feel healthy and well, but if I should be sick I would know what to take. I have taken several bottles for female complaint. I am in the change of life and it does me good."

Have you catarrh of the head, throat, lungs, stomach or any other organ of the body? If so, write to Dr. Hartman at once. He will send you directions for treatment without charge. Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O.

MISS ANNIE WYANDOTTE.

Miss Annie Wyandotte, queen of the operatic stage and dramatic soprano, says:

"Fifteenth St. and Jackson Ave.
Kansas City, Mo.

"Dr. Hartman:

"Dear Sir—Pe-ru-na has been my salvation. It has given me back a beautiful voice, a gift of God; it has brought me once more to my old profession. I can talk now, and sing, where before, I could scarcely whisper. Can you wonder at my delight? I wish every person who is suffering as I suffered might know Pe-ru-na. Only those who have been afflicted can ever know the intense satisfaction and gratitude that comes with a complete cure. My voice was completely gone. April 15 I felt so elated over the restoration of my voice that I inserted an advertisement in The Star for vocal pupils. The advertisement, which cost me 65 cents, brought me five pupils, and that was the beginning of my present large class. Yours gratefully,

"Annie Wyandotte."

A congestion, inflammation or ulceration of the mucous membrane, whether of the head, stomach, kidneys, or other organ, is known to the medical profession as catarrh. It is known by different names, such as dyspepsia, Bright's disease, female complaint, diarrhoea, bronchitis, consumption and a host of other names. Wherever there is a congested mucous membrane there is catarrh, acute or chronic.

MISS CLARA STOECKER.

Miss Clara Stoecker says: "I had chronic catarrh for over a year. I tried many remedies, but found no relief until I saw an advertisement in the paper of your treatment for chronic catarrh. I tried it and I think I am now well. I recommend Pe-ru-na to all my friends who are afflicted with catarrh." Miss Stoecker lives at Pittsburg, Pa.

Mrs. Margareth Fritz, Wilcox, Okla., writes: "I extend my sincere thanks for the good advice you have given me. I do not believe I would be living now if it were not for you. I had suffered with flow of blood for four months, and the doctors could help me but little. They operated on me three times. I was very painful and I only obtained little relief. I was so weak I could not turn in bed. Then I applied to Dr. Hartman. I did not know whether he could help me or not, but I followed his advice, and used only three bottles of Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin. Now I am as well and as strong as I ever was, thanks to your remedies." Pelvic catarrh has become so frequent that most women are more or less afflicted with it. It is usually called female disease.

An Oregon Judge has recently handed down a decision in which he holds that a mortgage given on sheep does not include the wool, and that the owner may clip the wool off the sheep's back and sell it without accounting for it to the mortgagee. The court holds specifically that the term "increase," as usually made use of in a chattel mortgage, applies solely to the young the animals may bear, and not to their other bodily products.

The State Commissioners report has the following regarding lambs: The crop of spring lambs is near an average one, notwithstanding the frequent "cold snap" and such cold, wet weather, occurring at the time when the maximum loss might have been sustained. The high price of lambs has induced farmers to provide shelter for their flocks and the loss was mitigated to some extent by reason of this fact. Feed is scarce, pastures are in poor condition and how to keep the lambs in a thrifty condition till the grazing season is a serious question now with flock owners. The number of spring lambs living is 96 per cent of the number of average years. A loss of four per cent was sustained from dogs during the past year.

The high prices received last year for broom corn have caused a renewal of interest and many with no experience are thinking of growing it the coming season. The growing of the crop is a comparatively simple matter, but the curing and marketing is more difficult. It is usually planted with three or four stalks every fifteen inches in rows three to four feet apart. The corn is harvested before the seed is fully ripe. The tops are broken off about eight inches from the head and the seed is removed by a stripper. The brush is allowed to dry in sheds under cover, as rain greatly injures the quality. When dry, the broom corn is baled and marketed. A large increase in the acreage will naturally result in a fall in price. One-fourth of a ton of cured broom corn to the acre is a fair yield

Most methods for the extermination of potato bugs reminds one of the old recipe for making hare soup which began, first catch your hare; so that about the only effective method of getting rid of this little pest is to first catch your bug and then kill him. A Western inventor hailing from Lone Tree, Ia, offers a recently patented device for assisting in catching the bugs. It consists, of a gas pipe frame wheelbarrow, the handles of which are supported by straps passing around the shoulders of the user. At one side of this frame is a windmill arrangement, operated by a crank, the idea being, of course, to push this barrow alongside of the potato plants, and by turning the crank to beat the foliage with the paddles and thus dislodge any bugs that might be clinging to it. It is assumed that the force of the blow, which would be proportioned to the strength of the plant, will knock the bugs off the leaves and branches and throw them into a pan in the bottom of the barow, where they could be killed by a poison solution, or by any other suitable method.—Philadelphia Record.

[News.]

A great many have tobacco plants up, but they need rain badly.

Many who planted potatoes too early had them to freeze in the ground.

Oats and clover that had sprouted were, in most parts of the county, killed by the late freeze.

Murray Maddox set out a half acre of early cabbage Monday. He is a hustler and will be early on the market.

Wheat on the hills is looking badly and in bad condition, but that in the bottoms seems to be doing nicely, so reports W. J. Maddox.

We have information from a number of farmers that the freeze of Monday night killed all the tobacco plants that were up, except perhaps those where precaution had been taken to cover the plant beds with carpet or straw, which was in very few instances.

DANDY CRISTO!

Dandy Cristo is a dark bay, 3 yrs-old, 16 hands high, heavy mane and tail, and weighs 1,050 lbs.

Dandy Cristo by Black Cristo; he by Monte Cristo, 99; first dam by Black Squirrel, 58; 2d dam by Mambrino Time; 3d dam by Blue Bull.

Monte Cristo by Monitrean; he by Diamond Denmark, he by Black Denmark, he by Denmark, thoroughbred, the great 4 mile race horse, he by imported Hedgeford. Monte Cristo's 1st dam by Black Williams, she by Brown's Highlander; 2d dam by Whips' thoroughbred.

Dandy Cristo's dam by Virginia Morgan and Spark's Cren Berry. Grand dam, by Black Squirrel, great-grand dam, Highlander and Bladet' famous saddle horse, Regulator, from Bracken county.

This breeding has produced the best saddle and harness horses ever in the Blue Grass section, and it is to be hoped that the breeders in this section will take advantage of it and raise a higher grade of horses, when it can be done so cheap.

Remember that a fancy saddle horse commands as high price as ever, whilst common horses are too cheap to give away.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 25, 1900. NO. 27

Too much Congressional timber in this district is the trouble in the Democratic party just now.

WHY does Mr. Hanna want to be a delegate to the Philadelphia convention? He will be the whole thing anyway.

THE Republicans can scarcely elect a constable in Louisiana, if the returns from the State election held last week indicate anything.

IT is supposed the Paducah authorities know their man—hence that unique invitation to Admiral Dewey to visit their city next month.

THE Millersburg town Council has placed a license of $300 on drug stores. Millersburg is a "dry town" and the liquor business is done behind colored windows, bottles and jars of sand and sawdust, dressed to represent medicines.

THE provision of the Kentucky constitution under which the legislature decided Goebel and Beckham to be the legally elected Governor and Lieutenant Governor has stood for nearly a century without being decided in conflict with the constitution of the United States.

THE census of the island of Cuba is completed, and shows that the population of the island is 1,162,797, the majority being whites of native birth, and over 400,000 of these are able to read and write. The island will try the experiment of holding an election on June 16th.

THE Republicans held two State conventions in Tennessee, last week, the Evans faction bolting the regular convention which was controlled by Brownlow and his followers. The State will have two delegations at Philadelphia, contending for reconition in the national convention.

THE biggest price ever paid for a single carriage horse in this country, was $7,800 paid by C. F. Kinball, of Chicago, one day last week in New York for Turk, who has shown a mile in 2:17¼. Other horses sold on the same occasion brought as much as $5,000. It pays yet to breed good horses.

THE large number of candidate announcements in the Owen county papers leads a person to believe that the principal business down there is running for office. Boone is yet to be heard from in that particular and when her show-down is made Owen may not have much the advantage of her.

IT is said that England wants 30,000 good, American horses for cavalry purposes. If this be true an advance in the price of horses may be expected, as a horse that fills the bill exactly as a good cavalry animal cannot be found in every stable—the fact is in this part of the country they are very scarce.

A NEW YORK justice has decided that a mother-in-law has no right of domicile in her married daughter's home, and that a husband need not support his wife if she persists in saddling her mother on him. That decision will furnish an excuse to many worthless husbands, in that justice's jurisdiction, not to provide for their wives.

IRA JULIAN, of Franklin county, declines to become a Democratic candidate for the Congressional nomination in the seventh district. South Trimble, of Frankfort, is an announced candidate, and Julian says his becoming a candidate would insure the defeat of Trimble and him, and he declines to put any obstacle in Trimble's way by becoming a candidate.

AT a banquet given by eastern Democrats in New York, one night last week, the opposition to Bryan as a candidate for the presidency was pronounced and outspoken. There is a strong element in the Democratic party in that section of the country that will never support Bryan when nominated, which he will certainly be. His success in November will depend entirely on other sections of the country.

SINCE the passage of the Porto Rican tariff bill by Congress, those who are able to leave the island are preparing to go elsewhere in search of employment to avoid starvation. The condition of the people of that island is now worse than ever before, and were they allowed to choose between the United States and Spain as to which should govern the island it is easy to guess which would be selected.

A FEW days ago a gentleman who is a candidate for a county office to be filled in 1901, was asked if he was in favor of the primary election to make nomination for county offices being held this fall, and he answered promptly, "I am for whatever is for the best interest of the Democratic party in Boone county, and that is for the county committee to decide." That man is Democrat—one who is willing to sacrifice individual interest for the advancement of his party.

WHEN a candidate for Congress begins advising the district committee what plan should be adopted for making the nomination, it shows one of two things: that the candidate has no faith in the committee's ability to advance the party's interest, or that his advice has a selfish end in view, and nine times out of ten it is the latter. When the committee desires the advice of a candidate it will not hesitate to give him due and timely notice.

THE Republican party in Kentonu conty is engaged in a bitter fight of its own. Collector Comingore is the leader of a considerable faction that is refusing to recognize the authority of Richard P. Ernst, chairman of the county Republican committee, and two conventions have been called to name delegates to the State convention, but Ernst and his crowd will be recognized if a commission from the party is worth anything.

GOV. MOUNT had been slated for chairman of the Indiana Republican State convention but he made a severe criticism of the President's Porto Rican policy, and was at that instant disqualified, for, as chairman of the convention he might prevent the endorsement of the President's policy towards that island, and an indorsement by the Indiana Republicans must be forth coming, no matter by what means it is obtained. Mount will be a private in the Indiana convention.

SENATOR HOAR'S speech on the Porto Rican question in the Senate was a severe arraingment of the Republican party, but it showed that Hoar is willing to continue his affiliation with that organization notwithstanding all its short-comings he referred to during his occupancy of the floor. That is where the Republicans have the advantage of the Democrats—they can not be driven to go back on the nominees of their party no matter how much they dislike them and the principles they represent.

THE following is a list of fat positions the President has at his disposal under the Porto Rican bill:

A Governor at $8,000 a year.

A Secretary of the Council at $4,000 a year.

An Attorney-General at $4,000 a year.

An Insular Treasurer at $5,000 a year.

An Auditor at $4,000 a year.

A Commissioner of the Interior at $4,000 a year.

A Commissioner of Education at $3,000 a year.

A Chief Justice of the Supreme Court at $5,000 a year.

Four Associate Justices of the Supreme Court at $4,000 a year each.

A Marshal of the Supreme Court at $3,000 a year.

A United States District Judge at $5,000 a year.

A United States District Attorney at $4,000 a year.

A United States District Marshal at $3,500 a year.

Three members of a Commission to codify the laws of the island at $5,000 a year each.

Five members of the Executive Council, whose salaries are to be fixed by the Porto Rican Legislature.

AN effort is being made to organize the farmers of the Mississippi valley into a trust to enable them to hold their grain until prices suit them. This association will be known as the "knights of the soil." B. H. Barns, of Iowa, is the leader of the move, which he explains as follows: "The chief idea of the organization is to give the farmers a chance to hold their crops without paying interest. When a member needs a little money to tide him over for a time he makes his application to his local lodge and if it is a growing crop that he has as security a committee of three members examine it and make a report to the lodge. The lodge lets him have the money, or as much of it as is safe, on the crop, and he pays no interest. However, when he sells the stuff he pays into the treasury of his lodge 5 per cent of what he made by holding it. It costs him nothing to hold his grain, and if a concerted movement of this kind is made there will be no great rush of grain to market, causing prices to drop. If wheat is worth 30 cents when he gets his loan and it advances to 60 cents while he is holding it he pays to the lodge 5 per cent. of the profits he has made by holding it. This fund is then used to loan to others in like circumstances.

By the time the country gets through talking about doing something to curb the trusts they will have so absorbed the country that it will be helpless. When a fire breaks out in Amsterdam, the city council assembles to pass upon the advisability of ordering out the fire engine. When they get through arguing the matter, the fire has burned up the building, and the council then resolve: "It will be useless to call out the fire engine."

IT is estimated that each horse England sends to South Africa for use in her war with the Boers, costs $3,000 by the time it is landed on African soil, and during the siege of Ladysmith 4,000 of these valuable animals were butchered in one month, and their flesh converted into soup or sausage. It was a clear case of "out of meat and bound to have it," with the English soldiers.

EACH of the candidates for the Democratic nomination in this district appears to have his notion about how the nomination should be made, and is willing to advise the committee. It is hoped that the gentlemen will abide the decision of the committee and the nomination made under its call, although some who want the nomination have a record otherwise.

THE fight between the Ernst and Comingore factions of the Republican party in Kenton county is intense, and two delegations will be sent to the State convention at Louisville. It seems that the Comingore following is inclined to read Mr. Ernst out of the party; and he is protesting against such a proceedure.

IT is remarkable how plentiful Congressional timber has become in this district in the last ten or fifteen years. There is scarcely a magisterial district in either of the eight counties that has not from one to three men with Congressional bees in their bonnets. How things do change!

HON. W. O. COLEMAN, of Trimble county, and State Senator in his district, is entertaining Congressional aspirations. The country portion of the district is full of aspirants, and the result will be none of them will pull down the nomination.

THE case to settle the Governorship of Kentucky will be called in the Supreme Court in Washington, D. C., next Monday. Each side will be allowed four hours in which to make their arguments. An early decision by the court is expected.

IT took the jury before which ex-Congressman Colson was tried in Frankfort, last week, for the killing of Ethelbert Scott, eighteen minutes to arrive at a verdict of acquittal. The verdict met with public approval.

THERE is less war-like appearance at Frankfort now than at any time this year.

Having travelled three weeks in the west looking after the cattle interest, and finding it so profitable to the western farmers, I cannot help suggesting to our home people the necessity of improving our present stock of cattle.

I attended the sales of short Horns and Herefords while in the West and each sale was very successful, realizing good prices for all, while some sales were at fictitious value, such as the Great Dale bull a prize winner selling for $7,500 and a female selection for $3,000. This sale was made in Chicago. The highest price paid in Sherman Hill sale at Kansas City was $750 for one short horn heifer, while each and every animal brought very satisfactory prices.

I find the Herefords very popular, and there seems to be a great strife between the three breeds, Angus, Hereford and Short Horns. While in Missouri and Kansas I made an arrangement by which I think I will be able to furnish to our breeders a limited number of each breed at a very reasonable price and will kindly ask each and every person interested in this venture to write to my address, Central Covington Stock Yards, their idea or if they would invest in a herd of either breed at a reasonable price, not thorough breds but the highest grades; by so advising I would fully determine and have them furnished at our place of business and sold to the highest bidder. Would confine purchases to yearlings so as the cost would be a nominal one and they would be in reach of every farmer. While no doubt we would sacrifice in this enterprise, we are willing, knowing we will be benefitted by same as a commission firm in a short period of time. We propose to buy three car loads, one of each breed, say 75 head in all, and would advertise a public sale in reasonable time suitable to all, but will await your many replies so as to form an idea of what to do, and if you will give us the proper encouragement, we will do the rest. Remember it is no easy venture to select this number of the three distinct breeds and travel 700 miles without some encouragement, but being very willing to serve my countrymen I feel that I can be a great benefit in this way, as you may rest assured you will get a good investment and still be in reach of every farmer. Awaiting your many replies, I remain yours truly. J. M. CONNER.

The following ten facts should be borne in mind by tobacco growers:

That tobacco must have good size to command good prices.

That short tobacco sells for short prices.

That poor land or poor cultivation makes short tobacco.

That lugs and all kinds of defective leaves sell low.

That it requires good land and good cultivation to get good size.

That it requires good leaves and proper firing and handling to make fine, finished tobacco.

That a common crop, raised and handled in a haphazard way, never pays for raising.

That a small crop of good to fine, well-finished, pays much better than a large crop of common.

That a large majority of countries using our tobacco want dark colors.

That good, sound leaves, nicely cured and of good size, always pay the planter a profit.—Springfield Tenn. Herald.

"Whenever a vacancy shall occur in the office of Governor before the first two years of the term shall have expired, a new election for Governor shall take place to fill such vacancy." Constitution, sec. 85.

"Sec. 148. Not more than one election each year shall be held in this State, or in any city, town, district or county thereof, except as otherwise provided in this Constitution. All elections of State, county, city, town or district officers shall be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, but no officer of any city, town, or county, or of any subdivision thereof, except members of municipal legislative boards shall be elected in the same year in which members of the House of Representatives of the United States are elected. District or State officers including members of the General Assembly, may be elected in the same year in which members of the House of Representatives of the United States are elected."

From the above sections the vacancy in the office of Governor during the first two years of the term must be filled by a new election.

The Governor is a State officer, and a vacancy in that office during the first two years of the term may be filled at any regular election, and the election of members of Congress does not prevent the election from taking place. It will be noticed that the words "new election" are used in section 85, and it would seem to mean a "special election," but construing the provisions together the election must come next November. Presidential electors are State officers also, and there is no question as to when the vacancy in the Governorship is filled, as the Appellate court has already construed that section.

When the Lieutenant Governor succeeds to the Governorship through an election the President pro tem of the Senate exercises all the duties of the Lieutenant Governor for the remainder of the term for which the Lieutenant Governor was elected. A new President pro tem. of the Senate is elected every two years. If the present Lieutenant Governor is not elected to fill the unexpired term of Gov. Goebel when such officer is elected, Lieutenant Governor Beckham resumes his position of Lieutenant Governor for the remainder of the term of his office. There never was an election by the people to fill a vacancy created in the office of Lieutenant Governor. There will be but one vacancy to fill next November, and that is the Governorship, and we are surprised that such newspapers as the Courier-Journal give publication to such an absurdity.

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern which is not afraid to be generous. The proprietors of Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles and have the satisfaction of knowing it has cured thousands of hopless cases. Asthma, Bronchitis, La grippe and all Throat and Lung diseases are surely cured by it. Call on W. F. McKim, Burlington; M. J. Crouch, Union, or J. G. Oelsner, Florence, druggists, and get a free bottle. Regular size 50c and $1. Every bottle guaranteed.

On the night of the 22d inst burglars visited the general store of Benjamin Smith, at Carson, Gallatin county, and after unlocking the door of the storeroom, blew the safe to pieces with dynamite. The charge must have been extra heavy, as it made a terrific noise and nearly wrecked the building, blowing out one side and shattering all of the glass in the windows, and parts of the iron safe were blown through the ceiling. Mr. Smith who resides close by, was aroused and ran to the store, to be confronted by two desperate robbers who threatened to shoot him if he did not return home. Smith ran back to get his revolver, but his wife, fearing for his personal safety, threw her arms about his neck and would not let him get out. The robbers secured about $300 in money from the safe and also took a lot of notes and other valuable papers, and made their escape. There is no clew, though it is presumed that the robbers were familiar with the premises, as it is an unusual thing for stores in this locality to keep any funds on hand over night, there being so many banks in the neighborhood.

TALMAGE ON CREEDS.

Preacher Would Rid Humanity of Ecclesiastical Dogma.

Moves for a Creed for All Denominations Made Out of Scripture Quotations—Things That Hamper Christians.

At a time when the old discussion of creeds is being vigorously and somewhat bitterly revived this discourse of Dr. Talmage has a special interest. The text is John xi., 44: "Loose him and let him go."

My Bible is at the place of this text written all over with lead pencil marks made at Bethany on the ruins of the house of Mary and Martha and Lazarus. We dismounted from our horses on the way up from Jordan to the Dead sea. Bethany was the summer evening retreat of Jesus. After spending the day in the hot city of Jerusalem he would come out there almost every evening to the house of his three friends. I think the occupants of that house were orphans, for the father and mother are not mentioned. But the son and two daughters must have inherited property, for it must have been, judging from what I saw of the foundations and the size of the rooms, an opulent home. Lazarus, the brother, was now at the head of the household, and his sisters depended on him and were proud of him, for he was very popular, and everybody liked him, and these girls were splendid girls—Martha, a first-rate housekeeper, and Mary, a spiritnelle, somewhat dreamy, but affectionate and as good a girl as could be found in all Palestine. But one day Lazarus got sick. The sisters were in consternation. Father gone, and mother gone, they felt very nervous lest they lose their brother also. Disease did its quick work. How the girls hung over his pillow! Not much sleep about that house—no sleep at all.

From the characteristics otherwise developed, I judge that Martha prepared the medicines and made tempting dishes of food for the poor appetite of the sufferer, but Mary prayed and sobbed. Worse and worse gets Lazarus until the doctor announces that he can do no more. The shriek that went up from that household when the last breath had been drawn and the two sisters were being led by sympathizers into the adjoining room all those of us can imagine who have had our own hearts broken. But why was not Jesus there as He had so often been? Far away in the country districts, preaching, healing other sick, how unfortunate that this omnipotent Doctor had not been at that domestic crisis in Bethany. When at last Jesus arrived in Bethany, Lazarus had been buried four days and dissolution had taken place. In that climate the breathless body disintegrates more rapidly than in ours. If, immediately after decease, the body had been awakened into life, unbelievers might have said he was only in a comatose state or in a sort of trance and by some vigorous manipulation or powerful stimulant vitality had been renewed. No! Four days dead.

At the door of the sepulcher is a crowd of people, but the three most memorable are Jesus, who was the family friend, and the two bereft sisters. We went into the traditional tomb one December day, and it is deep down and dark, and with torches we explored it. We found it all quiet that afternoon of our visit, but the day spoken of in the Bible there was present an excited multitude. I wonder what Jesus will do? He orders the door of the grave removed, and then he begins to descend the steps. Mary and Martha close after him, and the crowd after them. Deeper down into the shadows and deeper! The hot tears of Jesus roll over his cheeks and plash upon the back of His hands. Were ever so many sorrows compressed into so small a space as in that group pressing on down after Christ, all the time bemoaning that He had not come before?

Now all the whispering and all the crying and all the sounds of shuffling feet are stopped. It is the silence of expectancy. Death had conquered; but now the vanquisher of death confronted the scene. Amid the awful hush of the tomb, the familiar name which Christ had often had upon His lips in the hospitalities of the village home came back to His tongue, and with pathos and an almightiness of which the resurrection of the last day shall only be an echo, He cries: "Lazarus, come forth!" The eyes of the slumberer open, and he rises and comes to the foot of the steps and with great difficulty begins to ascend, for the cerements of the tomb are yet on him, and his feet are fast and his hands are fast and the impediments to all his movements are so great that Jesus commands: "Take off these cerements! Remove these hindrances! Unfasten these grave-clothes! Loose him, and let him go!"

Oh, I am so glad that after the Lord raised Lazarus He went on and commanded the loosening of the cords that bound his feet so that he could walk and the breaking of the cerements that bound his hands so that he could stretch out his arms in salutation and the tearing off of the bandage from around his jaws so that he could speak. What would resurrected life have been to Lazarus if he had not been freed from all those cripplements of his body? I am glad that Christ commanded his complete emancipation, saying: "Loose him, and let him go."

The unfortunate thing now is that so many Christians are only half-liberated. They have been raised from the death and burial of sin into spiritual life, but they yet have the grave-clothes on them. They are, like Lazarus, hobbling up the stairs of the tomb bound hand and foot, and the object of this sermon is to help free their body and free their souls, and I shall try to obey the Master's command that comes to me and comes to every minister of religion: "Loose him, and let him go!"

Many are bound hand and foot by religious creeds. Let no man misinterpret me as antagonizing creeds. I have eight or ten of them—a creed about religion, a creed about art, a creed about social life, a creed about government, and so on. A creed is something that a man believes, whether it be written or unwritten. The Presbyterian church is now agitated about its creed. Some good men in it are for keeping it because it was framed from the belief of John Calvin. Other good men in it want revision. I am with neither party. Instead of revision I want substitution. I was sorry to have the question disturbed at all. The creed did not hinder us from offering the pardon and the comfort of the Gospel to all men, and the Westminster Confession has not interfered with me one minute. But now that the electric lights have been turned on the imperfections of that creed—and everything that man fashions is imperfect—let us put the old creed respectfully aside and get a brand new one.

What a time we have had with the dogmatics, the apologetics and the hermeneutics. The defect in some of the creeds is that they try to tell us all about the decrees of God. Now the only human being that was ever competent to handle that subject was Paul, and he would not have been competent had he not been inspired. I believe in the sovereignty of God and I believe in man's free agency, but no one can harmonize the two. It is not necessary that we harmonize them. Every sermon that I have ever heard that attempted such harmonization was to me as clear as a London fog, as clear as mud. My brother of the nineteenth century, my brother of the sixteenth century, give us Paul's statement and leave out your own. Better one chapter of Paul on that subject than all of Calvin's institutes, able and honest and mighty as they are. Do not try to measure either the throne of God or the thunderbolts of God with your little steel pen. What do you know about the decrees? You cannot pry open the door of God's eternal counsels. You cannot explain the mysteries of God's government now; much less the mysteries of His government five hundred quintillion years ago.

I move for a creed for all our denominations made out of Scripture quotations pure and simple. That would take the earth for God. That would be impregnable against infidelity and Apollyonic assault. That would be beyond human criticism. The denomination, whatever its name be, that can rise up to that will be the church of the millennium, will swallow up all other denominations and be the one that will be the bride when the Bridegroom cometh. Let us make it simpler and plainer for people to get into the kingdom of God. Do not hinder people by the idea that they may not have been elected. Do not tag on to the one essential of faith in Christ any of the innumerable nonessentials. A man who heartily accepts Christ is a Christian, and the man who does not accept Him is not a Christian, and that is all there is of it. He need not believe in election or reprobation. He need not believe in the eternal generation of the Son. He need not believe in everlasting punishment. He need not believe in infant baptism. He need not believe in plenary inspiration. Faith in Christ is the criterion, is the test, is the pivot, is the indispensable.

But there are those who would add unto the tests rather than subtract from them. There are thousands who would not accept persons into church membership if they drink wine of if they smoke cigars or if they attend the theater or if they play cards or if they drive a fast horse. But do not substitute tests which the Bible does not establish. There is one passage of Scripture wide enough to let all in who ought to enter and to keep out all who ought to be kept out: "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." Get a man's heart right, and his life will be right. But now that the old creeds have been put under public scrutiny, something radical must be done. Some would split them, some would carve them, some would elongate them, some would abbreviate them. At the present moment and in the present shape they are a hindrance. Lazarus is alive, but hampered with the old grave-clothes. If you want one glorious church, free and unincumbered, take off the cerements of old ecclesiastical vocabulary. Loose her, and let her go!

Again, there are Christians who are under sepulchral shadows and fears and hoppled by doubts and fears and sins long ago repented of. What they need is to understand the liberty of the sons of God. They spend more time under the shadow of Sinai than at the base of Calvary. They have been singing the only poor hymn that Newton ever wrote:

> 'Tis a point I long to know;
> Oft it causes anxious thought;
> Do I love the Lord or no?
> Am I His or am I not?

Long to know, do you? Why do you not find out? Go to work for God, and you will very soon find out. The man who is all the time feeling his pulse and looking at his tongue to see whether it is coated is morbid and cannot be physically well. The doctor will say: "Go out into the fresh air and into active life and stop thinking of yourself, and you will get well and strong." So there are people who are watching their spiritual symptoms, and they call it self-examination, and they get weaklier and sicklier in their faith all the time. Go out and do something nobly Christian. Take holy exercise and then examine yourself, and instead of Newton's saturnine and bilious hymn that I first quoted you will sing Newton's other hymn:

> Amazing grace, how sweet the sound
> That saved a wretch like me!
> I once was lost, but now am found;
> Was blind, but now I see.

What many of you Christians most need is to get your graveclothes off. I rejoice that you have been brought from the death of sin to the life of the Gospel, but you need to get your hand loose, and your feet loose, and your tongue loose, and your soul loose. There is no sin that the Bible so arraigns and punctures and flagellates as the sin of unbelief, and that is what is the matter with you. "Oh," you say, "if you knew what I once was and how many times I have grievously strayed you would understand why I do not come out brighter!" Then I think you would call yourself the chief of sinners. I am glad you hit upon that term, for I have a promise that fits into your case as the cogs of one wheel between the cogs of another wheel or as the key fits into the labyrinths of a lock.

A man who was once called Saul, but afterward Paul, declared: "This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief." Mark that—"of whom I am chief." "Put down your overcoats and hats, and I will take care of them while you kill Stephen." So Saul said to the stoners of the first martyr. "I do not care to exert myself much, but I will guard your surplus apparel while you do the murder." The New Testament account says: "The witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul." No wonder he said: "Sinners, of whom I am the chief."

Christ is used to climbing. He climbed to the top of the temple. He climbed to the top of Mount Olivet. He climbed to the top of the cliffs about Nazareth. He climbed to the top of Golgotha. And to the top of the hills and the mountains of your transgression He is ready to climb with pardon for every one of you. The groan of Calvary is mightier than the thunder of Sinai. Full receipt is offered for all your indebtedness. If one throws a stone at midnight into a bush where the hedge bird roosts, it immediately begins to sing, and into the midnight hedges of your despondency these words I hurl, hoping to awaken you to anthem. Drop the tunes in the minor key and take the major. Do you think it pleases the Lord for you to be carrying around with you the debris and carcasses of old transgressions? You make me think of some ship that has had a tempestuous time at sea and now that it proposes another voyage keeps on its davits the damaged lifeboats and the splinters of a shivered mast and the broken glass of a smashed skylight. My advice is: Clear the decks, overboard with all the damaged rigging, brighten up the salted smokestacks, open a new logbook, haul in the planks, lay out a new course and set sail for Heaven. You have had the spiritual dumps long enough. You will please the Lord more by being happy than by being miserable.

Heaven is 95 per cent. better than this world, a thousand per cent. better, a million per cent. better. Take the gladdest, brightest, most jubilant days you ever had on earth and compress them all into one hour, and that hour would be a requiem, a fast day, a gloom, a horror, as compared with the poorest hour they have had in Heaven since its first tower was built or its first gate swung or its first song caroled. "Oh," you say, "that may be true, but I am so afraid of crossing over from this world to the next, and I fear the snapping of the cord between soul and body." Well, all the surgeons and physicians and scientists declare that there is no pang at the parting of the body and soul, and all the restlessness at the closing hour of life is involuntary, and no distress at all. And I agree with the doctors, for what they say is confirmed by the fact that persons who were drowned or were submerged until all consciousness departed and were afterward resuscitated declare that the sensation of passing into unconsciousness was pleasurable rather than distressful. The cage of the body has a door on easy hinges, and when that door of the physical cage opens the soul simply puts out its wings and soars.

"But," you say, "I fear to go because the future is so full of mystery." Well, I will tell you how to treat the mysteries. The mysteries have ceased bothering me, for I do as the judges of your courts often do. They hear all the arguments in the case and they say: "I will take these papers and give you my decision next week." So I have heard all the arguments in regard to the next world, and some things are uncertain and full of mystery, and so I fold up the papers and reserve until the next world my decision about them. I can there study all the mysteries to better advantage, for the light will be better and my faculties stronger, and I will ask the Christian philosophers, who have had all the advantages of Heaven for centuries, to help me, and I may be permitted myself humbly to ask the Lord, and I think there will be only one mystery left; that will be how one so unworthy as myself got into such an enraptured place. Come up out of the sepulchral shadows. If you are not Christians by faith in Christ, come up into the light; and if you are already like Lazarus, reanimated, but still have your grave clothes on, get rid of them. The command is: "Loose him and let him go."

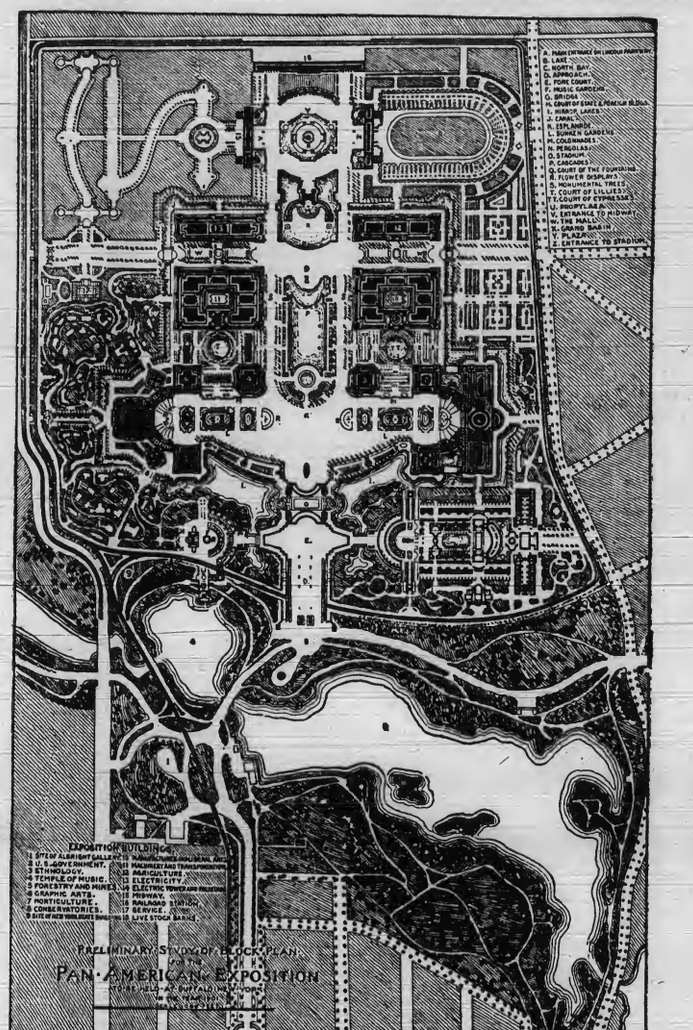
THE PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION of the YEAR 1901

Buffalo Is Arranging for a Magnificent Display of the Products of the Three Americas for Next Year—Elaborate Floral, Horticultural and Electrical Features

THE EXPOSITION GROUNDS.

They Have Been Elaborately Treated by Mother Nature.



The hand of the artist has labored without restraint in arranging the grounds and grouping the buildings for the great Pan-American exposition, to be held at Buffalo in 1901. The plan has been completed after protracted and painstaking study of the grounds and their surroundings, and with a keen appreciation of all the requirements of an exposition upon the scale of magnificence here contemplated. The completed work will be a masterpiece, in which the designer of buildings and the landscape architect will alike share the honors. American architectural genius has indeed here produced glorious results. If one were to see only the exterior of this splendid exposition he will find himself abundantly repaid for his visit to Buffalo in the Pan-American year.

The exposition grounds include 350 acres, of which 133 acres are improved park lands, a part of Delaware park. The grounds are about one mile from north to south and a half mile from east to west. Their situation is in the northern part of the city, accessible from every direction. The park lands form the southern part of the extensive grounds, and are pronounced by expert landscape architects to be among the most beautiful in the world. The trees and shrubbery in wonderful variety, the romantic foot paths leading in all directions among the thick foliage, the loveliest of lakes, on whose surface numberless swans and other water fowl of immaculate plumage are constantly at sport, the wide reaches of lawn and the rich embroidery of flowers, everywhere to be seen, all combine to refresh and restore the mind of him who tarries within those delectable precincts.

The visitor who approaches the exposition from the south will enter the grounds on Lincoln parkway, a broad, beautiful, shaded boulevard. Once inside the gates, the station of the intramural railway, which encircles the grounds, is at his left. But the walk is quite as tempting to the sight-seer. Nature has been assisted with consummate skill by the landscape architect, and here she presents her varied colors with the grace and refinement that years of culture have given her.

WILLIAM I. BUCHANAN.

He Is the Competent Director General of the Exposition.

The director general of the Pan-American exposition, Hon. William I. Buchanan, came prominently before the public when he took a leading part in the organization of the Sioux City Corn Palace Exposition company. He became the moving spirit of that very successful enterprise, which proved to be a stepping stone to larger responsibilities at the World's Columbian exposition at Chicago. Here he became chief of the departments of agriculture, live stock and forestry, his natural executive powers finding wide opportunity for their exercise and development. The success of those departments is without precedent. At the close of the Columbian exposition, President Cleveland appointed Mr. Buchanan United States minister to the Argentine Republic. In this important field of diplomatic work he remained nearly six years, notwithstanding the change of administration at Washington. Mr. Buchanan's eminent efficiency and usefulness was so generally recognized by the leading men of the Argentine Republic that a request for his retention there was favorably considered by President McKinley. During his mission he was chosen arbitrator by Chili and the Argentine Republic to settle one portion of their long-standing boundary dispute that had more than once threatened war between the two countries. The task was performed so successfully and the differences settled so amicably that, in addition to his receiving the thanks of both governments, a quantity of war equipment ordered from Herr Krupp, the famous gunmaker of Essen, Germany, but not delivered to the Argentine government, was exchanged for many miles of railway materials to be used in developing the resources of Patagonia. Mr. Buchanan also negotiated the commercial convention between the Argentine Republic and the United States and the extradition treaty with the same country now before the United States senate. When the necessity for choosing a director general of the Pan-American exposition presented itself the directors saw in Mr. Buchanan the man possessing the qualities required for the successful development of such a giant enterprise. He was induced to abandon his foreign post and take up the direct management of the great work in which the people of Buffalo had so heartily enlisted. Mr. Buchanan has an intimate knowledge of the needs, the resources and conditions of Latin America, and the excellent progress making in all departments of the Pan-American exposition shows him to be one who can view broadly the gigantic task before him and direct it with a master hand.

SUNLIGHT AT NIGHT.

What a Prominent Resident of Xenia Says About Acetylene Gas—Lots of Light—Little Expense.

From the Xenia (O.) Daily Gazette, April 13.

Mr. L. M. Garfield, well known in this city as the superintendent of the Miami Powder Works, was recently interviewed by a Gazette representative, regarding his personal experience with the new illuminant, known to the commercial world as Acetylene Gas. Mr. Garfield said:

"I installed a ten light acetylene generator in the cellar of my residence, 428 North Galloway street, about two years ago, and I have used it for illuminating my home every night since. I have certainly given it a thorough test during that length of time, and know its advantages. While the machine is supposed to develop sufficient gas for but ten lights, I have often used as many as fifteen lights at once with perfect success. The light it gives is brilliant and white, and the nearest approach to sunlight of anything yet produced for artificial lighting."

"What about the expense, Mr. Garfield?"

"I have paid about four dollars a hundred pounds for the calcium carbide which is used in the generator to make the gas, and use something less than seven hundred pounds a year. Approximately the total cost per year has been about twenty-seven dollars, as the carbide is the only expense. It is the perfection of light at little cost and trifling labor, free from odor or anything objectionable. I have nothing but praise for the generator and the light it develops, and I am not speaking theoretically, but from my actual experience in my own residence."

In this connection, the 1899 report to the Governor of the State, of Mr. A. W. Stiles, secretary of the Girls' Industrial Home, at Rathbone, O., regarding the Acetylene Gas plant in use in that institution, will be of interest to our readers.

Mr. Stiles says: "Our Acetylene Gas plant has given very gratifying results during the past year, the light from it being a very steady, white light, without smoke, by far superior and more satisfactory than that furnished by the old system used here. We now have about 600 burners, which can be increased, with but a very small outlay, to five times that number. We have had no trouble in getting all the carbide we need. Including all expenses incurred in remodeling and changing the (gas) plant to the present system, our lights have not cost us nearly so much for the year as did the system abandoned in July, 1898. There is no more danger in using it than there is in the use of any gas. We think it is the best light known, and requires but little skill in its manufacture."

The popularity of this new illuminant is attested by the fact that in the few years since its development into a commercial possibility, over fifty thousand buildings have been successfully lighted by it, and the annual ratio of increase is becoming greater yearly.

It is the ideal light for dwellings, stores, churches and every class of building where artificial light is needed, and it is little wonder that the owners of indifferently lighted buildings are looking earnestly into the subject of lighting by Acetylene Gas.

FOR WOMAN'S HEALTH

Earnest Letters from Women Relieved of Pain by Mrs. Pinkham.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Before I commenced to take your medicine I was in a terrible state, wishing myself dead a good many times. Every part of my body seemed to pain in some way. At time of menstruation my suffering was something terrible. I thought there was no cure for me, but after taking several bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound all my bad feelings were gone. I am now well and enjoying good health. I shall always praise your medicine."—MRS. AMOS FESCHLER, Box 226, Romeo, Mich.

Female Troubles Overcome

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I had female trouble, painful menses, and kidney complaint, also stomach trouble. About a year ago I happened to pick up a paper that contained an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and when I read how it had helped others, I thought it might help me, and decided to give it a trial. I did so, and as a result am now feeling perfectly well. I wish to thank you for the benefit your medicine has been to me."—MRS. CLARA STIEBER, Diller, Neb.

No More Pain

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Your Vegetable Compound has been of much benefit to me. When my menses first appeared they were very irregular. They occurred too often and did not leave for a week or more. I always suffered at these times with terrible pains in my back and abdomen. Would be in bed for several days and would not be exactly rational at times. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and menses became regular and pains left me entirely."—MRS. H. F. [illegible], Brule, Wis.

RESCUED JUDAS ISCARIOT.

Death of an Inexperienced American Army Officer Into an Excited Cuban Mob.

Down in Cuba when a fellow gets religion he gets it mighty bad. On no day in the year does militant Christianity crop out more strongly than on that set apart as a reminder of the betrayal of Jesus Christ by Judas Iscariot. What they do to Judas on this occasion is a sad tale. They bring him into being in the shape of a tough, old rag dummy, and men with an ecstatic enthusiasm, which, if properly applied, would go a long way toward rehabilitating the island, proceed to kick the stuffing out of him. Everybody takes a hack at him and the whole proceeding, being of the nature of a tiny revolution, immense enjoyment is thereby obtained together with the soothing balm of Gilead for their religiously outraged souls.

An American lieutenant witnessed one of these vengeances upon Judas this year and now he is sorry he did. He is stationed down in the eastern end of the island in command of a rest pocket garrison. One day he was sitting in his quarters when he heard a distant roar like the voice of a great multitude in anger. It came closer and closer and soon he could distinguish fearful and angry oaths, as though a mob were fearfully enraged. Rushing to a window he looked out and saw a great crowd of men and women swirling through the plaza. They were dragging an unfortunate creature by a rope, which was tied around the victim's neck. As they yanked the object of their wrath along members of the mob jumped upon the prostrate figure with hideous screams of rage, waving their arms with all the fury of madmen.

The lieutenant saw in a second what was happening. The Cubans had found some unfortunate Spanish exguerrilla and they were lynching him. Not an instant was to be lost. The lieutenant seized his pistol and rushed fearless into the surging mob, yelling in his most terrific tones for the crowd to stand back. All the while he was discharging his revolver to give weight to his commands. With great precipitancy the men stood apart to permit the officer to pass. Was he in time, he wondered, as he dashed down upon his knees beside the bedraggled figure, his fingers clutching at the rope about the choking neck. With an oath the lieutenant stood up. The victim was poor old Judas Iscariot, dead more than 1,800 years.

"The d—d fools!" was his one exclamation of disgust as he turned back to his quarters with a very red face, while the guffaws of the Cubans followed. The lieutenant kept out of sight the rest of that day and the good old haters of the world's arch-traitor wound up their day by burning the effigy in the most approved manner.—N. Y. Sun.

GOVERNMENT TELEGRAPHY.

It Has Been a Great Success in Great Britain During the Past Thirty Years.

Since the British government, in the year 1870, assumed control of all inland telegrams, the business of that department of the general post office has grown to enormous proportions. The object of assuming this control was twofold: First, to reduce the exorbitant telegraph tolls of private companies—tolls so high as virtually to be prohibitive for many kinds of business; and, secondly, to safeguard the public against any return to former charges. It matters not what one may think as to the desirability of the introduction of such a system into the United States, the fact is patent that in Great Britain it has proved a signal success. The twofold object was long since attained, and there is no likelihood that the system will be overthrown.

The report of the post office department for 1899 gives the latest available figures. This report shows that the people so far appreciate and utilize the system that they sent in 1899, up to the date of the closing of the report, in ordinary telegrams, cable messages, government, franked, and reduced-rate dispatches, over 3,000,000 messages more than during 1898. In 1869, the year before the government assumption, 7,000,000 messages were sent; in 1899, nearly 90,000,000 messages. In 1869 the average charge for telegrams was a little over 50 cents, while the charge for the same message to-day, inclusive of address, is about 15 cents. In 1869 there were under 300 employes, while there are at present over 3,000 in the London office alone. Last year, after allowing for a deficit of at least a million dollars in the department devoted to the daily newspapers, the system cleared above all cost of maintenance over $165,000, in round numbers, $850,000.—W. S. Harwood, in Century.

He Was Insulting.

The ancient lady clerk, whose term of departmental service began, not with the era of the Hyksos kings of Egypt, but with the beginning of the regime of the lamented Gen. Spinner, had just stooped behind her desk screen the other afternoon to dab her nose with a chamois skin powder rag—preparatory to a one-minute-to-four department — when the new male stenographer who was audibly checking off an account for one of the auditors sang out:

"Flour—two hundred-weight,' "

"Insulting creature," muttered the ancient lady clerk, hastily restoring the powder rag to its receptable, and then all of the subdued ancient male clerks in the room sniggered in a way that was real rude, to say the least.—Washington Post.

Millions for Baseball.

A million of dollars are spent every year upon the game of baseball, but as large as this sum is, it cannot begin to equal the amount spent by people in search of health. There is a sure method of obtaining strength, and it is not a costly one. We urge those who have spent much and lost hope to try Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It strengthens the stomach, makes digestion easy and natural, and cures dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness and weak kidneys.

His Fatal Mistake.

"Ah, no!"

Count De Flattebroke raised his voice to a tone of impassioned protest as he addressed the homely heiress.

"Ah, no! I do not love you for your money. It is for your fair face that I love. My affection is as great as your beauty."

Then, count," came the cruel answer of Miss Ugleigh, "you'll have to look a little further. Your affection doesn't appeal to me."

For she had a mirror that had told her a few things about her beauty.

Besides, as she afterward said, "What's the use of having money if it isn't appreciated?"

Mound Field Farm.

Mrs. J. W. Davis has returned from visiting her daughter at Erlanger.

John Rucker is having his residence painted. Willis Clore and R. L. Bradford are the decorators.

The recent warm rains have brought the grass out wonderfully fast, pastures already are looking green.

It is reported that the ground is full of cut worms, ready to make war on the vegetation when it appears.

We have made our last shipment of bulbs and plants from the farm that we will have to spare this season.

Mike Clore is nursing a mashed finger caused by its coming in contact with the underside of a big stone he let fall.

Geo. Ruth's butcher wagon loaded with choice cuts of beef, put in its appearance here Saturday, for the first time this season.

Dr. Sayre had his garden painted last week. A man with a team, wagon and fork changed the color from a rich golden yellow to a dark brown.

The extremely cold winter just passed, has killed out all the early greens in this locality—how we are to subsist until mustard comes, God only knows.

Dr. Sayre will devote a good portion of his leisure time this summer, cultivating the Yellow Danver onion from the seed—will report developments later on.

Just as soon as the frost gets out of the ground a little more Dock Mannin would like to get several good hands to assist him in digging his last year's crop of Hoosier Boy potatoes.

While at Francisville the other day we were requested by Charlie Graves to go and look at his potatoe patch, which we did, and found Charlie's prospects flattering for a big crop.

Met our life-long friend, Bud Cropper, one day last week, whom we had not seen in many moons. He is looking well and said the only trouble he was experiencing was the fact that he had not changed shirts in the last two weeks, on account of the many freshfish he had been eating recently—the bones were beginning to protrude through so that he could not get his shirt off without pairing him.

Met the veteran basket maker, Mike Muntz, from Francisville, on his way home from the city where he had been with a load of baskets. He insisted on our looking in his wagon to see what he had got in exchange for his wares—12 sacks of middlings, 1 sack of oats, 1 barrel of bakers bread, and a half bushel of silver money. Mike thought it a big load to bring home and we shared the same opinion he did. It is a wonder the farmers do not sow more willows than they do, as they must be a paying crop.

Dock Mannin experienced a very narrow escape from being eaten up by snakes the other day. He was cutting sprouts and bushes from around stumps over on Willie Grubb's farm, when he came to what he took to be a Linn stump, he made a lick near by when to his surprise the stump melted down to the ground and instead of its being a stump it was a heap of spreading adders piled upon theuselves, they at once made for him, and he at once fell back and calling his son, John, who was in the field, to come there. They proceeded to dispatch them, and put in the balance of the evening killing snakes. Dock thinks they got all, perhaps some 8 or 9 might have crawled off and got away.

Midway.

G. E. Carroll has been on the road for the past two weeks for a tobacco firm in Virginia.

Squire J. Sam Noell and wife, of Hume, were visiting at W. C. Johnson's at Midway, last Friday.

The family of Peter Kraus has been sorely afflicted the past week with scarlet fever. They are reported better at this writing.

Mr. F. D. Carpenter, a house carpenter, of Beaver, has just finished for himself and moved into a pretty cottage home at that place.

Mr. Lon Henry and wife had a pretty Easter presentation in the form of a little son, April 15th. Lou is looking over the directory of possible presidential material for a name suitable for the youngster.

T. Jake Hughes is preparing to extend his telephone system to Berkshire via Hume, which will open up quite a large territory of talk for his clever enterprise. He expects to build the line next week.

Quite a number of our farming fraternity have planted corn, and M. C. Carroll, last week, robbed his sheep of their warm fleeces. The promise for good, early tobacco plants in this locality is not very flattering.

Last Saturday, W. C. Johnson and Geo. Slayback took their books, lines, boys and bait and repaired to the rugged banks of Big Bone creek for a little fishing diversion. Aside from landing a large logger-head turtle, the day passed off with few events worthy special mention.

There will be a meeting of the stockholders of the proposed 'pike from the Springs to Beaver Lick, Saturday, April 28th, for the consideration of bids for the building of said road. There seems to be no doubt at present that the road will be built, and everybody along the route is delighted.

If you are seeking worthy presidential aspirants, how would Silver John R. McLean gold Dewey? this is a fragment from a boom launched by Mars Henri Watterson, May 2, 1895. W. J. Bryan is looking for the remainder of the wreck hoping he will be able—never to find it.

Marbles hold the day at Beaver at present, and daily a large crowd of youngsters and "oldsters" meet to test their relative ability to "poke" farthest and "swipe" the most "ducks." Sam Sleet and Clyde Eldred did some fancy "punching" last Saturday afternoon, which was pronounced by all the "guys" present, a record breaker.

People of Midway are sorry to lose their efficient old mail carrier, Walt Brown, who has served the patrons of the route honorably, but we are glad to learn his successor, Will Hume, is to take charge of the mail services on the route. Mr. Hume has had considerable experience in the business over in the Berkshire neighborhood which will enable him to render satisfaction all along the line.

George English, of McCoy's Fork, lost a valuable horse, one night last week. The animal was taken from the barn early in the night and the thief had ample time to get out of the county before his work was known. Freaks of this nature are becoming rather too frequent in this county, and a few applications of summary punishment to the perpetrators of such offences would be opportune and wholesome.

Flickertown.

Miss Lou Sebree is no better.

Arthur Delph lost a fine horse, one day last week.

Miss Julia Smith has completed her new buggy house.

Ben Hensley had a wood-sawing last Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hensley were visiting in Covingtou, last Monday.

Mrs. Bettie Botts and children were visiting Mrs. Will Botts a few days since.

Mrs. Beemon, of Bellevue, is visiting her sons, Oscar and Charles, this week.

Woody Sullivan was able to be out last Thursday and made a flying trip to Petersburg.

No house cleaning has been done in this vicinity on account of the bad, muddy weather.

Miss Ethel Sebree was the guest of Misses Artie and Lou Sullivan, last Monday night and Tuesday.

Miss Alice Deck and brother, Miss Georgia Sullivan and mother were visiting Mrs. Katie Beemon, Wednesday.

It is said our old friend, Frank Cason, is going to move back to his farm near Uzinger. We are glad to hear it.

George White, son of James White, passed through our town, one day last week, going to see his grand-father on Gunpowder.

O. P. Phipps says he is going to quit huckstering and there will be a new huckster in his place. We hate to see Orrin quit.

Misses Georgia Sullivan and Stella Nichols, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Acra, Frank Voshell, wife and little boy, were the pleasant guests of Albert Acra and family, Easter Sunday.

Gasburg.

Frank Klopp is building an addition to his house.

The sweet potato raisers made their warm beds last week.

The usual large acreage of melons will be planted this season.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hartman entertained friends from the city, Sunday.

Mr. Klopp and family, of Petersburg, visited Jacob Klopp and family, Sunday.

Mrs. Ella Terrill received a lot of cattle from Louisville, last week, to graze on her blue grass farm.

Martin Kettle has moved to the Buffington place opposite Aurora, which was lately purchased by Chas. Jenkins.

Scott Chambers, Buford Terrill and Miss Alta Terrill, of the Flickertown-Uzinger country were visiting at your scribe's, Sunday.

Paris Parker, who has been attending medical school in Cincinnati, has returned for the summer. He will probably go to Covington to assist in Early & Daniels, branch store there for a short time.

Ernest Grant and Wm. Botts were around, lately, in the interest of the Woolper bridge. A New Yorker has designed a street cleaning machine to be operated by one man, having a rotary brush geared to a large wheel, to be rapidly turned and sweep the dirt into an endless chain of buckets, which empty into a bag suspended from the machine as the latter is propelled along the pavement.

Colossal crosses are to be erected this year on nineteen mountain peaks of Italy to commemorate the nineteenth century of the Christian era. A religious society will have charge of the matter. The crosses will be cut from granite, marble, or whatever stone characterizes each region, and will bear an inscription.

The English people think that the proposed new ninepenny coin will enable them to get the better of the French, who, it is assumed, will accept the coin as the equivalent of a franc. At present, when John Bull visits Paris, he frequently has to surrender a shilling in exchange for an article the value of which is a franc.

An example of patient industry is the sorting of hogs' bristles as it is carried on at Tien-Tsn, China. Each bristle of the 600,000 kilograms exported from that place in 1898 had to be picked out, measured and placed in the bundle of hairs of corresponding length; and the different lengths by which the hairs are sorted are numerous.

"The Christian" is the name of a Chicago restaurant conducted on Bible principles. Its proprietor is a reformed drunkard and he is making a success of his novel enterprise. He has decorated his walls with scriptural quotations, holds gospel meetings on Saturday evenings, and closes the place on Sundays. The bill-of-fare bears familiar texts.

A curious plant is the "tooth-brush" plant of Jamaica. It is a species of creeper, and has nothing particularly striking about its appearance. By cutting pieces of it to a suitable length and fraying the ends, the natives convert it into a tooth-brush; and a tooth powder to accompany the use of the brush is also prepared by pulverizing the dead stems.

A movement is on foot in Alabama to have congress appropriate $75,000 for a survey of a canal from the Tennessee to the Warrior river, and from that stream to North Birmingham. This route would afford an outlet for the east Tennessee ores to the Birmingham district, and would also give a cheap route for timber and grain. It is said there are no serious engineering difficulties to be overcome.

A tablet of stone in memory of Bishop Welton has been placed in old Christ church, Philadelphia. Bishop Welton served the Philadelphia parish from 1724 to 1726. Prior to his arrival he had attained considerable note in the English church, among other positions having held the important rectorship of White chapel, London. He was the earliest consecrated bishop in America, and, with possibly one exception, the only one prior to the revolution.

In the Journal of the College of Science, of Tokyo, Prof. Sekiya gives an extensive account of Japanese earthquakes from 416 A. D. to the end of 1898, the total number of destructive shocks being 222. It is found that while small earthquakes are numerous seriously destructive ones are less so; this is explained by the fact that in an unstable country like Japan, if the earth stress is used up in numerous small shocks there will be so much less force stored up to produce extensive disturbances.

Joseph W. Holden, who died at Otisfield, Me., the other day, was the Professor Holden who for many years preached the theory that the earth was flat. He started life as a farmer and was very successful. He was at one time a trial justice, and at another, a member of the state legislature. He got his notion of the earth's flatness by sitting up several nights and noticing that the water in his mill pond did not run out when, according to other theorists, the globe was upside down.

Senator Pettus does not show his years, but, nevertheless, he is the oldest member of the senate, in years, not in point of service. He is most highly esteemed, not only by reason of his age, but because he has a geniality and personality that make him a lovable old man. He was born in Limestone county, Ala., in 1821, his grandfahter having been a Revolutionary soldier. He was a lieutenant in the Mexican war, and entered the Civil war on the Confederate side as major, rising through promotions to the rank of brigadier general.

THEIR WORK FINISHED.

Grand Jury Completes Investigation of the Goebel Assassination.

Ex-Gov. Bradley, Taylor's Leading Counsel, Says He Has No Doubt but What His Client Will Surrender Promptly If Indicted.

Frankfort, Ky., April 18.—The Franklin county grand jury returned indictments against ten persons charging them with complicity in the murder of William Goebel. Henry R. Youtsey, James Howard, Berry Howard, Harland Whittaker and "Tallow Dick" Combs, colored, were indicted for willful murder, Caleb Powers, Capt John L. Powers, Chas. Finley, W. H. Culton and F. Wharton Golden were indicted as accessories before the fact. In the indictment relating to the alleged accessories three other men are indirectly referred to as accessories though no indictments were reported against them.

Frankfort, Ky., April 21.—The grand jury before adjourning Thursday until Saturday indicted Republican Gov. W. S. Taylor as an accessory to the murder of William Goebel. The indictment is similar to those returned against Green Golden and John Davis Thursday. It was not turned over to the circuit court, but left in the hands of Judge Cantrill, who gave the jurors and court officials orders not to allow it to become public until a bench warrant, issued Thursday, is served. The news, however, leaked out, and wires between here and Washington were kept hot Thursday night by messages to Taylor from republicans who advise him to remain away, for the present, at least.

Frankfort, Ky., April 23.—While the Franklin county grand jury has not adjourned, it is understood that the investigation of the Goebel assassination has been completed. The indictment against Mr. Taylor, charging him with being an accessory to the murder, will be held up until after the argument of the governorship contest case, which is docketed for hearing before the supreme court at Washington on April 30, and it said by persons in the councils of the prosecution that no such warrant will be issued or other steps taken in the case till after that time. The rumor that Beckham had been applied to for a requisition is without foundation.

Ex-Gov. W. O. Bradley, leading counsel for Mr. Taylor, gave to the press the following authorized interview:

"I have had no communication with Gov. Taylor since he went to Washington. The press, I notice, states that he is there preparing his case for the supreme court. I am satisfied that this is not true. Gov. Taylor went to Washington on purely personal business not connected in any way with the trial of his case. N.o do I believe the report to be true that he is in New York attempting to prevent the honoring of a requisition for his return to this state. As to whether a requisition could be lawfully issued by Mr. Beckham or would be recognized, it is unnecessary for me to express an opinion, as there are questions that must be determined by the authority upon whom such a requisition may be made.

"Gov. Taylor has publicly declared that he was not and would never be a fugitive from justice, and that if indicted he would respect the law and meet his accusers face to face. Therefore, there remains but one course open to him, and that is to return as soon as he can, walk boldly and bravely into court and meet the indictment like a man. Any other course would be rank injustice not only to himself, but to those of his friends who have been accused of so foul a crime. I do not know whether an indictment has been found against Gov. Taylor, but if it has I have no doubt that he will promptly surrender himself into the hands of the law, and believe that any intimation to the contrary does him an injustice."

Shot Down By a Bandit.

Eagle Pass, Tex., April 23.—News has just reached here of the killing of Jordon L. Cooke at Acatlan, Oaxaca, Mexico. Cooke was in charge of a railroad construction gang at that place and was standing in a group of half a dozen men when a bandit rode up and fired several shots into them, killing young Cooke. His father, who is ex-Sheriff Cooke, of Maverick county, Texas, has taken the matter up with the Mexican authorities.

Mrs. C. E. Haskell Dead.

Chicago, April 22.—Mrs. Caroline E. Haskell, well known because of her gifts to the University of Chicago and to the various charitable institutions of Chicago, died Saturday in Michigan City, Ind., where she was visiting friends. Mrs. Haskell was the founder of Haskell hall and the Haskell Oriental museum of the University of Chicago. Among her endowments was $50,000 to the Hahneman hospital of this city.

Rev. Charles Beecher Dead.

Haverhill, Mass., April 22.—Rev. Charles Beecher, a brother of the late Henry Ward Beecher, died Saturday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. G. W. Noyes, in Georgetown. He was 84 years old, and was the youngest of the Beecher family.

Porte Replies to America's Demands.

Constantinople, April 23.—The porte has replied to the American demands, stating that Turkey will compensate American missionaries under the same conditions as in the case of other foreign subjects.

DEADLY FOREST FIRES.

It is Feared 20 to 30 Lives Have Been Lost Along the Southeastern Railway in Manitoba.

Winnipeg, Man., April 22.—It is now feared that 20 or 30 lives have been lost in the forest fires along the Southeastern railroad. The delayed regular train arrived early Saturday and the lumberman who had escaped from the fire confirm all reports of the serious nature of the fires and especially expressed fears for the safety of the men at Keith's lumber camp. The fire smoldered for two or three days, and was fanned into a blaze by a high wind, sweeping clean a strip three miles wide. The water tank of metal and full of water at Vassar's Siding was consumed. It is stated that all the men in Keith's and Buchanan's lumber camps were surrounded. Many horses are known to have perished. It is hoped, however, that some at least of the men may have escaped. The property loss will be very heavy.

STARTS FOR PORTO RICO.

Gov. Allen Leaves Washington for the Scene of His New Duties—Sailed in the Dauphin.

Washington, April 22.—Promptly at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon in a drizzling rain the U. S. S. Dolphin east off from her dock at the Washington navy yard and steamed down the Potomac, carrying Gov. Allen, of Porto Rico, to the scene of his new cuties. As the Dolphin sailed away the Marine band played "Old Lang Syne," the yard batteries boomed a parting salute, a detachment of marines under command of Maj. Dickins drew up at "Present arms," and handkerchiefs waved from the friends and onlookers gathered on shore.

Capt. Sutherland expects to make the trip to San Juan in six days, arriving at Porto Rico on the 27th instant.

COLOMBIAN REVOLT GROWING.

Rebels Successful in Several Engagements, and Several Important Cities Captured.

Kingston, Jamaica, April 23.—Advices from Colombia say that Bocas del Toro, Panama, is in possession of the rebels. Last Friday the government chartered a British steamer at Colon to take the troops to Bocas del Toro, where an important battle is expected. With Bocas del Toro in the hands of the rebels, Colon is practically threatened.

There is considerable excitement at Carthagena over a report that Barranquilla has fallen into the hands of the insurgents. This rumor is not entirely credited, but there are good grounds for believing that the town will be taken.

Thinks There Will Be No Trouble.

Washington, April 21.—Ali Ferrough Bey, the Turkish minister, said that he probably would hear from his government in a short time concerning the American claims. He insists that an amicable settlement can be arranged and repeats his statement already published, that, in view of the high esteem in which he was held by the sultan and the fact of his acting in a diplomatic capacity, Minister Straus was not justified in making the assertion that the sultan had broken his promise in regard to the settlement of the claims.

Laughed Himself to Death.

St. Louis, April 22.—"Bud" Ferguson, a Negro 26 years old, laughed himself to death because the St. Louis baseball team had defeated the Pittsburgh nine, and he had won a large sum of money. He was returning to his home in high elation on a street car when he met some of his friends, and in telling them of his good fortune laughed so heartily and continuously that he caused a hemorrhage of the lungs and died on the street car before aid could be summoned.

Murder at a Church Door.

Syracuse, N. Y., April 23.—John Hughes, aged 60 years, shot and killed his wife, Hannah Hughes, and seriously wounded Elizabeth Lyons, aged 16 years, as the women were leaving St. Vincent de Paul's church at noon. He then went to the house of a friend a mile distant and attempted to commit suicide by stabbing himself near the breast with a pair of shears. He was found there by the police and arrested. Hughes and his wife had separated. The Lyons girl was accidentally hit by a stray bullet.

Queen Victoria's Sunday.

Dublin, April 23.—Queen Victoria attended divine service in the chapel of the vice regal lodge. In the afternoon she went for a drive, visiting St. Vincent's Catholic college. The weather was as hot and sunny as it usually is in June.

After More Horses.

Chicago, April 22.—Two men representing the British war department are negotiating at the stockyards for 10,000 horses for service in South Africa.

Adm. Dewey Hesitating.

Washington, April 23.—Adm. Dewey is hesitating about issuing his political statement. Men close to the admiral are urging him to speak, and to speak promptly, while others are impressing upon him the value of the rule, "Silence is golden."

Disabled Steamer Towed Into Port

Halifax, N. S., April 23.—The British steamer Sir Garnet Wolseley, from Philadelphia for Cork, which has been boating around the ocean disabled for two weeks, was towed into Halifax by the British steamer Runo.

HIS MARCH STOPPED.

English Advance Guard Meets the Boers Strongly Entrenched.

Gen. Brabant's Relief Column Is Reported to Be in the Neighborhood of Bushman's Kop, Twenty Miles From Wepener.

Maseru, Basutland, April 22.—Gen. Brabant's advanced guard reached Bushman's Kop last evening. The Boers held a strong position there with two guns. The engagement opened at sunrise, with heavy rifle fire. At 6:30 a. m. cannonading began and continued for several hours.

Gen. Brabant's forces are on the plain and have fairly open country all the way to Wepener, 20 miles away.

Four Boer guns were hard at work till day yesterday on Col. Dalgety's position. The British guns replied at intervals.

The Boers are divided into three divisions, two being in positions to repel the relief columns, the distant roar of whose artillery is audible. Evidently the Boers re-attacked Col. Dalgety to-day.

Col Dalgety Heliographs: "All well. Boers had 300 shells yesterday without doing damage."

The Basutos are posted on the border for defensive purposes. They are behaving in orderly fashion, but are showing the most intense interest in the outcome of the developments of the next 24 hours.

London, April 23.—The Daily News has the following from Lorenzo Marques, dated Friday, April 20:

"It is reported here that Gen. Devet has been killed.

"Other European ambulance corps besides the Irish-American are taking up arms in behalf of the Boers. The latter are unable to obtain smokeless powder.

"Trenches are being constructed for eight miles around Pretoria. There are 69 guns in position at Kroonstad and seven French guns at Pretoria. Twenty-five mines at Johannesburg have been charged with dynamite and the Johannesburg fort has been dismantled."

London, April 23.—The Lorenzo Marques correspondent of the Times, under Saturday's date, says: "Information received from responsible sources shows that at one time the two republics had 105,000 men in the field, including the colonial rebels. According to the same informant, they can still muster 80,000, of whom 50,000 are in the Free State, 10,000 are in the Biggarsberg district and 15,000 in the districts of Fourteen Streams and Klerksdorp. It is now believed that before the war the burgher lists were deliberately falsified in order to deceive the British intelligence department."

London, April 23.—The Kimberley correspondent of the Morning Post, telegraphing Sunday, says: "The Boers are reported to be near Frankfort, where the country is very difficult. At Klipdam they are entrenching their positions."

London, April 23.—A dispatch to the Times from Jammersburg, dated Sunday, says: "The Boers are displaying renewed activity. Five guns were used freely to-day from four different positions against ours. A rifle firing to the south and west was heavy and continuous. Officers and men are on duty day and night in the trenches, and the heavy rains of late have made their task a great feat of endurance and pluck."

Bloemfontein, Friday, April 20.—Continuing their march on Friday Gens. Chermside and Rundle came into contact with the Boers near Dewetsdorp at noon. The fighting continued in the dark and was principally carried on by the artillery which temporarily silenced both of the Boers' guns.

Bloemfontein, April 20.—The British command the hills for miles around the Boers, who are reported to hold strong positions, but are probably retiring.

The casualties on the British side were slight and most of them occurred among the yeomanry and mounted infantry.

The firing was at long range. None of the British troops were killed.

Bushop, Orange Free State, April 22—At midday yesterday Gen. Bethuen's field force at Swartzkopjesfontein was ordered to return to Boshof. Its convoy extended over six miles. The escort took up a position on a hill commanding the road, just in the nick of time, as a force of 2,000 Boers with two guns and a pompom suddenly appeared in the vicinity and opened a very heavy fire. The British however held them in check until the column reached a point of safety when they retired. The British had several casualties. The Boers fought determinedly and must have sufferec considerably, as they once advanced to within 300 yards of the hill, where a concealed detachment of the British opened a heavy fusilade on them.

Refused Admittance.

Seattle, Wash., April 22.—Thirty of 326 Japanese brought by the steamship Dio Jun Maru have been refused admittance to the United States by the commissioners, and if their opinion is concurred in by a board of inquiry, they will be returned to Japan.

Found Her Guilty.

Middlebourne, W. Va., April 22.—A verdict of involuntary manslaughter was rendered in the trial of Alma Bowen for the killing of Harry Defenbaugh. She was given six months in the penitentiary and fined $25.

FIFTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

Summary of Leading Events.

Washington, April 16.—Senate—The entire session was taken up discussing the Alaskan civil code bill. The amendment providing for the mining of gold along the beach in the district was perfected after a discussion lasting nearly four hours.

House—Consideration of the naval appropriation bill was begun with the prospects of a severe struggle ahead over the question of armor plate, building ships in government yards, and the provision in the bill for the coast and geodetic survey. The bill carries $13,000,000 more than any previous naval bill.

Washington, April 18.—Senate—For more than three hours Mr. Hoar, the senior senator from Massachusetts occupied the attention of the senate with a speech in opposition to the policy of "imperialism" upon which he maintained this government has embarked. Nothing was accomplished.

House—The second day's debate upon the naval appropriation bill was confined closely to the subject matter of the bill, and was in a rule devoid of interesting features. The questions of armor plate and the building of warships in government yards attracted most attention. General debate was closed.

Washington, April 18.—Senate—A resolution was adopted authorizing the secretary of the navy to have struck bronze medals for distribution among certain officers and men of the North Atlantic squadron, commemorating naval engagements between the forces of Spain and the United States in the waters of the West Indies and off the Cuban coast. It carries an appropriation of $25,000. The rest of the session was taken up in discussing the Alaskan civil code bill.

House—The debate on the naval appropriation bill under the five-minute rule drifted into politics, and for a good portion of the session members fought hammer and tongs across the political aisle. Some progress was made with the bill, but most of the controverted points went over.

Washington, April 19.—Senate—A joint resolution was passed providing for the administration of civil affairs in Porto Rico, pending the appointment of officers under the Porto Rican government law recently enacted. The Alaskan code bill was again under consideration, the debate continuing on the Hansbrough alien miners amendment.

House—The entire session was taken up debating a proposition in the naval bill designed to turn over to the navy the survey and charting of the waters of Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines. The bill carried an appropriation of $100,000 for this purpose.

Washington, April 20.—Senate—The conference report on the Hawaiian civil government measure took up the greater time of the session. The Alaskan civil code bill was considered for a brief time, and Senator Forsker pronounced a eulogy on the late Lorenzo Danford, a representative from Ohio. Suitable resolutions were adopted.

House—The entire session was taken up in discussing the naval appropriation bill. But little progress was made.

Washington, April 21.—Senate—Resolutions were adopted calling upon the secretary of war for information as to the allowances made to army officers stationed in Cuba and Porto Rico and the sums expended in providing quarters, equipages and other conveniences for them. Consideration of the Quay case was resumed, and Mr. Perkins presented an argument favorable to Mr. Quay's claim to a seat in the senate under the governor's appointment.

House—The naval appropriation bill was passed. It provides for two battle ships, three armored cruisers and three protected cruisers. The $545 figure on armor was stricken out. Other bills passed were: Fixing the compensation of the United States commissioners in Chinese deportation cases; for a bridge over the Big Sandy river, Kentucky; for a bridge across the Tallahatchie river, Mississippi. Eulogies on the late Representative Zan B. Settle, of the Seventh Kentucky district, occupied the remainder of the session.

VESSELS ORDERED HOME.

The Occasion for Our Warships Lying Off the Panama Coast Said to No Longer Exist.

Washington, April 22.—The Philadelphia has reached Panama. She will be ordered home at once, as will also the Detroit, which has been lying at Chiriqui lagoon, on the gulf side of the isthmus. The reports received at the navy department are to the effect that the occasion for the presence of the warships no longer exists. The revolutionary troubles on the isthmus having subsided, perhaps in part owing to the unexpected appearance there of the American cruisers.

The Detroit will sail within a day or two for Portsmouth, N. H., where she is to be extensively repaired and put out of commission.

To Educate Orphan Children.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 22.—The will of the late Samuel Howard leaves practically his whole estate, valued at upwards of $500,000, in trust for the support and maintenance and education of orphan children. He had no near relatives here and in his life time expended large sums in the same direction.

Nicaraguan Canal Bill.

Washington, April 21.—Representative Hepburn, in charge of the Nicaragua canal bill, announces that a definite arrangement has been reached by which the bill will be considered by the house on May 1 and 2 and passed.

Every Industrial Plant Burned.

Wilmot, Wis., April 22.—A disastrous fire Saturday wiped out every industrial plant in the town. The only fire protection was a bucket brigade. The loss is estimated at $50,000, with practically no insurance.

All She Asked.

"And you say you would die for me, George?"

"Die for you? Yes, a thousand deaths."

"You are a noble man, George."

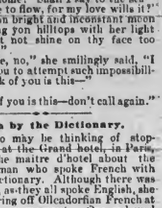
"My darling, you do not know me yet."

"Well, dear, I do not wish you to die for me, but I will tell you what you can do for me to show your affection."

"What is it? Shall I pluck the stars from the cerulean dome? Shall I say to the sea—'Ha! ha! cease to flow, for my love wills it?' Shall I tell you bright and inconstant moon that is glinting yon hilltops with her light that she must not shine on thy face too roughly?—ha!"

"No, George, no," she smilingly said, "I do not wish you to attempt such impossibilities. All I ask of you is this—"

"Yes?"



"All I ask of you is this—don't call again."

French by the Dictionary.

Nobody who may be thinking of stopping in peace at the Grand hotel, in Paris, should ask the maitre d'hotel about the American woman who spoke French with the aid of a dictionary. Although there was no need for it, as they all spoke English, she persisted in firing off Ollendorfian French at the waiters every moment. The sad-eyed knight of the apron came down one morning and asked for leave of absence and the maitre d'hotel himself went up to solve the mystery. After a violent tirade against the incivility of the garcon she declared that his French was so frayed out at the edges that he did not understand what "a bottle of embonpoint" was. And it took the manager 20 minutes to discover that she had intended to ask for stout.—Chicago Evening News.

A Mother's Tears.

"I Would Cry Every Time I Washed My Baby."

"When he was 3 months old, first festers and then large boils broke out on my baby's neck. The sores spread down his back until it became a mass of raw flesh. When I washed and powdered him I would cry, realizing what pain he was in. His pitiful wailing was heart-rending. I had about given up hope of saving him when I was urged to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla, all other treatment having failed. I washed the sores with Hood's Medicated Soap, applied Hood's Olive Ointment and gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla. The child seemed to get better every day, and very soon the change was quite noticeable. The discharge grew less, inflammation went down, the skin took on a healthy color, and the raw flesh began to scale over and a thin skin formed as the sores dropped off. Less than two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, aided by Hood's Medicated Soap and Hood's Olive Ointment, accomplished this wonderful cure. I cannot praise these medicines half enough." MRS. GUERINOT, 37 Myrtle St., Rochester, N. Y.

The above testimonial is very much condensed from Mrs. Guerinot's letter. As many mothers will be interested in reading the full letter, we will send it to anyone who sends request of us on a postal card. Mention this paper.

SEVERAL SKIRMISHES.

Filipinos Lost Nearly One Thousand Men in Killed and Wounded.

The American Loss Was Nine Killed and Sixteen Wounded—Two Sergeants and One Private Were Killed in Ambushes.

Manila, April 23.—Last week has been one of the bloodiest of the war since the first day's fighting around Manila. Authentic reports, mostly official, show a total of 378 Filipinos killed, 13 officers and 244 men captured and many more wounded. The number wounded is hardly guessable. Considering that the Filipinos entirely lack hospital facilities, a great majority of the wounded will die. Probably the week's work finished 1,000 insurgents. The Americans' loss was 9 killed and 16 wounded. Two sergeants and one private were killed in ambushes while escorting provision trains.

The insurgents have been aggressive in almost every province of Luzon. Gen. Pio del Pilar's band, numbering 300, which was out of sight for three months, the leader being reported killed, has reappeared in its old field about San Miguel. Pilar is supposed to be again in command. He gave the American garrison at San Miguel, consisting of three companies of the 35th infantry, with a Gatling, a three hours' fight during a night attack. The loss of the insurgents in this engagement is not included in the foregoing total, as they removed their dead and wounded, but presumably it was considerable.

Twenty Filipinos in the province of Batangas attacked Lieut. Wonde, who with eight men was scouting near San Jose. The lieutenant and five men were wounded and one man killed.

Sergt. Ledoux, of the 35th infantry, was badly wounded in an ambush near Balinag.

Lieut. Balch, of the 37th infantry, with 70 men, had a five hours' fight with 800 insurgents in the Nueva Caceras district. Twenty of the insurgents were killed.

Col. Smith, of the 17th infantry, who captured Gen. Montenegro and brought him to Manila, is in the isolation hospital suffering from smallpox, presumably caught from the Filipinos. Col. Smith's command captured 180 officers and men with Montenegro. The officers were brought to Manila. Montenegro, who was formerly one of the most dapper officers in the Filipino army, looks worn and haggard. He says he had led a terrible life for months, and he has offered to return to the north with Col. Smith to endeavor to persuade his former comrades of the uselessness of opposing the Americans.

Manila, April 22.—The sudden deaths of Filipinos and Chinamen in Quiapo market have led to an investigation, showing that 15 cases of the plague, 14 of which were fatal, have occurred within a week. The market is located in the center of the city. In black, rotten, wooden buildings the keepers of stalls live with their families huddled together in great filth. Some of the victims were stricken and died within an hour. There have been several deaths in other sections of the city recently, which have been traced to infection from the market. After all the market people had gathered together Saturday the health officer threw a guard around the buildings and will keep the inmates quarantined there for a fortnight. They will then burn the market. The total number of bubonic deaths are 213 Chinamen and 65 Filipinos.

The plague elsewhere has been suppressed. Not one infected person has been in the Chinese district for ten days past.

Chicago, Ill., April 22.—The reception committee of the Dewey celebration has received formal notice from President McKinley of his declination of the invitation to come to Chicago during the festivities in honor of the admiral of the navy. Thirty-Three Japanese Contract Laborers Who Arrived at San Francisco Will Be Sent Back.

San Francisco, April 21.—Thirty-three Japanese contract laborers who arrived here about two weeks ago on the Belgian King, must return to Japan on the next steamer of the Santa Fe line leaving this port. Their sentence of deportation imposed by Immigration Commissioner H. H. North has been confirmed in Washington, and this ruling is final. The examination of 214 Japanese immigrants who came in on the Nippon Maru has begun.

Washington, April 21.—Assistant Secretary Taylor, of the treasury department, has received a telegram from the immigration inspector at Port Townsend, Wash., in which he states that 1,000 Japanese immigrants were landed at that port and 2,300 are expected on the next steamer. In consequence of this sudden increase in the arrival of Orientals, he is unable to make the necessary examinations unaided, and asks for authority to employ additional help. Mr. Taylor wired him authority to employ three emergency assistants.

DIVINE HEALER'S MAIL SEIZED

Twelve Sacks Addressed to Francis Truth at Boston Will Be Opened By the Postal Authorities.

Boston, April 21.—Twelve sacks of mail addressed to Francis Truth, the divine healer, who was arrested recently charged with fraud, have been impounded by the United States government under the usual "fraud order." Many of the thousands of letters contained in the 12 sacks carry money for "absent treatment." Truth's usual charge was $5 for absent treatment, so that necessarily the amount of money contained in the letters is very large.

The 12 sacks of mail will be opened by the postal authorities. The letters which bear names and addresses on the envelopes will be returned to the writers. The other letters will be sent to the "dead letter" office at Washington to be opened. What money is contained in these letters will be returned with the letters to the writers.

PENSION LEGISLATION.

The Grand Army Bill Will Be Favorably Reported to the House Early Next Week.

Washington, April 21.—After extended conference the house committee on invalid pensions, of which Representative Sulloway, of New Hampshire, is chairman, finally determined to report to the house senate bill 1477, which has attracted widespread attention in Grand Army circles and is known as "the Grand Army bill."

The final draft of the bill aggregates the disabilities under which application may be made for pension under the act of June 27, 1890. The other radical change in existing law is the changing of the rate of income of a soldier's widow from the present rate of $96 per year to an "actual net income of $250 per year."

NEW DEPARTURE.

Chicago is to Have a Municipal Telephone System—It Will Be a Rival of the Older Companies.

Chicago, April 21.—Chicago is to have a municipal telephone system—an innovation in America. Its immediate use is to be confined to the police and fire departments, but its projectors say that eventually it will serve as the nucleus of a great metropolitan system that is expected to become a rival to the old and new telephone companies. Rates sufficiently low to make the telephone a cheap convenience are predicted by those who see a great future in the municipal plant.

How Trouble Can Be Averted.

St. Petersburg, April 21.—In discussing American-Turkish affairs, the Novoe Vremya says: "The porte could easily avoid undesirable repercussions by asking for the friendly mediation of neighboring European states. In the present international conoroversy friendly intervention is possible upon the basis of The Hague convention, and such intervention would both serve the cause of peace and save Turkey from troublesome complications."

Pacific Cable Differences.

Washington, April 21.—The house committee on commerce substituted the Sherman bill for the construction of a Pacific cable in place of the bill recently passed by the senate. The Sherman bill had been previously reported to the house, but this action puts it in the form of a substitute to the senate measure. It differs from the senate bill in providing construction by private contract under government supervision, while the senate bill provides for government construction and operation.

NOTES FROM WASHINGTON

What Is Going On in the Political Arena of the Nation's Capital.

DEMOCRATS ON ALERT FOR THE PEOPLE

Condition of Affairs in the Philippines—House Democrats Express Sympathy for the Boers—McKinley's Worries and Other Matters of Interest.

The war department is considerably worried because news comes from Luzon that more troops are needed in the Philippines. Gen. Young, commanding North Luzon, and Gen. Bell, commanding southern Luzon, are making strong appeals for reenforcements. They declare that their troops are exhausted by constant fighting, the present force is inadequate to garrison the towns and the insurgents are cropping up all over Luzon and fighting with great vigor and effectiveness.

It will be remembered that Gen. Otis claimed at the beginning of the trouble that he could subdue the "insurrection" with 30,000 troops. Last fall he was given more than 60,000, and yet the situation is practically the same as it was a year ago—except that hundreds of American soldiers have sacrificed their lives and hundreds of others have lost their health in the trying climate of the Philippines.

Gen. Otis, on the eve of his return from the islands, admits that "a large body of troops must be kept in the islands indefinitely." If Luzon gives so much trouble is may be imagined that it will take a mighty army to subdue the rest of the Philippines.

The news of the massacre of 11 Filipino prisoners by American soldiers also comes as one of the unpleasant things about the administration's "policy" which might bear investigation. There have been hints from the war department for some time that it was considering the advisability of labeling the Filipinos "bandits" and shooting them down wherever found. While this report of a massacre comes from unofficial sources, it causes an unpleasant suspicion that things are happening in the islands which need investigating.

This unpleasant news comes from the Philippines just when the Spooner bill is before the senate, providing that absolute control of the Philippines be vested in the administration until congress sees fit to take action in the matter.

It is probable that the republican majority will push the bill through both houses. The democratic minority can only register its protest and leave the country to decide whether it desires to perpetuate militarism and imperialism in the Philippines. The democratic view is that the islands could have been pacified long ago if the administration had been willing to grant them self-government and protection from outside interference. Senator Jones, of Arkansas, remarked recently on this point: "The Filipinos might not evolve a government as good as ours, but they would manage one that would be sufficient for their own needs and their own state of civilization, and that is all that is necessary."

The administration policy of subjugation has not been in any degree successful, and yet the country is to be asked to send more troops and supply money indefinitely for this war of conquest.

Sympathy for Boers.

The house democrats are ready to express their sympathy for the Boers. Representative Richardson, the house democratic leader, has introduced a resolution declaring that the house "views with deep interest the heroic struggle of the republics of South Africa to maintain their independence and hereby tenders them our most profound sympathy in their unequal but gallant struggle."

Judging from the number of republican congressmen who attended the mass meeting in Washington recently at which Webster Davis told his experiences in South Africa, there are republican members who do feel sympathy for the unequal struggle that is going on in South Africa."

Webster Davis' Views.

The Webster Davis Boer mass meeting was one of the most remarkable public meetings ever held in Washington. The Grand opera house, accommodating 4,000 people, was packed to the doors long before the time appointed for the meeting. Hundreds were turned away unable to gain admission.

Mr. Davis had just resigned as assistant secretary of the interior in order to be free to tell what he had seen and heard among the Boers.

He struck the keynote of the whole trouble when he said: "If gold had not been discovered in the Transvaal the British would not be fighting to conquer the Boers to-day."

Mr. Davis gave graphic tales of the heroism and courage and uprightness of the Boers and contrasted with those qualities the brutality and blundering of the British.

All shades of political opinion were represented at this mass meeting, but there seemed to be no division of sentiment when it came to expressing approval of the courage and patriotism of the Boers. Mr. Davis carefully refrained from making any direct criticism of the administration's pro-British attitude, but his eloquent plea for American sympathy for the Boers was even more forcible than a direct arraignment of the administration.

The republicans are now hurrying to get through all necessary legislation and force an adjournment as early as June 1. President McKinley has all sorts of worries on hand—the greatest one being the doubt of his renomination, and he has privately assured some of his followers that he would be glad to have congress off his hands as soon as possible.

Dewey's Candidacy.

Admiral Dewey's announcement of his presidential aspirations has ceased to interest Washington. Its only effect on the democrats was to emphasize their loyalty to Bryan. The administration followers were worried enough to indulge in sneering criticism of the brave admiral. Dewey's naive announcement of his Cleveland brand of "democracy," coupled with his official report as Philippine commissioner, indorsing imperialism, and his natural leaning toward militarism make it difficult to line him up where even an independent nomination would develop any strength. Friends of the admiral regret that his ignorance of matters political should have fired him with an ambition which has no prospect of satisfaction.

For the Workingmen.

Resolutions are pouring in on congress from the workingmen all over the country asking the passage of the Allen and Lentz resolutions for the withdrawal of the United States troops from the Coeur D'Alene district. The investigation of the mining troubles in Idaho is not finished in the house military committee, but the wage workers of the country protest against the continued use of the military in that district for the express purpose of terrorizing workmen into acceptance of the "permit" system, which is in violation of the statute law of Idaho and the constitutional rights of citizenship.

—ADOLPH PATTERSON.

PROTEST OF PROCTOR.

The Porto Rico Outrage as Viewed by a Rock-Ribbed Republican.

I submit, in parallel columns, the statement of the purpose of the measure taxing the colonies and the disposition of the proceeds, and that of our bills in regard to Porto Rico. The statement of the act of King George is an extract from Lord John Russell's "Life of Fox:"

"The bill imposing duties on certain kinds of merchandise when imported into the colonies required on merchandise which the payment of such duties to be made in specie from this country gold and silver, and that the amount of all be placed at the disposal of the present parliament for defraying the future charges of protecting, defraying and securing the colonies."—Russell's Life of Fox, Volume 1, Page 45.	"Under our measures Porto Rico is to be taxed, and the islands pay in both ways they ship to or receive from this country, and pay both ways the duties collected in Porto Rico, for the aid and relief of the people of Porto Rico, and for public education, public works and other governmental and public purposes therein, until otherwise provided by law."

Mark the resemblance in these two propositions, that the duties in each case, both past and future, are to be set aside for the benefit of the country taxed. One difference is that, while our measure taxes merchandise going to and coming from Porto Rico, the British bill taxed only a limited number of articles coming into this country, did not tax our exports, and this difference is in favor of King George.

But there is another vast difference in the two cases—King George and his ministry undertook to impose a tax upon English people—people of their own blood and race, who knew their rights and dared maintain them; who knew that the hearts of the English people were with them. We impose these taxes upon a people unused to assert their rights in the past, and powerless to maintain them if they had; upon a people who welcomed our army when it landed on their island as their friends, who had come to free them from the misrule of Spain, and who have conducted themselves in the most peaceable manner; upon a people to whom we had promised to bring "the immunities and blessings of the liberal institutions of our government," and to whom we had said, by the months of our highest officials, that to establish free trade was "our plain duty," demanded by "the highest considerations of justice and good faith."—Senator Redfield Proctor, of Vermont, in His Speech of March 30.

——There are just two ways to get rid of the surplus that is so rapidly piling up in the national treasury. One is by repealing some of the war taxes. The other is by authorizing the deepening of the sacks of the campaign contributors that now have access to the treasury and by licensing a few more contributors and a few more extra large sacks. Mr. McKinley's great heart beats warmly for the first plan. It is, therefore, not unlikely that his perverse hand will push on the second plan.—N. Y. World.

——Imperialism is very inspiring in blowing horns and beating drums, but when it comes to setting down the cost in dollars and cents—every penny drained from the pockets of the people—it naturally weakens our jingo enthusiasm. The appropriations for next year by our congress amounts to between eight and nine dollars per capita, about one-half of which goes to pay for glory and imperialism in meeting the expenses of our military establishment.—Pittsburgh Post.

——In his annual message to congress in December last President McKinley said of Hawaii: "The people of these islands are entitled to the benefits and privileges of our constitution." If Hawaii, why not Porto Rico? How can this republic make flesh of one of its possessions and fowl of another?—N. Y. World.

STATE NEWS ITEMS.

COLSON NOT GUILTY.

The Slayer of Scott and Demaree Walks Forth From the Court Room at Frankfort as a Free Man.

Frankfort, Ky., April 23.—David G. Colson, ex-congressman and colonel of the 4th regiment, Kentucky volunteer infantry, in the Spanish war, and on trial for four days past charged with the murder of Scott and Demaree, in the Capitol notel, was acquitted Saturday evening. The verdict was returned by the jury at 6:27, after being out only seventeen minutes. The verdict had been generally anticipated till the last minute of the trial of the case. Commonwealth Attorney Franklin closed the argument for the prosecution with a speech which was pronounced the supreme effort of his life, and its effect on the jury occasioned fear among Col. Colson's friends till the verdict was returned. When the jury filed into the courtroom a few minutes after it had retired, it was at once known a verdict had been reached and an acquittal was looked for. There was no demonstration, however, until Special Judge Herndon, who had been designated by Judge Cantrill to receive the verdict, said:

"Gentlemen of the jury, have you made a verdict?"

"We have," responded one of the jurymen, at the same time handing a slip of paper to Sheriff Sutes.

Circuit Clerk Ford had not finished reading the verdict, which read: "We, the jury, find the defendant not guilty," till the crowd in the courtroom, catching the import of it, broke into wild cheers.

KENTUCKIAN'S GOOD LUCK.

Lieut. Herbert Whipple, of Louisville, Found a Pearl in an Oyster Worth Two Thousand Dollars.

Louisville, Ky., April 22.—It is not often that a visitor from the provinces finds a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel profitable, but Lieut. Herbert Whipple, of Louisville, and the United States army, is some $2,000 better off because he dined at metropolis' chief hostelry.

Lieut. Whipple is a member of the 7th United States cavalry.

Lieut. Whipple ordered baked oysters. The first one he attacked was an ordinary looking roasted bivalve. He was hungry and bit hard. Then he said "Ouch!" followed by something that sounded like a cuss word. He pulled out a dark, hard looking substance, very large, and explained that he had lost a tooth trying to masticate it. It proved to be a pearl, and Tiffany has notified Mr. Whipple it is worth $2,000.

Ex-Mayor Shot a Woman.

Upon entering the room he says he was pounced upon by the woman and a Negro man, who had secreted himself behind the door. During the scuffle Stillwell drew his revolver and discharged it twice. Both bullets perforated the woman's abdomen and she fell to the floor fatally wounded. Stillwell then surrendered himself and claims self-defense. The woman is dying.

Winchester, Ky., April 23.—Matt Young, who was arrested a short time ago by Sheriff Henry Braughton, of Bell county, and put in jail at Pineville on the charge of breaking into a store at Bird, suddenly became violently insane and was ordered to the asylum at Lexington. The sheriff and his deputy, J. J. Durham, started to Lexington with the prisoner.

While changing cars at Winchester Young escaped, and, though doubly handcuffed, outran his pursuers, scaling fences and crossing lots with the agility and speed of a grayhound. Later he was found about six miles from town and retaken. He had in some manner procured a file, and when discovered was busy trying to remove his shackles.

An unusually large lot of sheep, some 500 head. Very few sold at 4¼ cents. For one hundred head 4¼ cents was offered. The demand for mules was limited, owing to high prices. From $100 to $150 per head was demanded.—Lexington Gazette.

Birds do an immense amount of drudgery for man, if they do now and then reward themselves by a dainty tidbit of ripening fruit. A pair of robins have been watched while they carried a thousand earthworms to their brood. Woodpeckers destroy eggs and larvae which would develop millions of destructive creatures in forests and orchards; and one of the most inevitable foes of the canker worm is the beautiful oriole, were it but allowed to live and hang its swinging cradle to the elm. For every wing of black and orange on a young girl's hat, an apple tree is stripped of leaves and young fruit, or an elm is denuded of its graceful foliage by the canker worm.—Farm Journal.

We learn that in some portions of this State there is a good deal of apathy in the ranks of breeders., many of them who are owners of good mares being indifferent as to whether they breed them or not. This illustrates the force of habit as well as a little want of foresight. For many years trotting horses were so low that a good many gentlemen who at one time were constant breeders quit the business in sheer disgust at the low prices of the animals they raised. Some of these gentlemen seem to have failed to realize the change in conditions that has been taking place, and we learn that there are those among them even now who propose to breed good trotting-bred mares to jacks. Some of them will do so even though they are offered more than the outside value of a mule colt for their use to be bred to horses. It may take a year or two to convince some people that things are not precisely as they were in 1895 or 1896, but they will learn it after a while. When they have practically lost two or three seasons they will awake to the fact that there has been somewhat of a change, and that horses are now really worth money. In the meantime their more wide awake neighbors will have been realizing the good prices they have lost. Such opportunities as are now presented for successful and profitable trotting horse breeding are not presented more than once or twice in a lifetime. Stallion services are at a moderate price; mares, though higher than heretofore, are still considerably below their real value; provender for horses is not high, and there is an assured market for every hoof that can possibly be raised. What more does a breeder want? The conditions seem to have been made exactly to suit him. Then there is no possible chance for a glut in the market. The slow coaches will be coming along after a while, and there will be heard lamentations for opportunities lost because people were too blind to see what was staring them in the face at every turn.—Ky. Stock Farm.

MR. CLARK, of Montana, can not use money as successfully in politics as a certain man who lives in Ohio. To be successful with money in a campaign it is as necessary to know how to handle it as it is to have plenty of it.

ALEXANDRIA, IND., April 21, 1900.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

In order to comply with a promise made to relatives and friends in Union and vicinity, I write them through the RECORDER some items about Indiana. We arrived here all right the 17th inst., but found people living in the house. Alexandria is the greatest town I ever saw for gas and hustle. They told us we were going to leave Union, but it is just to the contrary, for we are in Union head over heels. It is union labor, union bread, union clothing—in fact everything is in union and the union is in everything.

Every person in this country either draws a salary or a pension. Soldiers Homes and Chicago beef are very much in evidence along with Macinaw trout and Lake Salmon. The grass is green in the country and blue-grass milk sells at 5c per qt. They have lovely school houses and churches. Went to church Sunday morning and the people seemed anxious to be kind and showed us every courtesy. Of course this is not Union and Roy, and Dick and Price and Bob and other Union boys are not here, but we shall have to look up "others" until they come out. The Sunday law is enforced so strictly that nothing can be bought in town only milk and a very few absolute necessities. I have been around to see the pumps pump crude oil to Chicago and gas piped to Indianapolis. I have seen where they make wool out of limestone and when they bale it up you can't tell it from sheep's wool by looking at it. Tell grandma that a woman next door to us has a hen and 15 chickens tied by the leg and to a tree. Papa and I planted some onions, lettuce and radishes and the onions are growing nicely. Tell Mr. Voshell they have a pipe out here that holds 235,000 gallons that would make him a long smoke if filled with "long green." Papa will return to Kentucky in a few days to work this summer.

Parson & Co., druggists of this place, to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. They recommended it so highly that I bought a bottle. I was soon relieved of all pain. I have since recommended this liniment to many of my friends, who agree with me that it is the best remedy for muscular rheumatism in the market." For sale by W. F. A Woman Only Knows what suffering from failing of the womb, whites, painful or irregular menses, or any disease of the distinctly feminine organs is. A man may sympathize or pity but he can not know the agonies she goes through—the terrible suffering, so patiently borne, which robs her of beauty, hope and happiness. Yet this suffering really is needless.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui
will banish it. This medicine cures all "female diseases" quickly and permanently. It does away with humiliating physical examinations. The treatment may be taken at home. There is not continual expense and trouble. The sufferer is cured and stays cured.
Wine of Cardui is becoming the leading remedy for all troubles of this class. It costs but $1 from any druggist.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MAY 2, 1900. NO. 28

"PLAIN DUTY"—a tariff tax of 15 per cent.

ONE Senator and one Representative, Democratic members of the last General Assembly, died last week.

CLARK paid too much for his election to the United States Senate, hence he was not allowed to take his seat.

TEXAS is having a serious time with floods this spring. Many lives have been lost and a great deal of property destroyed.

THE prison chair shops at Frankfort, owned by the State, were destroyed by fire last Saturday night. Loss, $75,000; insurance, $30,000.

SINCE the Republicans have raised so much party hadese in Kenton county, the Democratic row that was on in the same territory no longer attracts attention.

HOTTER and hotter grows the Republican row in Kenton county, and a treaty of peace signed by those supposed to have authority to do such things, was ignored by the executive committee by a vote of 20 to 11.

THERE is no way known to politicians whereby McKinley and Bryan can be kept out of the nomination for the first place on their respective tickets. The only nominations not now settled are those for Vice-President.

THE Indiana Republican State convention was a harmonious affair, and the national administration got a ringing indorsement, notwithstanding the vigorous kick the Hoosier Republicans made against the President's Porto Rican policy.

GEO. DENNY, of Lexington, has another case of Congressional aspiration, but if the Republicans in his district can find a Bill Owens or a Bill Breckinridge, who will accept a position under the log cabin, he will be compelled to again stand aside.

THE Covington lawmakers passed an ordinance requiring everybody to be vaccinated, and thereby came very near precipitating a riot. At a mass meeting of citizens held, one night last week, the action of the city legislators was denounced and resolutions were adopted declaring that there is no danger of small pox becoming epidemic in Covington. Between the two political rows and the small pox excitement they are having a hot time in the old town.

THE Republican Congressional convention held in Louisville, Saturday, nominated H. S. Irwin for Congress, and selected Postmaster Baker and Internal Revenue Collector Sapp as delegates to the national convention at Philadelphia. Geo. Weissinger Smith, a so called Brown Democrat, was named as Republican elector in that district. The convention pledged its 291 votes to Albert S. White, colored, for delegate from the State-at-large to the Philadelphia convention.

The Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce authorized a favorable report upon Senator Chandler's bill concerning the giving of railroad passes. It prohibits the issuing of free passes, except as authorized by the existing law, and classifies such conduct as "unjust discrimination," making corporations as well as individuals liable for an infraction of the law. It also requires corporations granting passes to keep a record of them, which shall be open to the inspection of stockholders.

THE Courier-Journal says, "we are for Bryan. We are for him in dead earnest, and are going to do our best to elect him," and it adds, "with very few exceptions the gold Democrats are going to support the regular ticket of their party, and will be just as much in favor of Mr. Bryan in 1900 as they were against him in 1896." If he believes these declarations a certain Kentucky politician, who, at one time had fully developed Vice-Presidential aspirations, will decline the nomination should the party be guilty of the mistake of tendering it to him.

THIS fall for the fifth time in history, the occupant of the White House will be opposed for re-election by the candidate whom he defeated four years before. It is significant that on each of the four former occasions, the man in the White House has been defeated.

THE combined wealth of the trusts in this country exceeds ten billions of dollars. Mr. Hanna will experience no trouble in raising campaign funds so long as the administration remains on good terms with this aggregation of wealth, and that it is determined to do regardless of the hundreds of denunciations of trusts by its party platforms.

POWERS, Culton, Youtsey, Davis, Whitaker and Combs were arraigned in the Franklin Circuit Court, Monday, on motions for bail and change of venue, the latter question being taken up, the hearing of which will probably require the most of this week. Both sides presented affidavits bearing on the question, and a large number of witnesses were summoned on each side.

IF the committee on resolutions in the Louisville Republican Congressional convention really intended to indorse W. S. Taylor, their failure so to do in the resolutions as originally presented to the convention was an awfully bad break. But when everything is considered their action can be considered in no light other than that of an intentional slight.

BY a majority of one, the Senate decided to adhere to precedents and exclude Mr. Quay from a seat in that body. While all the older Democratic Senators adhered to their position in the Corbett case, about a dozen Republicans deliberately reversed themselves, partly out of liking for Quay personally and partly because they feared his vengeance if they voted against him.

THE Treasury Department has decided that Porto Rico is not a foreign country and that drawback of duties cannot be allowed on articles sent there. In the same decision, it holds that drawback will be allowed on exports to Cuba and the Philippines. This is certainly bewildering. What is the difference in status between Porto Rico and the Philippines? Both were acquired under the identical treaty provisions.

Washington is struggling to get rid of a school superintendant whose methods have been shown, after a long and careful practical test, to be worse than useless, but he happens to be from Illinois, and both the Senators and Representatives from that state have united in an effort to keep his job far him, despite the fact that the Washington schools are far behind others of the same grade in other parts of the country.

EX-MAYOR TODD, of Louisville speaking of the recent Republican Congressional convention in that city is quoted as saying: "I regret very much, indeed, that the harmonizing committee appointed by the State Central Committee should have been hypnotized by the Custom-House officials, and have ignored the masses of the Republican voters in this district by not allowing a free ballot and a fair count." This is a serious charge for a Republican to make against his party, but Todd has had considerable election experience and is fully prepared to speak as to the practices of those in his party who are in control in Louisville.

On county court day last September Hon. German Stout stood upon a platform in the court house in Versailles and presented Hon. Wm. Goebel to an audience that taxed the capacity of the building. Both of these gentlemen seemed strong and vigorous that day and showed no signs that they were marked for so soon a taking off. A month later Hon. Evan E. Settle addressed as large an audience in the same room. All of these gentlemen were brave, loyal and fearless, and seemed just at the prime of their days of usefulness. To-day but a few months later the grave is closed over the remains of all three—solemn reminders of how uncertain is life, and how sure death.—Midway Clipper.

THERE has been received at Washington, from the American Chamber of Commerce at Manilla, an appeal to Congress, from which the following is an extract:

"We, unhesitatingly, declare that American trade in the Philippines is almost impossible under the present regime, and that it will be utterly destroyed unless immediate relief is had. Many of the laws found too harsh for practical application and winked at by the Spanish authorities are being enforced under American rule with all the rigor of military exaction, thus stifling the incentive to business by consuming the results of industry and economy. Spain ruled the colonies of the Philippines for the evident advantage of the mother country, and with little seeming regard for the inhabitants here. We earnestly request that your honorable body enact such laws as shall cause the burden of taxation to fall equally upon all within the sovereign power of the United States.

"The Internal Revenue Department is but a pawnshop where men put up their salaries and business profits for the privilege of laboring and using their capital—an importing house of the first-class paying upward of $100 a month license—and we trust your honorable body will cause the enactment of such laws as will relieve the people of the Philippine Islands from a condition of taxation and oppression which stripped these islands of prosperity, goaded the natives to insurrection, and would put to shame the gentleman that took an obligation from the merchant of Venice, and which dignifies the stamp act of 1765, rendering it a compliment to the taxpayer and just and righteous in principle.

"While the cost of living has trebled within the jurisdiction of the United States, when rice, the staple food product of the islands is almost unobtainable by the people, we are sustaining a tax upon flour of 60 per cent. so that a barrel of flour purchasable in the United States at less than $3 in gold must be sold for $12 Mexican in Manila."

Judge Cantrill gave Whitaker, Combs and Youtsey a change of venue, yesterday afternoon, but did not indicate to what county in his district he would send them. The Judge said he believed the accused could get fair trials in Franklin county, but with an armed mob assembled upon the State House square he would not undertake to try a sheep-killing dog in that community. The attorneys for the defendants asked the court to send the cases to Bourbon county, but the Commonwealth objected.

IF reports from Cuba are correct the American officeholders on the island have established a rake-off system—that is besides the salaries for which they agreed with the United States to perform the duties or the offices they hold they are approriating Cuban funds to their own use, calling it supplementing salaries, when it is nothing but a clear case of theft perpetrated in daylight because of the power of the guilty parties and their backing.

THE Covington legislature met the other night and by unanimous vote repealed the compulsory vaccination law it had passed only a few meetings before, and which was about to create a war equal to that being waged in the Philippines, if the reports from the islands via of Otis are reliable.

THE Hambrick faction of the Republican party in Louisville, will meet to-morrow night to take preliminary action looking to the nomination of a candidate for Congress. A big Republican fight is on again in Louisville.

THE Senate has refused to adopt a resolution expressive of sympathy for the Boers. The vote stood 29 against to 20 for the resolution. Neither of Kentucky's Senators voted.

GOV. PINGREE, of Michigan, says the hope of the people this year is in the success of the Democratic party. Pingree is a Republican.

THE Kentucky election muddle has been submitted to the U. S. Supreme Court, which has adjourned until the 14th inst.

I. O. O. F. CELEBRATION.

The weather, last Thursday, was all the Bellevue Odd-Fellows could have desired, and the little town presented a very lively appearance at an early hour that morning as the citizens began to give the finishing touches to the elaborate arrangements made for the entertainment of a large crowd of visitors that day, it being the 81st anniversary of Odd-Fellowship in this country, and which the local lodge proposed celebrating in an appropriate manner.

The belief that a large crowd would be on hand was verified at an early hour by the arrival of persons from distant parts of the county, and from Rising Sun, Aurora and Lawrenceburg, and by 10 o'clock a crowd of 600 or 700 people had assembled in and about the hall, ready to participate in the celebration.

Promptly at the appointed hour a procession composed of nearly 200 Odd-Fellows, headed by the Patriot band, left the hall and passed over the principal streets of the town, returning to the hall where it broke ranks, after which T. B. Mathews, of Morning Star Lodge, delivered the address of welcome and introduced to those of the fraternity present, Grand Master Hess, and announced the remainder of the program for the day, inviting all to the hall up stairs to witness the public initiation to be given by Harmony Lodge. Everybody seemed anxious to witness the public exhibition of goat-riding, and soon had the commodious hall crowded to its utmost capacity, while a large number of people were unable to gain admission to the hall. This feature of the program consumed nearly two hours, and appeared to be very much enjoyed by those who were so fortunate as to get into the hall.

At the conclusion of the public initiation the good cooks of Bellevue and vicinity were very much in evidence, and in a short time an abundant and elegant dinner was spread and all invited to partake. This was one of the features of the day, and those who have had a long and varied experience at basket dinners testified they never saw anything to equal the quantity of provision supplied for a like occasion.

Afternoon Grand Master Hess, T. B. Mathews and D. E. Castleman each delivered an address to an audience that packed the Christian church. These addresses were given the best attention and were most favorably commented on by persons not members of the order as well as by the members.

The exercises at the church concluded the oratorical proceedings for the day and the crowd began to disperse by no means all leaving though, as there were about 150 Odd Fellows remained to attend the regular meeting of the lodge at night, and witness work in the second and third degrees.

For supper those who remained were treated to an abundance of nicely fried fish, bread and good coffee, and to these articles of food ample justice was done, about 150 pounds of fish being consumed.

The degree work by the lodge at night was of a high order, seldom equaled and never excelled by a country lodge, and the numerous brothers who witnessed it were not only delighted but considerably edified for the forcible exemplication. At the conclusion of the work several of the members were called upon and responded in neat speeches. When the lodge closed that night it marked the conclusion of a most profitable day for Odd-Fellowship, although the dedication of the splendid hall had been deferred to the future in order that other parts of the program might not be neglected. The eminent success of everything undertaken for the entertainment of the visitors marked the day as one that will occupy a prominent position in the history of Bellevue, and will ever be a testimonial to the hospitality of the good people of that vicinity.

NOTES.

It was a magnificent dinner.

It was another of Bellevue's big days.

Harry Blyth was in lemon pie up to his eyes at noon.

The day's exercises will redound to the interest of the local lodge.

Alline Lodge I. O. O. F. is the pride of Bellevue, and well it may be.

Of the six lodges in the county Walton was the only one not represented.

Comodore Moody was on hand early to assist in making people welcome.

Alline Lodge is not three years old and has a membership of 54, all good men.

The band was from Patriot, Indiana. It did not wear its instruments out.

Alline Lodge is doing good work, and the country around Bellevue appreciates it.

E. O. Rouse, of Florence, is not only a jolly good fellow, but is an expert eater of fish.

The Petersburg lodge chartered the Pauline for the [illegible]. She made her last trip up about 11 p. m.

Lewis LeFever photographed the crowd while it was feasting on the good things provided for the day.

The Bellevue brethren have as comfortable and commodious a home as any lodge ought to desire.

Everybody in the Bellevue country seems to be interested in Odd-Fellowship. The lodge is working nicely.

The night session developed the fact that there were several interesting speakers among the brethren present.

Seven hundred people make a large assemblage for a celebration at a small river town at one side of the county.

There were a great many handsome young ladies present, and the young men were making the day pleasant for them.

Had it not been such a fine day for farm work Bellevue would have had a crowd of 1,500 people on her streets Thursday.

Revs. Hill and Johnson and Past Grand Master John S. Gaunt, who had been invited to deliver addresses, failed to put an appearance.

Each and every member of Alline Lodge kept his shoulder to the wheel all day, and every necessity of the visitors was looked after.

Chas. Kelly, with his violin and Gideon Kite at the organ, furnished some excellent music while the crowd devoured fish at supper time.

The strength of the floor for the second story was throughly tested during the public initiation. The hall was literly packed with people.

The day's entertainment was inaugurated by a grand chariot ride. W. W. Grant held the ribbons over the span of goats that drew the chariot.

About 150 pounds of splendidly cooked fish, with good coffee and bread were served for supper, and the quantity some put away was alarming.

Grand Master Hess was sent to Erlanger in time to catch a train to take him to the city. He had an engagement to meet at Newport that night.

A silk quilt was sold at auction, the proceeds to go for the benefit of the lodge. It was bought by Caddie Maurer for $5, much less than it was worth.

"Dick" McWethy was acting as advertising agent for a Petersburg dramatic troup. He was accompanied by J. W. Berkshire, the troup's financial man.

Abe Epstine, Aurora's veteran Odd-Fellow, did not put in his appearance until afternoon, but he made up for lost time after he got on the ground.

The only drawback during the day was the inability on the part of each visitor to accept the numerous invitiations of "come around and eat with me."

"I never saw such a quantity of excellent eatables on a like occasion," was the remark that came from every direction when the dinner was being discussed.

Thursday's celebration at Bellevue will never be forgotten by those who were present. Every feature of the entertainment was all that could have been desired.

Hon. Benjamin Stephens, one of the oldest members of the order in the county, is an enthusiastic Odd-Fellow, and is always on hand to help push along a good thing like that of last Thursday. He is well up in all the secret work, and never fails to respond with a good speech when called upon.

Uncle Frank Smith, of Union, 35 years a member of Venus Lodge at Florence, saw the opening and the closing of the day's exercises. He was delighted with the public program and at night no one in the vast crowd enjoyed the degree work more than he. He did not begrudge the 40 miles ride the day's pleasure cost him.

Among the members who came early and stayed late, was S. G. Botts, of Petersburg, who was made an Odd-Fellow February 23, 1853, his being the first name enrolled on the membership book of Morning Star Lodge, which was instituted on above date in Petersburg. He has been in good standing ever since he was initiated, and is as zealous in the cause of the order now as he was in his younger days.

Michael Clore, who was born and raised in the Bellevue neighborhood, and knew that town when composed of only a few houses, was one of the aged men who took in the celebration. At one time he owned a greater portion of the land now occupied by the town, and sold it off in lots several years ago when the town took a boom.

Hon. James A. Wilson, of Rabbit Hash, was among those present and met a large number of his friends. Mr. Wilson's sight has failed until it is difficult for him to distinguish persons. He was apparently, in good health and excellent spirits. He will be 87 years old in November. He came here from Virginia at an early day.

FROM OWEN COUNTY.

About twelve good stout able bodied men with a full knowledge of the art of "flaying" could find no better field to work in than this. To whip and abuse one's wife has become an every day affair, but not until recently has the cross cut saw come into use. The wife beater of cross cut saw fame is now in the Owenton jail. If reports be correct his wife is unable to walk because of the irate husband's wrath, he having almost severed her limb from her body with a cross cut saw. To h—l with such a fiend.

John Spangler, who lives near Popular Grove, this county, has been very sick for some time, and not until one day last week was it known what was the real cause of his illness. He was taken with a severe spell of vomiting and was successful in throwing up a piece of red flannel which had been lodged in his stomach for several weeks. The piece of flannel measured about two and one-half inches long and about one inch wide. Mr. Spangler has been improving rapidly since he rid himself of what would soon have caused his death.

There are in Germany 26,689 physicians for a total population of 52,251,917, making an average of one doctor for every 1,957 inhabitants. Since 1886 the medical profession has increased by 63 per cent., while the increase in population during the same period has only been a trifle over 11 per cent.

Among curious articles of commerce are toothpicks made of walrus whiskers, vast quantities of which are shipped from Alaska to Europe. Those who ship them pull them out one by one, with special tweezers. They are used principally by the wealthier classes in China and Russia, and are also beginning to come into favor in the most noted clubs in London.

Six months ago the motor car as applied for business purposes in London was not being very generally adopted, but since the outbreak of hostilities in South Africa, the streets have become comparatively thronged with "auto-vans." The horses of the omnibus companies which have been commandered by the government have had to be replaced. The motor vehicles are supplying the want.

When the duke of Norfolk reaches South Africa there will be four holders of the highest rank in the peerage taking part in the operations against the enemy. The postmaster general, who, of course, is the premier duke of England, is also the oldest of the four, being 52; the duke of Marlborough is 29; his cousin, the duke of Roxburghe, is 24, and the duke of Westminster is the youngest of the ducal quartet, having just come of age.

Last summer the flannel suit became for the first time in New York an article for general city wear. It had previously been confined to country use, but English tailors sending over these garments in dark colors, made them popular in town. In all probability many more of them will be seen this summer. They have the advantage of being somewhat cheaper than serge or the cloths customarily used, and they possess the merit of lightness.

During the eight years ending June 30, 1899, the net increase of railroad mileage in Texas, exclusive of yard tracks and sidings, was 1,017.92 miles, an average of about 151 miles per year, or half a mile per day. The period referred to represents the time during which the railroad commission has been in operation. From present indications the average bids fair to be fully maintained and even increased in the future.

M. Pallex, the French sculptor, has finished a model in wax of the sword to be presented by M. Rochefort and the readers of the Intransigeant, to Gen. Crosje. The cost of the weapon, which is to be in solid gold, will be $3,000. The hilt represents a Boer soldier strangling a leopard, which carries on its head, in lieu of a crown, a shield with the British arms. On the hilt is the vierkleur. This is to be in colored enamel.

"Turkey is a very interesting mission," says Hon. Oscar S. Straus, minister to Turkey. "Turkey is the only country, excepting China, where the American minister has to look after the extra-territorial rights of Americans. In this capacity the minister has judicial powers. There are not very many Americans who get into trouble, but constantly arising are questions which involve their rights and have to be settled by the minister. The missionaries furnish considerable of this class of business."

To gain control of all the automobile manufacturing and transportation companies, Philadelphia and other capitalists have organized the Anglo-American Rapid Vehicle Co., and steps are now being taken to amalgamate the various concerns in a gigantic trust. W. W. Gibbs, president of the Pennsylvania Electric Vehicle Co., is president of the Anglo-American Co. The capital stock is $75,000,000, all of which is common stock, divided into 750,000 shares of the par value of $100 each.

The late Senator Sawyer seldom wrote a letter. He was sensitive about his inability to spell, and dictated nearly everything to a stenographer. But he had a marvelous eye and memory for figures. When he was chairman of the committee on commerce of the house of representatives and made up the river and harbor bill, he could tell to a copper the appropriations that had been made each year for any number of years for any public improvement in that line. His memory was as accurate as the books of the treasury.

THE FOOT BRIDGE FELL

Nine Persons Crushed to Death on the Paris Exposition Grounds.

The Bridge Had Just Been Condemned, and People Were Not Allowed Upon It, but Were Permitted to Pass Under It.

Paris, April 30.—An accident within the exposition grounds caused the death of nine persons and injured about 40. A temporary bridge, unable to withstand the Sunday crowd, broke. The accident threw a pall over the happiness of an immense throng who had profited by the magnificent weather to visit the exposition. It was probably the record in attendance. Not merely the interior of the grounds, but the precincts also were crowded, and the concourse was particularly great along the Avenue de Sufren, which forms the northern boundary of the grounds. Here is situated a big sideshow, the Celestial Globe. A footbridge, on which the finishing touches were being put, crosses the Avenue de Sufren, connecting the sideshow with the exhibition. It was constructed of wood, with a sineco facade, and with a plaster-made tower at each end. Strangely enough, the bridge had been condemned only Sunday morning by the exposition authorities as unsafe. The public was, therefore, not allowed to go upon the structure, and in this way a disaster even more terrible than that which occurred was averted.

The victims first recovered were mostly only the injured, the dead being found later beneath the center of the structure. The first body was found after a quarter of an hour's frantic labor. It was that of a little girl seven years old whose head was horribly crushed. Victim after victim was brought to light, until a row of nine mutilated corpses had been placed upon the sidewalk, and nearly 40 other persons, some badly and others less seriously injured, had been carried in ambulances or driven to the hospitals.

The weighty plaster towers seemed to be responsible for the fall of the structure.

FORTIFICATIONS.

The Senate Committee on Appropriations Made Several Additions to the Bill.

Washington, April 29.—The senate committee on appropriations has completed consideration of the fortifications appropriation bill and made the following additions to the bill:

Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars for the purchase of land on Cashing's island, Portland harbor, Me., on which to erect additional batteries and buildings for troops; $135,000 for building sites on Sullivan's island, Charleston, S. C.; $115,440 for the completion of field and siege batteries; $40,000 additional for the A. B. Morrey elevating carriage; $100,000 for the purchase of the right to manufacture and use the Isham high explosive shell and Tuttle's high explosive thorite.

The additions made by the committee aggregate $640,140, bringing the total appropriation made by the bill up to $7,733,628.

RIVALS FOUGHT.

A Duel With Revolvers, in Which One Was Shot to Death—Fell Out Over a Girl.

Bluefield, W. Va., April 29.—News reached here of the killing of John Hesbrook, at Maybarry, McDowell county, 20 miles west of here, while in an altercation with Walter Sweetman. Both men used revolvers, but Sweatman proved the better marksman. They had a falling out last Sunday evening over a girl, Miss Lake Seybold. Both loved her. Several shots were fired, and as a ball remains in Hesbrook's pistol, it is supposed that he was killed before he had a chance to empty his. Sweetman emptied his revolver. One bullet entered Hesbrook's brain and one his left shoulder. He was dead when found.

Ordered to Manila.

Washington, April 29.—Surgeon Wyman, of the marine hospital service, has ordered Assistant Surgeons Lansford D. Fricks and Halstead A. Stansfield to the Philippine islands as assistants to Surgeon Perry. Surgeon Fricks is now in Washington, where he has been connected with the hygenic laboratory, and Surgeon Stansfield is at Honolulu.

Great Religious Undertaking.

Chicago, April 30.—A Methodist army 100,000 strong, consecrated and banded together for the salvation of souls, may be one outcome of the great gathering of Methodism which is about to be held in this city. Bishop J. M. Thoburn is at the head of the movement.

An Overdose of Morphine.

New York, April 30.—Harry S. Martindale, a well-known club man, died at the New York hospital, aged 35 years, from the effects of an overdose of morphine. In November, 1898, he lost a leg, and since that time his health had failed gradually.

Gen. Allan Rutherford Dead.

Washington, April 30.—Gen. Allan Rutherford, clerk of the Maryland court of appeals, died here of consumption, aged about 60 years. He was a native of New York and served with distinction during the civil war.

LOUISIANA PURCHASE.

A Project for an International Exposition at St. Louis in 1903 to Commemorate It.

Washington, April 28.—The house committee room on insular affairs was filled to overflowing Friday with a distinguished body of representative men from the west and southwest, who appeared to make formal presentation of the project for an international exposition at St. Louis in 1903, to commemorate the Louisiana purchase and the resulting development of the Mississippi valley, and its vast tributary sections.

Bills already introduced in the senate by Mr. Cockrell and in the house by Mr. Lane, giving a national aspect to the enterprise and providing a $5,000,000 appropriation in its aid. This has attracted the attention and encouragement of the sections throughout the middle west and the delegation now appears to urge the magnitude of the project, from a commercial and national standpoint and to give a status which it is hoped will secure favorable consideration in the present congress. The delegation was made up of governors, ex-governors, mayors of leading cities, former cabinet officers and men prominent in public and business life.

HON. THOMAS E. WATSON.

The Distinguished Georgian Will Not Accept the Populist Nomination for the Presidency.

Atlanta, Ga., April 28.—The action of populist conventions in several northern states in endorsing Hon. Thomas E. Watson, of Georgia, and naming him for first place on the ticket, has caused something of a stir in political circles all over the south. The association of Mr. Watson's name with his ramored re-entry into politics took the form in one instance of a report that he had decided to accept the nomination and that he was considering who should present his name. Mr. Watson has stated several times that he was out of politics, but in view of the recent rumors connecting him prominently with the populist nomination, the distinguished Georgian was asked for a final declaration. The following was received from Mr. Watson Friday:

"Under no circumstances would I accept any nomination or any office. Please number me among the politically dead and let me henceforth rest in peace."

A TEXAS TORNADO.

Town of Blum Partially Destroyed and Several Persons Fatally Injured—Details Not Received.

Dallas, Tex., April 28.—A special says a tornado passed through the southern part of Johnson and the northern part of Hill counties, about noon Friday, doing terrible destruction.

The town of Blum, in Hill county, about seventy-five miles southwest of Dallas, was partially destroyed and several persons fatally injured. A scantling was driven through the body of a daughter of Dr. Parks and she is in a dying condition. An eight-year-old daughter of D. P. Hunt had both legs broken and was injured internally. She is not expected to recover. Lucey Robertson's wife was caught in their falling house and crushed so badly she will probably die.

The public school house was wrecked and two pupils, names not yet learned, were badly hurt. About a dozen dwellings also were destroyed and the Baptist church wrecked.

Much other damage was done, but details have not yet been received.

DOESN'T APPLY TO AMERICA.

Our Meat Can Be Shipped to Germany Notwithstanding a Recent Order of the Kaiser.

New York, April 28.—Gustave H. Schwab, manager of the North German Lloyd line's American agency, said in reference to the action of Prince von Hohenlohe in interdicting the importation into Germany of Dutch or Belgian ports of pork and dairy products by the North German Lloyd Co., that the edict did not apply to American provisions.

The ruling applied to the importations from China and Australia, as the steamships of the North German Lloyd line plying to those countries are subsidized by the German government, while those running to the United States are not subsidized.

Kidnaped His Child.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 28.—C. Cole took his 3-year-old daughter from in front of her mother's eyes because his wife would not return to his home with him in Massachusetts. Cole placed the child in a buggy despite the protestations of the young mother, lashed the horse into a gallop and disappeared. He proceeded to the Southern Pacific depot and is now well on his way east.

Favors a Ship Canal.

Washington, April 28.—Representative Dalzell was heard by the house committee on railways and canals in favor of his bill to incorporate the Lake Erie and Ohio River Ship Canal Co. A sub-committee was appointed to further consider the subject.

Knocked Out in the Eleventh Round.

San Francisco, April 28.—Al Neill of San Francisco, knocked out Tim Murphy, champion middleweight of Australia, in the eleventh round of what was to have been a 20-round bout.

THE BOERS ESCAPE.

French's Cavalry Give up Pursuit and Return to Bloemfontein.

One Correspondent Describes Lord Roberts' Army as a Wreck, Because It Is Without Horses and Without Transports.

London, April 30.—The only dispatch from Lord Roberts was the usual list of deaths and sicknesses. The flood of newspaper dispatches describing the recent operations throws no light whatever on the present position of affairs or on the great question as to when the main advance is to begin. The Standard's announcement that Gen. French's cavalry are returning to Bloemfontein is clear proof that there is no further hope of catching the retreating Boers, and the London papers are beginning to display impatience at the practical failure of the elaborate operations of last week.

The Standard says: "It is disheartening to find that these elaborate maneuvers have had so small a result."

The Daily Chronicle remarks: "We are reluctant to criticize Lord Roberts, but it is impossible to shut our eyes to the fact that during the last ten days we have gained very little from our enormous display of force."

Without doubt these operations have been of a very exhaustive nature and will entail further delay. The Bloemfontein correspondent of the Times, writing on March 3, after the Paardeberg affair, describes Lord Roberts' army as a "wreck," because it was without horses and without transport. The Bloemfontein correspondent of the Post speaks now of the urgent need at present and always of more horses.

The Daily Mail publishes a statement from Col. Lon, who was blamed for the loss of the guns at Colenso, that in advancing the guns as he did he merely obeyed orders, and that the staff was quite ignorant of the proximity of the Boer position.

The sudden decision of the Boer peace delegates to go to America is attributed to the fact that the government of the Netherlands, after sounding all the European capitals, told them they had nothing to hope from Europe.

Col. Dalgety's force at Wepener numbered 1,700. His losses during the siege were 30 killed and 149 wounded.

It is reported that there was an artillery engagement yesterday at Karee Siding, but no details have been received.

London, April 30.—A special dispatch from Thaba N'chu, dated Thursday, describing the fight at Israel's Poort, which is about seven miles west of Thaba N'chu, says:

"The British artillery shelled the kopjes all day from three positions. The Boer positions were extremely well chosen, consisting of a long range of very precipitous hills, with narrow poorts (passes) between, commanding a vast extent of country. The mounted infantry made a wide turning movement, while the foot infantry advanced to within 2,000 yards under good shelter.

"During the afternoon the battle became general and extended over a frontage of ten miles. The rifle, Maxim and artillery firing was deafening. At 3 o'clock the Canadians advanced in open order, but, meeting with a terrific fire, they took shelter in a donga. When they finally captured the kopje the Boers were seen retiring north and east with wagons, and subsequently, when the infantry made a dash, the rest of the enemy fired a few shots and cleared off."

According to a special dispatch from Lourenzo Marques, the latest authentic estimates of the Boer forces place them at 50,000, of which 15,000 are at Kroonstadt, 6,000 at Fourteen Streams, 6,000 in Natal, 700 about Mafeking, and 1,000 at Pretoria, while 250 have been ordered north to intercept Gen. Carrington's force. The work of entrenching Pretoria is proceeding.

Several correspondents give the credit for the Boers' clever escape from the British net to Louis Botha, the new commander-in-chief, who, it is said, directed the withdrawal in person. Bloemfontein is still suffering from a shortage of water, the Boers having removed the indispensable parts of the water works machinery, which the British engineers have not yet been able to replace.

The Hague, April 30.—The members of the Boer peace commission will sail from Rotterdam for the United States next Thursday evening by the Holland-American line steamship Maasdam. Dr. Leyds and Dr. Mueller will not accompany the delegates.

London, April 30.—According to a special dispatch from Thaba N'chu, dated Sunday, the British troops, now that the adjacent country is cleared of the Boers, who trekked hurriedly in the direction of Ladybrand, will recuperate for a short period.

Minister Dies of Apoplexy.

Chicago, April 30.—Rev. Edward Reynolds Pierce, pastor of the Seamans' home mission, died here of apoplexy. Rev. Mr. Pierce was chaplain of the 55th regiment in the civil war and for five years was pastor of the Seamans' Bethel at St. Paul.

Railroad Office Abolished.

Montreal, April 30.—In consequence of the retirement of George B. Reeve, general traffic manager of the Grand Trunk railway, from active business, the office of general traffic manager has been abolished.

Washington, April 24.—Senate—Hon. Matthew S. Quay was refused a seat in the United States senate on the appointment of the governor of Pennsylvania by a vote of 33 to 32. The entire time of the senate was devoted to debate upon the question, many of the greatest lawyers and orators in the body delivering speeches.

House—The Foraker emergency resolution to continue the present officers in Poro Rico in office until the appointments are made under the civil government act was adopted. About 20 pages of the post office appropriation bill were disposed of, the only substantial amendment adopted being one to give extra compensation to letter carriers who work in excess of 48 hours a week.

Washington, April 25.—Senate—After a brief debate the conference report on the Hawaiian civil government bill, the provisions relating to the right of franchise and imprisonment for debt having been amended to conform to the ideas of the senate, was agreed to. The agricultural appropriation bill was passed, carrying a little over $3,000,000. The Alaskan civil government bill was under consideration for an hour, but no progress was made.

House—The entire session was devoted to the post office appropriation bill. By a vote of 87 to 50 the appropriation of $725,000 for the pneumatic tube service in New York, Boston and Philadelphia was stricken out.

Washington, April 26.—Senate—Almost the entire session was devoted to consideration of the right of Nathan B. Scott, of West Virginia, to retain his seat in the senate. The case went over without action.

House—The post office appropriation bill was passed, as was also a bill to increase the salary of the director of the census to $7,500 and the salaries of supervisors of census by two per cent, of the amount received by their enumerators. The final conference report on the Hawaiian government bill was presented, but not acted upon owing to the absence of a quorum.

Washington, April 27.—Senate—The senate voted upon the resolution declaring Nathan B. Scott not be entitled to his seat in the senate from West Virginia. The number of votes in the negative was only three. The Alaskan and cotton claims bills took up the rest of the day.

House—All records were beaten by the passage of 91 private pension bills. Among them was one to pension at the rate of $40 a month the widow of the late Col. John M. Stotsenberg, of the 1st Nebraska, who was killed in the Philippines. The conference report on the Hawaiian government was adopted and now goes to the president.

Washington, April 28.—Senate—Mr. Pettigrew, of South Dakota, offered a resolution expressing sympathy for the Boers. Without debate it was referred to the committee on foreign relations by a vote of 31 to 11. As the vote disclosed the absence of a quorum, an effort was made to secure one, but it was unsuccessful, and the senate adjourned.

House—Bills to recognize the services of Lieut. Newcomb and the officers and men of the revenue cutter Hudson, which rescued the torpedo boat Winslow at Cardenas, Cuba, by conferring gold and silver medals upon them, and to retire Capt. Hodgson, of the revenue cutter Hugh McCulloch, for meritorious services, were passed. Francis R. Lassiter, who succeeds the late Sidney Epes as a representative from the Fourth Virginia district, was sworn in.

TOAST TO THE QUEEN.

Loyalty of Her Subjects Shown By the Present War Existing in South Africa.

London, April 29.—Lord Roseberry, proposing the health of the queen at the banquet of the City Liberal club to the Australian delegates, said: "Never before in the course of her reign has the queen exerted herself so much as she has during the last few months. Never before has she borne so great a stress and strain, owing to the varying events of the war in South Africa, and, therefore, she has never before received so so marked a degree evidences of the gratitude and loyalty of her subjects."

In the course of a speech on "The Commonwealth in Australia" he referred to the Canadian commonwealth and to the widespread sympathy of the people of Great Britain for the people of Ottawa in their present distress.

Swindled the County.

Chicago, April 29.—Edward Blair, a former employe for years in the office of the treasurer and county clerk, has been arrested charged with manipulating tax receipts and tax records which may involve losses to the county and property owners aggregating thousands of dollars. The grand jury returned indictments against Blair and a companion known as "Barnes," and officers are now looking for the latter.

Dewey En Route to Chicago.

Washington, April 30.—Adm. Dewey accompanied by Mrs. Dewey and his private secretary, Lieut. Caldwell, left here in a special train en route to Chicago to participate in the celebration of the second anniversary of the battle of Manila.

Sultan Still Silent.

Constantinople, April 30.—The porte has not yet replied to the note handed to Tewfik Pasha, the Turkish foreign minister, by the United States charge d'affaires, Lloyd Garrison, regarding the indemnity claim.

That Tired Feeling

Just as surely indicates that the blood is lacking in vitality and the elements of health as does the most obstinate humor that the vital fluid is full of impurities. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures that tired feeling by enriching and vitalizing the blood, creating a good appetite and invigorating every organ of the body.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"I had that tired feeling all the time. Was as tired in the morning when I rose as I was when I went to bed. I took four bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and it made me feel like a new man. I could work hard and not feel tired. I recommend Hood's to all who need a good medicine." A. P. CHARTER, Creston, Iowa.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all drug gists. Get Hood's and only Hood's.

WAITED FOR ONE CENT.

Embarrassment of an Absent-Minded Purchaser at a Ninety-Nine Cent Store.

"I never felt so cheap in all my life," said Short, relates the Pittsburgh News, "as I did one day in a department store. I bought a book for 99 cents and while I was waiting for it a young woman, whose good opinion I valued, came up and we began to talk. The book was wrapped up and handed me by the girl at the counter and after a short while the young woman asked:

"'Are you waiting for your change?'

"I replied that I was, but, in fact, I hadn't been thinking of it. I wanted to talk to her and made that an excuse for staying. After the usual delay, when it had passed entirely out of my mind, the girl at the book counter stepped up and said:

"'Here's your change, sir.'

"And she held a bright new cent in her open hand so that the other girl saw it. I felt a chill at once and just because it appeared to the young woman that I had been waiting all that time for a cent. I got a reputation for closefistedness that is still sticking to me."

THOUSANDS HOMELESS

Ottawa and Hull, Ont., Almost Destroyed by Fire.

The Government Called Out the Militia and Adjourned the House of Commons on Account of the Fire—Details of the Disaster.

Ottawa, Ont., April 28.—Over five square miles of territory burned over, more than 2,000 buildings destroyed, seven lives lost, 7,000 men, women and children homeless, and a property loss of $17,000,000, according to the latest estimate, insured for about half its value, are the results, as now viewed, of the destructive fire which swept this city and Hull Thursday and Friday. Although under control, for many hours the flames were not entirely extinguished until about noon.

The government called out the troops and the house of commons adjourned on account of the conflagration.

The dead are Miss Minnie Cook aged 40 years, cremated in her own house; John Pumple, car repairer, suffocated in Canadian Pacific yard; George Peley, shoemaker, suffocated; John Dare, Hull, fireman for E. B. Eddy & Co.; unknown man, found dead in Meyers house, Hull; Mrs. Carron, Hull, dead from fright, aged 80; A. Bandin, 8 years old, son of Charles Baudin, Hull.

A relief committee has been formed by the citizens, and this, together with the Catholic archbishops of Ottawa and Montreal, will make an appeal for relief to the country. The most serious problem that confronts Hull is that of work. The majority of houseolders who were burned out are poor and have large families. It is not expected that there will be employment for a considerable period, and the way in which many of the poor are going to live in the meantime is doubtful.

On the Ottawa side fully two-thirds of Dalhousie ward is devastated, and an estimate by residents of the district places the number who were without roofs of their own in this district at 5,000. The destroyed property in this district includes some of the finest residences in Ottawa, as well as a great many of the humblest.

The fire broke out in the house of Mr. Kirouac, on Chaudiere street, Hull. It is said that Mrs. Kirouac was lighting her stove to get the family dinner and set the chimney on fire. The flames spread to the roof, quickly communicated to adjoining houses, and as there was a heavy gale blowing at the time, the fire was soon beyond control. Hundreds of homeless persons slept in the open air or wandered about the streets of Ottawa and Hull, although many houses were freely thrown open to the homeless. Many people were accommodated in the Drill, the Salvation Army barracks and other places.

Ottawa, Ont., April 28.—The government at a cabinet meeting Friday decided to give $100,000 to relieve the sufferers of the Ottawa and Hull fire. Ten thousand dollars will be given for immediate use. The city council has decided to give $10,000.

Montreal, April 28.—The Bank of Montreal has telephoned $10,000 to the Ottawa fire sufferers.

London, April 28.—The newspapers are unanimous in expressing the opinion that it is the duty of Great Britain to promptly and substantially assist in repairing the losses incurred by the Ottawa fire.

The St. James Gazette voices the general view by saying:

"At any time such a disaster to Canada would have appealed irresistably to the sympathies of Englishmen and the present condition strengthen the obligation. We have plenty on our hands with the South African war and the Indian famine, but we shall not be backward in doing all we can for our Canadian brothers till the bottom dollar is reached."

There is considerable anxiety in Edinburgh insurance circles on account of the Ottawa fire, as all the companies are heavily involved.

New York, April 28.—American Fire Insurance Co.'s will, it is believed, suffer little from the Ottawa fire.

Chicago, April 28.—A special from Ottawa, Ont., says: In Thursday's fire the heaviest losses so far as approximated: Booth Lumber Co., $2,000,000; the Eddy Paper Co., $1,500,000; the McKay Milling Co., $400,000; Hull Lumber Co., $500,000; the Cordite Co., $250,000; public buildings in Hull, $250,000.

Sporting Man Murdered.

Hot Springs, Ark., April 28.—Adolph Spitzel, known in all sporting centers of America, died here at noon from concussion of the brain, and it is believed he was murdered. He was found lying on the steps of a resort with blood flowing from his mouth, nose and ears. A stone lay near Spitzel's head. The money and jewelry of the dying man were untouched. Spitzel came from New Orleans several weeks ago.

Bank Vault Blown by Burglars.

Richmond, Va., April 28.—The vault of the Massanutten bank at Strasburg, Va., was blown open by burglars early Friday morning and $5,000 stolen. Negotiable papers and securities amounting to $75,000 were untouched. The men escaped on a hand-car on the Southern railway.

DURBIN FOR GOVERNOR.

Indiana Republicans Nominate a State Ticket and Select Delegates to the National Convention.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 27.—After a contest that lasted from 9 o'clock till 3 in the afternoon, Col. W. T. Durbin, of Anderson, was nominated for governor by the republican state convention. The first ballot showed that Durbin and Griffiths were close leaders and that the other four candidates, Hogate, Haggard, Posty and Dodge, were classed by themselves.

Newton W. Gilbert, of Angola, received the nomination for lieutenant governor on the fourth ballot.

The following were nominated by acclamation:

For Secretary of State—U. B. Hunt, of Winchester.

For Auditor of State—W. H. Hart, of Frankfort.

For Treasurer of State—Leopold Levy, of Huntington.

For Attorney General—W. L. Taylor, of Indianapolis.

For Superintendent of Public Instruction—F. L. Jones, of Tipton.

For Judge Supreme Court of Fourth District—Leander J. Monks, of Winchester.

For Reporter of Supreme Court—C. F. Remy.

For State Statistician—B. F. Johnson.

Delegates-at-large to the national convention: United States Senators Fairbanks and Beveridge, Gov. Mount and Charles S. Hernly, chairman of the republican state central committee.

Alternates: Nathan Powell, T. H. Adams, F. A. Amsden, G. Brewer.

Electors-at-large: Hugh H. Hanna, of Indianapolis, and Charles Miller, of Goshen.

The American eagle was adopted as the emblem for the republican ticket.

Just before the convention adjourned a resolution was adopted extending to Senator Beveridge, who is at Danville, N. Y., attending the bedside of his wife, the sympathy of the body and its earnest hope for her speedy recovery.

At 10:10 o'clock, after 13 hours of continuous session, the convention adjourned sine die.

The republican nominee for governor of Indiana is a native of the state, having been born at Lawrenceburg, May 4, 1847. He served throughout the civil war as a private in an Indiana regiment. He taught school during his early life, and then became a dry goods clerk in St. Louis, arising later to confidential credit man for the firm. He removed to Anderson in 1870 and engaged in banking. He is still in this business, and is also connected with the natural gas enterprises of Indiana. He has been known as a strong republican since he was a youth. He has declined to accept public office. In 1892 he went to the national republican convention as a delegate, having prior to that time served as a member of the republican state committee. In 1896 he was made a member of the national committee from Indiana, and since that time he has taken a prominent part in the work of the national party. He has taken an active part in Grand Army affairs. Mr. Durbin was appointed colonel by Gov. Mount to serve in the late Spanish-American war as commander of the 161st regiment. He and his regiment went to Cuba, where it did garrison duty.

A STRANGE WILL.

Wants to Be Shot or Her Heart Disconnected to Be Sure She Will Not Be Buried Alive.

Akron, O., April 27.—The will of Rebecca L. Young, of Twinsburg, filed, is one of the most remarkable documents ever presented to a court in this county. She had a great horror of being buried alive. To avoid a catastrophe of that kind, the following provision was made in her will: "Before my body is buried I direct that a post mortem examination be made, so far as to detach the heart or the brain entirely from its connections, or if this is not done, that two bullets shall be put through the heart and two through the brain. I implore from the kindness of any friend or the pity of any stranger who may be on hand at that time that this wish may not be slighted.

"If at the time of my death none of my family is living to be pained by such a disposition of my body, I bequeath it to Dr. Griste, of Twinsburg, for dissection, to be by him given to any medical college that may have use for it, or disposed of as he may choose."

Novel Move of Labor Leaders.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 25.—President John Mitchell, of the United Mine Workers of America, says the Dewey day celebration in Chicago next Monday promises to develop into interesting results to the labor world. The platform from which the distinguished invited guests are to review the Dewey parade has been built by non-union laborers, he says, and adjoins the new government building. Trades council leaders have arranged to photograph the group on the platform, and business men who are found in the group will be boycotted.

Went to Sleep on the Track.

Lexington, Ky., April 27.—About daybreak the mangled body of a woman was picked up on the Cincinnati Southern tracks near Brannon Station. The remains were brought here and recognized by Marshal Foley, of the grocery firm of Vogt & Foley, as those of his sister Mattie, who in a fit of dementia wandered away from home and could not be found. It is presumed that, exhausted by her wanderings, she had gone to sleep on the track. She had removed her shoes, and they were found several hundred feet from the mangled body.

TEXAS CLOUDBURSTS.

One of the Heaviest Rainfalls in Years Did Much Damage.

The Water Fell in Such Vast Sheets That the Six Persons Were Swept Away in Less Than Five Minutes' Time.

Waco, Tex., April 28.—A cloudburst, accompanied by a high wind, descended upon this city, and the result is that eight persons are known to have perished in the city limits and property valued at several thousand dollars has been destroyed or injured. The known dead are Mrs. Nancy Caudle, Miss Clara Caudle, Rosa Chapman, Emma Decker, Thomas Capps, Frank Walker and two Negro men, names unknown.

Relief committees are at work already, and succor is being afforded to the sufferers. The business streets were converted into rivers. Such a flood was never before seen here. The rain resembled a succession of cloudbursts. Basements were flooded on Franklin and Washington streets and on Austin avenue. Waco creek, on the south side of the city, and Barron's branch, on the north side, poured their surplus water toward the center of the city and formed a sea in the business center.

At present the exact number of persons drowned can not be ascertained. Mrs. Nancy Caudle and her daughter, who resided with Mrs. Norton at the corner of Jackson and Seventeenth streets, are among the dead recovered from the flood. The house was in the Waco creek overflow, and the two ladies, in spite of efforts at rescue, were swept away and when caught below were dead. Mr. and Mrs. Norton were saved. Their house was swept away. Wm. Walker, a Negro, was drowned in the Barron branch overflow, and his body was recovered.

At the corner of North Second and Barron streets an arched brick bridge, which had withstood for 30 years, gave way, and three Negroes disappeared with the bridge. Their bodies have not yet been recovered.

The storm commenced at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon, and the water fell from the clouds in vast sheets, one cloudburst following the other, the water courses rising above the divides and uniting into a sea, foaming and raging. The people in the portion of the city suffering the most fled from their houses. The firemen and police and hundreds of citizens rushed to the rescue, but the water was too swift for them, and at least six persons lost their lives by drowning in less than five minutes.

The main Bosque and its tributaries are overflowing a large district and ruining valuable crops. The Brazos river is ten feet above the danger mark and is still rising. The property loss in Waco will be fully $50,000.

Incoming reports indicate that one of the heaviest rainfalls experienced in years visited many sections of the state, and rivers and smaller streams are again rising rapidly. All points along the Brazos and Colorado rivers have been notified, and, while much damage to property may result from another rise, yet it is believed that the timely warning will enable those who live in the valleys to fully protect themselves.

Houston, Tex., April 28.—Friday there was an even heavier rainfall over Texas than during the past ten days, and as a consequence small streams are out of banks and rivers are again rising fast. An overflow of the Brazos is hourly expected at Hempstead, as the Navasota will pour an immense quantity of water into the Brazos above that town.

At Columbus, on the Colorado river, the Southern Pacific bridge has been washed away again, and there will be no trains run for several days. The Houston & Texas Central and the San Antonio & Aransas Pass have decided to run no trains at night as a matter of precaution.

At Navasota there was a cloudburst, four inches of rain falling in 40 minutes. Great damage was done to farm lands by washing. All stock had been taken from the bottoms, and there was consequently no loss in that direction.

At Belton a dozen houses were washed away by a sudden rise in a creek, but their occupants managed to escape. The lower part of the town is flooded.

The damage done all over the state to crops is enormous.

Believed to Have Been Murdered.

Peoria, Ill., April 28.—It is believed in Athens that Robert Carter was murdered, robbed and thrown into one of the abandoned mines in that vicinity. He came to Athens some two months ago from Kentucky, to visit friends, and in a few days disappeared, and has not been seen or heard of since. He had about $30 on his person at the time of his disappearance, and was that day seen in company with some tough characters. A posse has been organized and is now searching some of the abandoned shafts for his body.

TO DISFRANCHISE NEGROES.

A Movement on Foot in Virginia Looking to That End—A Constitutional Convention.

Richmond, Va., April 29.—The question of calling a constitutional convention in Virginia primarily for the disfranchisement of the Negroes has been practically settled, so far as the democrats are concerned. A majority of the delegates to the democratic state convention, which meets at Norfolk on May 2, are instructed in favor of making the call for the convention a party issue. This matter is now the absorbing one in Virginia, and the demand for the disfranchisement of the Negroes and other constitutional reforms has entirely overshadowed the original purpose for which the Norfolk meeting was called.

The constitution under which the people now live was adopted in 1869 by what was known as the Underwood convention. That body was composed of northern settlers and Negroes. The white people of Virginia, very many of whom were then disfranchised, had little or no part in formulating the organic law under which they have since lived. There is an overwhelming sentiment in the state in favor of eliminating the colored vote from its politics forever. This can only be accomplished by constitutional revision. The elimination of the black vote is demanded not only from the great black belts of Virginia, but also the white counties. Some of the largest and most influential of the latter elected delegations instructed to favor a convention.

The elements opposing this movement are the great corporations, the local officeholders, and the republicans.

FRAME WORK COLLAPSED.

Two Men Were Killed and Eleven Injured, at Least Two of Whom Will Die.

Birmingham, Ala., April 29.—By the collapse of the frame work of the main building of the Dimmick Pipe & Foundry Co., in the course of erection at North Birmingham Saturday morning, two men are dead and 11 are injured, at least two of whom will die. The building was at least 300 feet long and 100 feet wide. While an immense beam was being placed in position on the roof 30 feet above the ground, it fell, and striking the next beam, knocked it down. The second beam knocked down the third, and so on until 26 beams had fallen, causing a general collapse of the structure. About 30 men were at work on the building at the time and of this number 13 of them were on the superstructure and went down in the wreckage. Those on the ground floor began to leap out of the doors and windows as soon as the first beam fell, and all escaped uninjured.

Frankfort, Ky., April 30.—W. S. Taylor returned from Washington and spent Sunday at the executive mansion with his family. He was not expected to arrive until evening, and but few people were aware of his presence in the city till evening, when he appeared at the railroad station and took a C. & O. train to Louisville, leaving here at 6 o'clock. He was accompanied home from Washington by K. J. Hampton, secretary of the republican state central committee.

The presence of Mr. Taylor in the city was known to the local officers and to those in charge of the prosecution, and the fact that a warrant of arrest was not served upon him is construed to mean that the indictment will be held up and no process issued on it for several days. The indictment was returned in open court the day after those against Finley, Powers, Culton and others were returned, but it was not entered of record, and is now understood to be in the possession of Judge Cantrill.

Frankfort, Ky., April 30.—Fire broke out in the varnish room in the penitentiary chair shop and completely destroyed the building and contents, entailing a loss estimated at from $50,000 to $75,000. The strenuous efforts of the Frankfort fire department, assisted by a squad of soldiers and the prison fire department, kept the fire confined to the chair shops, and saved the shoe shop, broom shop and cellhouses. There was $20,000 insurance on the building and $10,000 on the stock and raw material.

The building and machinery belong to the state and the stock to the Frankfort Chair Co., controlled by A. D. Martin, of Chicago. It will require several months to rebuild the shops. Meanwhile about 600 convicts, that were earning 40 cents a day for the state will be out of employment. The firemen by grand work prevented the flames from reaching huge tanks of naptha stored in the building.

JESSE FIELD KILLED.

One of the Leaders in the French-Eversole Feud Shot From His Horse.

Jackson, Ky., April 28.—Jesse Fields, one of the most noted of all the mountain feudal fighters in Kentucky, died from the effects of a pistol shot wound. Fields was one of the leaders in the famous French-Eversole feud. The shooting of Fields occurred at a "blind tiger" 16 miles from this place.

A difficulty arose between Jesse Fields and Farmer Gilbert. Both quickly drew revolvers and began firing. Fields got behind a fence and Gilbert shielded himself with a convenient mulberry tree, and the trouble proceeded uninterruptedly until the weapons of both men were empty.

Neither man had been hurt, and they subsequently made friends. A little later in the evening Fields bade all present good-by and got upon his horse to go home. As he started to ride off, it is charged, two shots were fired, and French's trusted man fell from his horse mortally wounded.

It is asserted that both Gilbert and Feltner, one of Gilbert's friends, fired simultaneously at Fields, though it is not known which killed him. Gilbert and Feltner have disappeared.

Bro. Holmes discoursed on Mormons and Mormonism, last Sunday night, at the Methodist Church. The brother had a good opportunity of learning their methods while he was in charge of the church at Vancburg, and he gave in a clear, logical statement an account of their perversive manner of claiming to be ministers of the gospel which they profess to preach, but which in their private teachings is supplemented by revelations from the book of Morman, which they claim and teach is a latter revelation superior to the New Testament. In it is taught the horrible doctrine of polygamy, which, in many cases, among the beasts of the field and fowls of the air, is repudiated by their natural instinct.

The gathering of the farmers at this place on Saturday last, shows that they can act with unity on some measures when they are driven to do it. "The Detective Horse Thief Association," which was formed on that day has adopted a very energetic and comprehensive way to stamp out this crime from this part of the State; and its members hope that similar associations will be formed in every precinct in Northern Kentucky to work together and wipe out the band and bring to justice all who are engaged in this nefarious business. The object of the Association is to hunt down the miscreants and let the law take its course, and, furthermore, to raise the penalty to a minimum of five years for each offense. The strongest efforts will be made to catch the parties in our midst who spot and guide the thieves to desirable stock, and to catch them in the act of committing the crime. The farmers were unanimous in agreeing to all the conditions of membership, and pledged themselves to keep up the organization until the crime shall be unknown in the land. In the face of their proceedings on last Sunday night Willie Caln's horse and buggy were stolen from Hickory Grove church while he was attending services. The deed must have been done very soon after the meeting began as another horse was hitched in the place where Caln had hitched his. Organization should be in every district in Northern Kentucky, as by cooperation when a horse is stolen, it can be surely recovered and the thief captured. Enough of the Association's plans are known to almost certainly insure this. Communications from reliable parties may be addressed to the Association, Walton, Ky.

LESSONS OF MOVING.

Dr. Talmage Preaches a Timely Sermon.

Discourse in Which the Need of Patience and Equipose Is Set Forth—Moving Into the Father's House.

[Copyright, 1900, by Louis Klopsch.]

This discourse of Dr. Talmage is pertinent at this time of year, when many people are moving from house to house, and it teaches lessons of patience and equipoise in very trying circumstances. Text, Philippians, 4:12: "I know both how to be abased, and I know how to abound."

Happy Paul! Could you really accommodate yourself to all circumstances in life? Could you go up without pride, and could you come down without exasperation? Teach the same lesson to us all.

We are at a season of the year when vast populations in all our cities are changing residence. Having been born in a house, and having all our lives lived in a house, we do not have full appreciation of what a house is. It is the growth of thousands of years. The human race first lived in clefts of rocks, the beasts of the field moving out of the caverns to let the human race move in. The shepherds and the robbers still live in caverns of the earth. The troglodytes are a race which to this day prefer the caverns to a house. They are warm, they are large, they are very comfortable, they are less subject to violent changes of heat and cold. We come on along down in the history of the race, and we come to the lodge, which was a home built out of twisted tree branches. We come further on down in the history of the race, and we come to the tent, which was a home built with a round pole in the center and skins of animals reaching out in all directions, mats on the floor for the people to sit on.

Time passed on, and the world, after much invention, came to build a house, which was a space surrounded by broad stones, against which the earth was heaped from the outside. The roof was made of chalk and gypsum and coals and stones and ashes pounded together. After awhile the porch was born, after awhile the gate. Then hundreds of years passed on, and in the fourteenth century the modern chimney was constructed. The old Hebrews had openings in their houses from which the smoke might escape if it preferred, but there was no inducement for it to leave until the modern chimney. Wooden keys opened the door, or the keyhole was large enough to allow the finger to be inserted for the lifting of the latch or the sliding of it. There being no windows, the people were dependent for light upon lattice-work, over which a thin veil was drawn down in time of winter to keep out the elements. Window glass was, so late as 200 or 300 years ago, in England and Scotland so great a luxury that only the very wealthiest could afford it. A hand mill and an oven and a few leathern bottles and some rude pitchers and plates made up the entire equipment of the culinary department. But the home planted in the old cave or at the foot of a tent pole has grown and enlarged and spread abroad until we have the modern house, with its branches and roots and vast girth and height and depth of comfort and accommodation.

Architecture in other days busied itself chiefly in planning and building triumphal arches and basilicas and hippodromes and mausoleums and columns, while they allowed the people for residences to burrow like muskrats in the earth. St. Sophia's, of Constantinople, St. Mark's, of Venice; St. Peter's, of Rome, are only the Raphaeled walls against which lean the squalor and the pauperism of many nations. I rejoice that, while our modern architects give us grand capitols in which to legislate and grand courthouses in which to administer justice and grand churches in which to worship God, they also give much of their time to the planning of comfortable abodes for our tired population. I have not so much interest in the arch of Trajan at Beneventum as I have in the wish that all the people may have a comfortable shelter, nor have I so much interest in the temple of Jupiter Olympus at Athens as I have in the hope that every man may have an altar for the worship of the true God in his own house. And I have not so much interest in the science of ceramics, which goes crazy over a twisted vase, or a queer handled jug in use 3,000 years ago, or a pitcher out of which the ancient pharaohs poured their drunken debauch, as I have that every man have on his table a plate with plenty of healthful food and an appetite to attack it.

Thank God for your home—not merely the house you live in now, but the house you were born in and the many houses you have resided in since you began your earthly residence. When you go home to-day, count over the number of those houses in which you have resided, and you will be surprised. Once in awhile you will find a man who lives in the house where he was born and where his father was born and his grandfather was born and his great-grandfather was born, but that is not one out of a thousand cases. I have not been more perambulatory than most people, but I was amazed when I came to count up the number of residences I have occupied. The fact is, there is in this world no such thing as permanent residence.

In a private vehicle and not in a rail car, from which you can see but little, I rode from New York to Yonkers and Tarrytown, on the banks of the Hudson—the finest ride on the planet for a man who wants to see palatial residences in fascinating scenery. It was in the early spring and before the gentlemen of New York had gone out to their country residences. I rode into the grounds to admire the gardens, and the overseer of the place told me—and they all told me—that all the houses had been sold or that they wanted to sell them, and there was literally no exception, although I sailed at many pinces, just admiring the gardens and the grounds and the palatial residences. Some wanted to sell or had sold because their wives did not want to reside in the summer time in those places while their husbands tarried in town in the night, always having some business on hand keeping them away.

From some houses the people had been shaken out by chills and fever, from some houses they had gone because death or misfortune had occurred, and all those palaces and mansions had either changed occupants or wanted to change. Take up the directory of any city of England or America and see how few people live where they lived 15 years ago. There is no such thing as permanent residence. I saw Monticello, in Virginia, President Jefferson's residence, and I saw on the same day Montpelier, which was either Madison's or Monroe's residence, and I saw also the white house, which was President Taylor's residence and President Lincoln's residence and President Garfield's residence. Was it a permanent residence in any case. I tell you that the race is nomadic, and no sooner gets in one place than it wants to change for another place or is compelled to change for another place, and so the race invented the railroad and the steamboat in order more rapidly to get into some other place than that in which it was then. Aye, instead of being nomadic it is immortal, moving on and moving on. We whip up our horses and hasten on until the hub of the front wheel shivers on the tombstone and tips us headlong into the grave, the only permaneat earthly residence. But, bless God, even that stay is limited, for we shall have a resurrection.

A day this spring the streets will be filled with the furniture carts and the drays and the trucks. It will be a hard day for horses, because they will be overloaded. It will be a hard day for laborers, for they will overlift before they get the family furiture from one house to another. It will be a hard day for housekeepers to see their furniture scratched, and their crockery broken, and their carpets misfit, and their furniture dashed of the sudden showers. It will be a hard day for landlords. It will be a hard day for tenants. Especial grace is needed for moving day. Many a man's religion has suffered a fearful strain between the hour on the morning of the 1st of May, when he took his immature breakfast, and the hour at night when he rolled into his extemporized couch. The furniture broke a sometimes will result in the breaking of the Ten Commandments. There is no more fearful pass than the hall of a house where two families meet, one moving out and the other moving in. The salutation is apt to be more vehement than complimentary. The grace that will be sufficient for the 1st of January and the 1st of February and the 1st of March and the 1st of April will not be sufficient for the 1st of May. Say your prayers that morning if you find nothing better to kneel down by than a coal scuttle, and say your prayers at night though your knees come down on a paper of carpet tacks. You will want supernatural help if any of you move. Help in the morning to start out aright on the day's work. Help at night to repent. There will be enough annoyances to make a Xantippe out of a Frances Ridley Havergal, I have again and again been in crises of moving day, and I have stood appalled and amazed and helpless in the shipwreck, taking as well as I could those things that floated ashore from the breakers, and I know how to comfort and how to warn and how to encourage the people, so I preach this practical May day sermon. All these troubles will soon be gone, and the bruises will heal, and the stiffened joints will become supple, and your ruffled temper will be smoothed of its wrinkles, and order will take the place of disorder, and you will sit down in your new home seriously to contemplate.

My first word, then, in this part of my discourse is to all those who move out of small houses into larger ones. Now we will see whether, like the apostle, you know how to abound. Do not, because your new house has two more stories than the old one, add two stories to your vanity or make your brightly polished silver doorplate the coffin plate to your buried humility. Many persons moving into a larger house have become arrogant and supercilious. They swagger where once they walked, they simper where once they laughed, they go about with an air which seems to say: "Let all smaller craft get out of these waters if they don't want to be run over by a regular Cunarder." I have known people who were kind and amiable and Christian in their smaller house—no sooner did they go over the doorsill of the new house than they became a glorified nuisance. They were the terror of dry goods clerks and the amazement of ferryboats into which they swept, and if compelled to stand a moment with condemnatory glance turnlog all the people seated into criminals and convicts. They began to hunt up the family coat of arms, and had lion couchant or unicorn rampant on the carriage door; when, if they had the appropriate coat of arms, it would have been a butter firkin or a shoe last or a plow or a trowel. Instead of being like all the rest of us, made out of dust, they would have you think that they were trickled out of Heaven on a lump of loaf sugar. The first thing you know of them, the father will fail in business, and the daughter will run off with a French dancing master. A woman spoiled by a finer house is bad enough, but a man so upset is sickening. The lavendered fool goes around so dainty and so precise and so affected in the roll of his eyes or the whirl of his cane or the clicking of the ivory handle against his front teeth or his effeminate languor, and his conversation so interlarded with "oh's" and "ah's" that he is to me a dose of ipecacuanha. Now, my friends, if you move into a larger house, thank God for more room—for more room to hang your pictures, for more room in which to gather your friends, for more room in which to let your children romp and play, for more room for great bookcases filled with good reading or wealth of bric-a-brac. Have as large and as fine a house as you can afford to have, but do not sacrifice your humility and your common sense; do not lose your balance; do not be spoiled by your successes.

Years ago we were the guests in an English manor. The statuary, the ferneries, the botanical and horticultural genius of the place had done all they could to make the place attractive. For generations there had been an amassing of plate and costly surroundings. At half past nine o'clock in the morning the proprietor of the estate had the bell rung, and some 20 or 30 manservants and maidservants came in to prayers. The proprietor of the estate read the Scriptures, gave out the hymn, his daughter at the organ started the music, and then, the music over, the proprietor of the estate kneeled down and commended all his guests, all his family, all his employes, to the Lord Almighty. God can trust such a man as that with a large estate. He knows how to abound. He trusted God, and God trusted him. And I could call off the roll of 50 merchant princes as mighty in worldly successes. Ah, my friends, do not be puffed up by any of the successes of this life, do not be spoiled by the number of liveried coachmen that may stop at your door or the sweep of the long trail across the imported tapestry. Many of those who come to your house are fawning parasites. They are not so much in love with you as they are in love with your house and your successes. You move down next year to 320 Low Water Mark street and see how many of their carriages will halt at your door.

I meet you this springtime at the door of your new home, and while I help you lift the clothes basket over the banisters and the carman is getting red in the face in trying to transport that article of furniture to some new destination I congratulate you. You are going to have a better time this year, some of you, than you ever had. You take God and the Christian religion in your home, and you will be grandly happy. God in the parlor—that will sanctify your sociabilities. God in the nursery—that will protect your children. God in the dining-hall—that will make the plainest meal an imperial banquet. God in the morning—that will launch the day brightly from the drydocks. God in the evening—that will sail the day sweetly into the harbor.

And get joy, one and all of you, whether you move or do not move. Get joy out of the thought that we are soon all going to have a great moving day. Do you want a picture of the new house into which you will move? Here it is, wrought with the hand of a master: "We know that, if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." How much rent will we have to pay for it? We are going to own it. How much must we pay for it? How much cash down, and how much left on mortgage? Our Father is going to give it as a free gift. When are we going to move into it? We are moving now. On moving day heads of families are very apt to stay in the old house until they have seen everything off. They send ahead the children, and they send ahead the treasures and the valuables. Then, after awhile, they will come themselves. I remember very well in the country that in boyhood moving day was a jubilation.

On almost the first load we, the children, were sent on ahead to the new house, and we arrived with shout and laughter, and in an hour we had ranged through every room in the house, the barn and the granary. Toward night, and perhaps in the last wagon, father and mother would come, looking very tired, and we would come down to the foot of the lane to meet them and tell them of all the wonders we discovered in the new place, and then, the last wagon unloaded, the candles lighted, our neighbors, who had helped us to move—for in those times neighbors helped each other—sat down with us at a table on which there was every luxury they could think of. Well, my dear Lord knows that some of us have been moving a good while. We have sent our children ahead, we have sent many of our valuables ahead. We cannot go yet. There is work for us to do, but after awhile it will be toward night, and we will be very tired, and then we will start for our new home, and those who have gone ahead of us they will see our approach, and they will come down in the lane to meet us, and they will have much to tell us of what they have discovered in the "house of many mansions," and of how large the rooms are and of how bright the fountains. And then, the last load unloaded, the table will be spread and our celestial neighbors will come in and sit down with our reunited families, and the chalices will be full, not with the wine that sweats in the vat of earthly intoxication, but with "the new wine of the kingdom." And there for the first time we will realize what fools we were on earth when we feared to die, since death has turned out only to be the moving from a smaller house into a larger one, and the exchange of a pauper's hut for a prince's castle, and the going up stairs from a miserable kitchen to a glorious parlor.

THE PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION of the YEAR 1901

Buffalo Is Arranging for a Magnificent Display of the Products of the Three Americas for Next Year—Elaborate Floral, Horticultural and Electrical Features

THE STADIUM.

It Will Offer a Splendid Arena for the Athletic Contests.

The completed Stadium for the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo next year will offer to the lovers of sports the most spacious and splendid arena ever erected in America. The athletic carnival to be held during the great exposition will be the most notable in the history of American sport. The cooperation of many of the best promoters of athletic games and contests has been secured. Visitors to the Pan-American exposition may therefore expect to witness the meeting of the most famous athletes of the world, in competition for prizes worthy of their best feats of endurance, strength and skill.

It is said that the great Colosseum at Rome, built in the first century of the Christian era, could accommodate 87,000 spectators. The Pan-American Stadium will be 129 feet longer and but ten feet narrower than the historic amphitheater of Rome. The Stadium, however, will have a larger arena, and the seating capacity is estimated for 25,000 people. The top row of seats will be 60 feet above the ground, and every seat will command a perfect view of the vast interior. Standards are to be placed at various points for the support of the awnings in such a way that they will not obstruct the view from the other seats.

The Stadium will have a quarter-mile track and a sufficiently large space inside of this for any of the athletic games. Great attention has been paid to having a large number of aisles to reach the seats, and, in addition to the principal entrance on the west, there are provided seven large exits. These exits are made of sufficient breadth and height to admit, in case of need, the largest vehicles or floats, as it is proposed to use the Stadium for certain pageants, exhibits of automobiles in operation, judging of live stock, horses, agricultural machinery, road machinery, etc. No exhibitor has ever had such a splendid arena in which such exhibits could be displayed. The space under the seats is to be used for exhibition purposes, and is in itself the equivalent of a very large building.

A large and picturesque building forms the main entrance to the Stadium. This is 241 feet long by 52 feet wide, with towers 164 feet high. The style is in conformity with that of the other buildings, with an arcaded effect in the lower story, red tiled roof, broad eaves and bright colors. The old Spanish towers give a finished beauty to the structure and make it one of the most prominent features of the exposition.

The Stadium resembles in a general way that erected at Athens a few years ago, although this one can be, of course, only a temporary structure. It is intended as a model of what it is hoped may be executed some day in permanent form.

The Stadium will cover ten acres of ground and its situation is on the east side of the Plaza, opposite the Midway. It is near the great entrances from the steam and trolley railway station, at the extreme north end of the exposition grounds.

THE SERVICE BUILDING.

It Was the First Structure Erected on the Exposition Grounds.

The large Service building, although small in comparison with the big exposition structures, was completed in 32 working days, and was the first building erected on the grounds. It is the present home of a large corps of officers and employes having immediate charge of the constructive work of the exposition. This handsome building is on the west side of the grounds, and is 95 by 145 feet, two stories high. A broad arched driveway on the north side leads to an inner court. To the right and left of the driveway are entrances to the corridors that open into the various rooms of the building.

In this building are the offices of the director of works, the landscape architect, superintendent of building construction, purchasing agent, chief engineer, mechanical and electrical engineer, with their numerous assistants. On the second floor is a large draughting-room for the use of the architects, with fireproof vaults at hand for the valuable drawings. In this building will also be the headquarters for the police and hospital service, the fire department and the officers in charge of the transportation and installation of exhibits, and other officers. The building is equipped with a cellar, kitchen, dining-room and numerous sleeping apartments, for the accommodation and comfort of those whose work requires their continuous presence on the grounds.

A VIEW IN THE EXPOSITION SITE.

THE ELECTRICITY BUILDING.

It Will Be One of the Most Attractive of the Main Buildings.

Elaborate designs have recently been completed for the Electricity building for the Pan-American exposition, to be held in Buffalo, N. Y., May 1 to November 1, 1901. Displays of all kinds in the practical and artistic uses of electricity, together with complete exhibits of electrical machinery and appliances, are to be conspicuous features of the great exposition.

The designs contemplate a very handsome and commodious building. The structure is to be 500 feet from east to west and 150 feet wide, giving an exhibition space of 75,000 square feet.

The south facade fronts the Mall and the north fronts the Midway. The east end is toward the massive electric tower, while the west faces the grand canal. The building is long, low and inviting. The design of the facades shows artistic grouping. The openings of the pergola-like loggias, placed at frequent intervals, present a delightful effect, showing more and more of the details of the pilasters and openings as the eye travels to the end of the building farthest away from the observer.

There is a pleasing ending at each corner of the structure, with a low-domed pavilion tower, and the building is interrupted at the center by a double-towered entrance. This entrance, wide and high, is spanned by an ornamental arch and supported on each side by columns. The towers, also, have minor entrances through them.

The connecting work between the towers, the towers themselves, the pavilions at the corners of the building and similar places are to be brilliantly illuminated and made gay with banners and flags.

The modeled relief work of the building is of the choicest design. The general ornamentation of the structure is to be frescoes in an interesting mixture of reds, greens and yellows. The general color scheme follows that of the Machinery and Transportation and other groups of buildings of the exposition. The structure was designed by Green & Wicks, of Buffalo.

The Value of Names.

Hicks—Wonder how Mortar is getting on nowadays?

Wicks—Getting along finely. It was only two years ago he started out as an apotheeary. He is already a druggist, and if his luck holds out he will be a pharmacist before the end of another twelvemonth.

Hicks—But what difference will that make?

Wicks—A big difference. An apothecary oftentimes has to sell things at only 50 cents above cost, and a druggist never takes more than 100 per cent., but to a pharmacist there is no limit.—Boston Transcript.

Change of Aim.

"When you married you thought your husband a demigod?"

"Yes."

"And now?"

"Now he reminds me more of a demijohn."—N. Y. Press.

LIKE THE REST OF US.

Before Marriage Everything Is Sweet and Lovely. After We Get Down to Earth Again.

"George, dear," she said, a night or two before the wedding, according to Tit-Bits, "do you think it possible that our love and our married life can become the common place, coldly practical love and life of the married people we see around us? Oh, George, my heart would break if I thought so."

"But it will not be so," said George, passionately. "We love each other too tenderly, too fondly for that. Our love is not of the ordinary kind, my darling, and our lives will not be so. Ah, no, my angel; that can never be."

And the other day she said: "I say, George, how would you like pork for dinner with apple sauce? You would? All right, then; and don't you forget that feeding bottle for the baby, or I'll send you back after it, and mind that you don't keep dinner waiting."

And he, with a falling-off of the passion of ten years ago, replied: "All right, Lou, and I wish you'd sew a button on the back part of those striped trousers of mine; you'll find them hanging over a chair in our room. Don't have the pork as dry as last time, and you watch the baby's cold. That watering of the eyes looks like measles to me. There's my 'bus. Good-by!"

THE POET'S GRIEVANCE.

His Lines Were Badly Treated by the Printer and He Was Justly Indignant.

The editor was sitting in his office one day when a man whose brow was clothed with thunder entered. Fiercely seizing a chair, he slammed his hat on the table, hurled his umbrella on the floor, and sat down, says Collier's Weekly.

"Are you the editor?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Can you read writing?"

"Of course."

"Read that, then," he said, thrusting at the editor an envelope with an inscription on it.

"B——" said the editor, trying to spell it.

"That's not a B—it's an S," said the man.

"S—oh, yes, I see. Well, it looks like 'Salt for Dinner,' or 'Souls of Sinners.'"

"No, sir," replied the man, "nothing of the kind. That's my name—Samuel H. Brunner. I knew you couldn't read. Called to see you about that poem of mine you printed the other day on the 'Surcease of Sorrow.'"

"Don't remember it."

"Of course you don't, because it went into the paper underneath the infamous title of 'Smearease To-morrow.'"

The editor fled.

British Aristocracy Blamed.

Many people attribute the recent reverses of the British to the degeneracy of the aristocracy. The life of luxury does not produce vigor. Indigestible suppers, late hours, constant nerve strain and lack of exercise upset the stomach and weaken both physical and mental vitality. The blood that makes men heroes must come from active, healthy stomachs. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters purifies the blood and strengthens the stomach. It cures constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia and biliousness.

Much Like Demosthenes.

"Woman," he said, "really ought to be a better orator than man."

"Why so?" she asked.

"Because," he replied, "to a certain extent at least she follows the methods of that famed orator, Demosthenes."

"In what way?" she inquired, still busy with the finishing touches of her toilet.

"You remember," he answered, "that Demosthenes used to practice talking with his mouth full of pebbles."

She hastily took the pins out of her mouth and informed him that he was a mean old thing anyway.—Chicago Post.

NOTES FROM WASHINGTON

Legislative Movements in House and Senate and Their Political Significance.

BILLS SIDES ARE STRUGGLING OVER.

Costly Victory of Republicans in the Porto Rican Affair—Democrats Want Armor Plate Factory Managed by Government—Representative Dick's Explanation, Etc.

[Special Correspondence.]

The house republicans feel somewhat in need of repairs since the passage of the Porto Rican bill. It was one of those victories more costly than defeat.

The house intends to confine its attention strictly to the appropriation of money for some time. There are three big bills and any number of minor measures that must be sent to the senate by the middle of May if there is to be the proposed adjournment by the middle of June.

The naval appropriation bill will engage the attention of the house at once. Then there are the post office, sundry civil and general deficiency measures. The latter will be held back until the last moment because it contains material for pointed democratic criticism. It is the epitome of the expensive blunders which the administration has been committing.

The consideration of the naval appropriation bill will precipitate a bitter struggle in the house over the question of armor plate. The majority will contend for a "free hand," as Senator Beveridge would say. It is willing to pay $545 a ton and as much more as the Carnegie company may demand.

The democrats will contend for an armor plate factory built and managed by the government. It has been shown that the best armor plate can be manufactured for about $200 a ton, and that it is in the interest of economy to have this work done by the government instead of by a trust. The democrats will also urge the building of ships in government yards, rather than by a subsidized combine. The republican majority will, of course, vote down both propositions, but the debate will be an instructive one, and close understanding and sympathy the democrats will be able to show the with trust interests which underlies the republican request for a big naval appropriation. Just here it may be noted that the combined army and navy appropriation asked by the administration approximates closely to $200,000,000 for the fiscal year.

The Porto Rican Matter.

The administration forces have felt that it would be the part of wisdom to let the Porto Rican matter drop out of sight, now that the bill is passed. It is recognized that if popular agitation continues on the matter it will seriously endanger the chances of republican success in the coming presidential campaign.

But the people of the country will not be quiet. Congress is simply deluged with letters and newspaper attacks—from republican sources, too—expressing the utmost indignation at the passage of the measure.

So desperate has become the condition that the suave and ingenious Representative Dick, secretary of the republican national committee, has deemed it advisable to have himself interviewed and to "explain" the measure.

The democrats think that he is scarcely as happy as usual in his choice of arguments. He says that the Porto Rican tariff "will be a precedent in our legislation for our new possessions in the Philippines." He goes on at great length to point out the dangers to American industry and labor unless various unconstitutional barriers are raised against the new possessions.

The democrats pointed out the dangers in the beginning. They questioned the advisability of the sort of expansion which takes in millions of people of alien races and entirely different character of civilization from our own. The democrats assumed that if such people were taken at all they must be under the protection of the constitution and entitled to the rights guaranteed by that instrument. If the new possessions could not come to us in that way the United States was better off without them.

Representative Dick shows very clearly in his official statement that the republicans desire to institute a system of colonial possession, over which an irresponsible congress and administration shall be the dictator. Irresponsible, because acting without the guidance or control of the constitution. He intimates plainly that the republicans are striving to establish the precedent that the constitution does not apply to the insular possessions.

The democrats are entirely willing to go before the people with imperialism thus clearly defined, and they are rather pleased that Representative Dick thus foreshadows so definitely at this time the republican attitude in the campaign.

Running Mate for McKinley.

Mark Hanna has been conducting a lively campaign to find a "running mate" for McKinley. Mr. John D. Long, secretary of the navy, is now said to be the favored candidate.

The search this time is not so much for the modest citizen who will contribute liberally to the campaign fund in return for the honor of the nomination, as for some one who will bolster up Mr. McKinley's reputation and bring into line the thousands upon thousands of republicans who regard him with distrust—not to say anything worse.

The kaleidoscope may change a number of times before the country, but Mark Hanna is looking for the upright and conscientious man who will add real moral strength to the ticket. Mr. Hanna can manage the campaign fund, when it comes to that, and he now feels assured that he has the machinery sufficiently in hand to have McKinley renominated at Philadelphia by acclamation. He has been rather disappointed though by the manifest reluctance displayed by those on whom he desired to confer the vice presidential nomination.

It Looks Suspicious.

The interstate commerce commission has been distinguishing itself by actively looking for the passage of a bill, which will largely increase its powers. This bill has not attracted much attention, but it is regarded as rather a suspicious feature that certain railroad interests are also urging it. There is more than a hint that the railway combinations think they see a chance to control the interstate commerce commission completely, if the existing inocuous law can be amended in certain directions. But with their usual shrewdness the surface argument is put the other way. The present republican congress, not only is doing nothing to discourage combinations and trusts, but is actively promoting legislation which will give them more power.

The Ship Subsidy Bill.

The senate republicans are insisting that the ship subsidy bill must be passed. They have the necessary votes, and can probably pass the measure, but the democrats are politely but firmly suggesting that the ship subsidy matter will have to wait its turn as the Philippine bill and some other measures are ahead of it. It is said that Hanna depends on certain shipbuilding interests for a goodly portion of his campaign contributions, hence his anxiety to carry out his share of the bargain.

ADOLPH PATTERSON.

IMPERIALISM POISON.

Perversion of Patriotism and Loss of Political Sagacity and Veracity.

Prof. Joseph H. Crooker, of Ann Arbor, Mich., in a review of the Philippine situation, published in the Springfield Republican, refers to the poison of imperialism engendered by our falling away from first principles, thus:

Among the many bad things bound up with this unfortunate business none is worse than the degradation of America, sure to follow in more ways than one, if we persist in the course that we are now following. No stronger or sadder proof of the unwise and harmful character of this policy is needed than the fact that its defenders are led so quickly to part company with sober argument and truthful statement and rush into virulent abuse and deceptive sophistries. Who would have believed two years ago that any sane man would have appealed to Washington in support of a policy so abhorrent to the fathers of his country? What ignoble unversality in twisting his words into the approval of foreign conquest! Who would have thought it possible that scholars and statesmen would so soon become mere jugglers with words, pretending that our previous territorial expansion furnishes analogy and warrant for a colonial system far across the ocean, entered upon by warfare and maintained by congress without constitutional safeguards! These facts show how virulent a poison is at work upon the national mind. We have here already a perversion of patriotism and a loss of political sagacity and veracity.

"It is bad enough to hear men exclaim: 'There is money in it and that is sufficient'—but a national venture that leads men to scout the declaration of independence, to ridicule the constitution as outgrown, to denounce the wisdom of the fathers as foolishness, and to declare that American glory dates from Manila bay, is there not something ominous in such talk? It is brief experience in the expansion of America that scoffs at American principles produces such results, is it not time to sound the alarm? If the defense of a policy compels men to take such positions, there is something infinitely dangerous in that policy."

The Worst Part of It.

The Porto Rico bill as it has become law is a very different thing from the bill that was brought into congress. It was whittled down and carved out until only a shadow of the original thing remained. But there is left what all the trusts, all the jobbers and speculators and franchise grabbers at Washington tried so hard to retain—namely, the proclamation of the supremacy of congress over the constitution. It does not matter that the rate of customs duties is made 15 per cent. of the Dingley schedules instead of 25 per cent. It does not matter that a period of two years is set for the operation of this tariff, instead of making it perpetual. It does not matter that the revenues thus obtained are to be used to pay the charges of government in Porto Rico. None of these things count against the fact that this law assumes to set congress above the constitution. This is the worst feature of the whole business. It alleges the right of congress to go outside the constitution, the creature to dominate its creator. It asserts the right of congress to erect a tariff wall against trade between parts of the territory of the United States.—Boston Post.

——The history of this legislation must naturally and necessarily condemn the legislation itself. It is a chapter of vacillation and contradiction; of explanation and apology; of cross purposes and changing policies; of promises solemnly made and lightly broken—a chapter of blunders made all the more glaring by ill-tempered defense of ill-advised steps. The administration, as well as congress, will be on the defensive for seven months to come.—Washington Post.

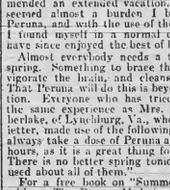
——The tariff law as applied to Porto Rico will be compelled to stand one more test. There is no doubt that it will be tested in the courts, and the decision will be one of the most important that has ever been made, as it may settle the status of the Philippine Islands as well.—Peoria Journal.

DAN GROSVENOR SAYS:

"Peruna is an Excellent Spring Catarrh Remedy—I am as Well as Ever."

Hon. Dan. A. Grosvenor, of the Famous Ohio Family.

Hon. Dan. A. Grosvenor, Deputy Auditor for the War Department, in a letter written from Washington, D. C., says:



"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from one bottle of Peruna. One week has brought wonderful changes and I am now as well as ever. Besides being one of the very best spring tonics it is an excellent catarrh remedy." Very respectfully, Dan. A. Grosvenor.

Hal P. Denlon, Chief National Export Exposition, Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "I was completely run down from overwork and the responsibility naturally connected with the exploitation of a great international exposition. My physician recommended an extended vacation. When life seemed almost a burden I began taking Peruna, and with the use of the fifth bottle I found myself in a normal condition. I have since enjoyed the best of health."

Almost everybody needs a tonic in the spring. Something to brace the nerves, invigorate the brain, and cleanse the blood. That Peruna will do this is beyond all question. Everyone who has tried it has had the same experience as Mrs. D. W. Timberlake, of Lynchburg, Va., who, in a recent letter, made use of the following words: "I always take a dose of Peruna after business hours, as it is a great thing for the nerves. There is no better spring tonic, and I have used about all of them."

Stamped the School Visitor.

A visitor at a Columbia, Mo., school the other day asked one of the lower grade class this question: "What is the rate of the earth?" "An imaginary line passing from one pole to the other, on which the earth revolves," proudly answered a pupil. "Yes," said the examiner, well pleased, "and could you hang a bonnet on it?" "Yes, sir." "Indeed! And what kind of a bonnet?" "An imaginary bonnet, sir." The visitor asked no more questions.—Chicago Chronicle.

Crop and Stock.

W. R. Tuggle sold at Mt. Sterling 30 heifers weight about 500 pounds at $21.65 each.

Thos. Johnson, a Christian county farmer, plowed up a stone jar containing $3,700 in gold.

The banner corn raising states of the Union are: Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska.

The damage to fruit trees in the vicinity of Conon City, Col., from the late heavy storms and frost is estimated at $500.000.

After losing 17 head W. P. Grimes, of Lincoln, had 130 head of cattle vaccinated in the tail against blackleg at a cost of $29,75.

Stock speculators are offering 5 cents for fat hogs for the June market. The hog trade is quite brisk.—Richmond Pantagraph.

Cumberland river farmers in Pulaski are holding their corn at $1 per bushel and corn is being shipped there at $3 per barrel.

The average number of horses killed in Spanish bull fights every year exceeds 5,000, while from 1,000 to 1,200 bulls are sacrificed.

Col. W. W. Baldwin, of Maysville, sold to Dr. Loghead, Messrs. Crain and Deering, of Fleming 3 fine shorthorn bulls, at $100 each.

In Shelby 9 fine feeding cattle belonging to C. T. Tinsley, died from drinking a solution of Paris Green, and five others will die. He had used Paris Green on his tobacco, and the empty barrel filled with rain water, from which they drank.

Among the propositions to be considered at the International Agricultural Conference, to be held in Paris July, 9-16, is one to form an international trust of all the farmers of the world to restrict the production of wheat and raise prices.

Where a farm is sold for, say, $9,000, and only one-third of the purchase money is paid down, it is clearly wrong to tax the farm and the security given for the unpaid balance also. It is this unfairness in the matter of taxation of moneys and credits which has largely destroyed the moral sense of men holding such securities and made them try to justify their action in evading law.

Joshua Ritter sold in Cincinnati, Monday, a car of corn at 47 cents per bushel. A. F. Aulick bought yesterday of J. H. Shields 2 Shorthorn yearlings for $75 and another yearling steer at $21. G. M. Nichlaus has sold his farm of 165 acres, one mile east of town to Samuel Gruell for $2,500; one-half cash. Joshua Ritter has bought during the past week nearly 500 lambs in Pendleton and Harrison counties at 4½ to 5½ cents. He also bought at Cynthiana, Monday, 3 fat and 3 stock heifers at 4, 4½ and 5 cents.—Pendletonian.

Have you learned to value the full worth of toads in your warfare against insects? Do you instruct the boys that they are genuine friends, not foes? If not, learn this lesson from the farmers of France. In many rural communities the Frenchmen put up boards with this inscription: "Toads help agriculture; destroy twenty to thirty insects each hourly. Don't kill toads:" and this of birds: "Birds. Each department of France loses yearly millions of trances by the injury done by insects. Don't kill the birds."—Vick's Magazine for April.

Developments so far show fruit buds in good condition, although a number of reports are to the effect that peaches are killed. Many peach trees were either killed outright by the cold weather of the winter of 1898-9, or have since died from injury sustained then. It is also true that a considerable percentage of peach buds were killed by the cold weather of last winter, but is more likely than otherwise that this loss will prove a benefit by ridding the trees of surplus fruit. Fruit trees have borne a scant crop for the past few years, and should be in condition to give excellent results with a avorable season.—Pendletonian.

About 800 cattle on the market; quality was not good and very few steers for sale that were first class. Of the number of cattle offered fully 500 were shipped in, some coming from Michigan and several car loads from Indiana. The market was strong and several bunches of steers sold for more than 5 cents, yearlings 5 to 5½; heifers 4 to 4½, cows at 2½ to 3. Sales were a little slow in the morning, but were better in the afternoon, and pens were about clean by night. About all sales were made at so much per head, so it was difficult to catch the trades. Very few mules on the market and no extra ones for sale. Caruthers & Beard bought 10 mules at prices from $85 to $110. Some sales to farmers of single and pairs at about $100 per head. Horse market about as usual; plugs at from $50 to $65.—Mt. Sterling Advocate.

Midway.

Born, to Robert Noell and wife, Sunday morning, April 29th, a bouncing baby boy.

Fielding Grubbs has completed and moved into his pretty new cottage house at Beaverlick.

B. B. Hume and family have moved in with Mr. George Moore, at his pretty country home. It will be a great benefit to them both.

Corn planting in this community is fast becoming a thing of the past, and great fear of the distructive cutworm is entertained, owing to the prolonged cold dry weather.

At the sale of B. B. Allphin, deceased, last Friday, corn sold for $3 25 per bbl., which shows that particular variety of cereal is in desperate demand along the rugged shores of little Southfork creek.

Probably ere this time next week the T. Jake Hughes telephone line from Beaver to Berkshire, via Hume, will be completed and in operation, very much to the convenience of loquacious business citizens along the line.

The farmers in this community are rejoicing at this pretty May weather, which is so beautifully adapted to corn planting and shearing sheep, yet a little rain, admittedly warm, would be a great benefit to young grasses and tobacco plants.

The Big Bone and Beaver Turnpike Company met at the Springs, last Saturday, and arranged for the building of the road as soon as the charter is secured and the condition of the road bed right for business.

Uncle Bob Conley, who hibernated in the interior of Indiana, has returned to the haunts of his nativity, greatly rejuvenated and can be seen most any day at the Mercantile Co's establishment, showing the boys some winning moves in the fascinating game of checkers.

Masters Hughes and Sam Johnson, of Midway, mounted their favorite "bikes," last Saturday, and sped over to Squire J. Sam Noell's, at Hume, that being nigh unto Mudlick creek, a large stream fast gaining fame as a great fishing resort. but their experience that day in this particular line is not of a nature to advance it far up the column of promotion.

Our young friend, Will Hume, who has the contract for carrying the mail from Hamilton to Walton, has bought our old carrier, Walt Brown, out and can now be seen daily speeding on the route doing the public a great service and incidentally gathering a number of glittering shekels for himself. He is a good Bill and passes daily on schedule time, giving general satisfaction along the line.

The sale of George M. Moore, last Saturday, was largely attended and everything brought a good price. Virgil Dean, of the Painstick "deestrict," Gallatin county, was the auctioneer, whose inherent comicalities and excentric interjection of pointed witicisms held the vast crowd spellbound the entire day, and is measurably responsible for the large prices realized. Uncle Virge is acquainted with his avocation and did a good job for Mr. Moore.

Mrs. Hogan's smoke house came very near being destroyed by fire this morning. It caught from a pile of trash that was being burnt. The fire was discovered by Rev. Hoover and Willie Hughes just in time to save the building.

"It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," says Druggist A. W. Sawtelle, of Hartford, Conn. "A lady customer, seeing the remedy exposed for sale on my show case, said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore,' and she became so enthusiastic over its merits that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he sank at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever." Sold by W. F. McKim, Burlington; Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, C. S. Balsly, Bullittsville, O. N. Grant, Bellevne.

It is reported from the Kiowa and Comanche Agency Kansas that the Indians are starving for food. Money due them has not been paid, it is said, and their rations have been cut off. It is reported traders have refused them credit. Their squaws are begging for food.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MAY 9, 1900. NO. 29

THE base ball scores now divide space with other matters of importance in the daily papers.

IT now looks like the parties to the conspiracy to assassinate Goebel are trying to make Youtsey the scape-goat, but in doing that the proof shows that a large number of others were in the plot.

SENATOR R. O. COLEMAN, of Trimble county, has Congressional aspirations, it is said. He is a good man, but what elements of strength he expects to develop are not designated with the announcement of his candidacy.

BILLIE BRECKINRIDGE has just about got the Republican party in the Seventh District in his vest pocket. What he plans the Republicans try to execute. He has taken himself and his morals into the Republican camp for keeps.

THE trial of those persons indicted for the assassination of Senator Goebel will go to Scott county on a change of venue. Culton gave some very damaging testimony on the hearing of his application for bail. He was testifying on his own behalf.

THERE have been intimations that ex-President Cleveland desires the Democratic nomination for the Presidency again. This may be true, but he will not get it, for Mr. Bryan will be the Democrstic nominee so sure as he lives to see the nomination made.

THE results in the city and town elections in Indiana last week would be exceedingly gratifying to the Democrats had they any assurance they are an index to what the result in the State this fall will be. Local elections over there do not indicate anything.

There are at least two Democratic politicians in Covington who are said to be making a still hunt and hope to win the Congressional nomination on the dark horse plan, but the chances for the nomination of either of these along that or anyother line are decidedly remote. Recent experience proves that when a politician is astride a dark horse his motives are purely selfish, and he is liable to prove an enemy to the party nominee.

THE Republican State convention of Alabama, split and attempted to hold two conventions, and among the preliminary arrangements for the dual affair was a shooting scrap between the Sargeants-at-arms of the two factions, one of them being shot and seriously wounded. Two conventions were held, and the State will have two delegations at Philadelphia to help enliven the national assemblage.

IT is now frequently remarked how anxious some are to have the Democratic nomination for Congress made by a primary election, when only a short time since they did not consider that the people were of any consequence in the matter, and wanted the county committees to ignore the voter and select the delegates to the district convention, which scheme was carried into effect in Campbell and Kenton counties. It is strange that the chief promoters of such an undemocratic scheme should be so suddenly converted, but then the unexpected is always happening in politics.

IN this issue the RECORDER presents its readers with a good picture of Hon. D. Linn Gooch, of Covington, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this district. He is a Democrat without a flaw in his political record, and is making his canvass on his own merits rather than on the demerits of others. While he has no record as an office holder, he has, for years, been a hard worker for the cause of the Democratic party, as well as a liberal contributor of his own means in its behalf, and from the people with whom he has been for many years associated, come his recommendations as a man well qualified for the duties of the position to which he aspires. If the Democratic party nominates Mr. Gooch as its candidate for Congress this fall, it will honor one who is deserving, and will work faithfully that an old time majority may be rolled up in the Sixth District.

Editorial Paragraphs.

There seems to be a few holes in Lord Roberts' military net.

Roberts has not decided whom to blame for the Boers slipping away,

General Botha is a farmer. What would have happened to the British had he been a soldier?

It was hard lines on Long to be compelled to reprimand Chadwick for saying what Long himself believes.

When even the Presbyterians are preparing to change their creed, why should the Democrats be reproached if they choose to modify the Chicago platform.

The absent-minded beggar on the throne of Turkey declines to pay, pay, pay, and wants to know what we are going to do about it. By the way, what are we going to do about it?

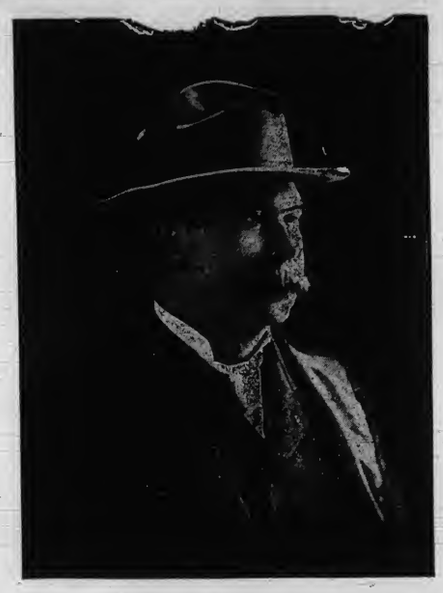
It isn't so much the fact that extra salaries or allowances were paid in Cuba, as it is that they were paid in such a hole and corner way and concealed from the public so long by juggling the published accounts.

Dewey recently accused McKinley of Influencing the Associated Press to minimize his trip to Atlanta, which, he says, was far more enthusiastic than the published accounts warranted the public in believing. What will he say about the accounts of his Chicago trip?

Senator Vest says it will be a lifetime sorrow to him that he was compelled to vote against his personal friend Quay, but that he could do nothing else without violating what he conceived to be his duty. This is a variation on the President's idea of plain duty, which is to support whatever is most expedient.

Inheritance taxes planned to bear most heavily on large fortunes, are increasing in favor, and if the supreme court sustains the tax of this character imposed by the war revenue act, it is probable that a large part of the government's income in the future will be derived from the enormous fortunes of the millionaires.

There is one thing about those southern floods that may prove more serious than has been supposed. Thousands of acres of cotton have been destroyed and there is likely to be a scarcity of cotton seed for replanting the next crop. Farmers ought to make sure that they will have enough seed before they sell any.



Everybody who knows has denied that Standard-oil-Danish-West-Indies story. Secretary Hay, for instance, says he never saw Mr. Rogers, and Mr. Rogers says he laid the matter before Secretary Hay, but never claimed to own as many as 26 Senators. The guilty parties had better get together and agree on their stories.

Secrerary Root wants to fight and kill somebody—anybody. He shakes his fist and waves the star spangled banner and dares "somebody" to violate the Monroe doctrine. If it was not election year the country might be seriously alarmed, but the McKinley tactics of "glorious diplomacy" and "aggression towards all" are too well known to fool the people much.

At the half-past eleven hour Congress passed the resolution extending the terms of army officers in Porto Rico and limiting the granting of franchises there. But it only did it after Senator Foraker had been to New York and secured the consent of the would-be franchise owners there, who insisted on certain amendments that knocked most of the value out of the limitations.

H. H. Rogers, of the Standard Oil Company, is said to have announced to the Danish government that twenty-six United States Senators stood ready to vote as the Company desired, and to have offered to lobby through the purchase of the Danish West Indies for ten per cent. of the proceeds. This is stated in an official report made to the Danish government by its special agent in the matter. The worst of the whole business is that Mr. Rogers' alleged statement is probably correct.

WILL the trusts have a member of the committee on resolutions in the Philadelphia convention? is asked. Yea, verily; more than one.

COL. D. LINN GOOCH.

Colonel D. Linn Gooch, Democratic candidate for nomination for Congress to succeed Albert S. Berry is a thorough Kentucky gentleman. He entered the contest in response to the demands of the Kenton County Democrats and many party leaders in other counties of the district. He was the choice of the late lamented Governor Geobel as he expressed his desire to many political friends that Col. Gooch be elected to Congress from the Sixth District of Kentucky. For Col. Gooch, Governor Gobel entertained the highest regard and to him imparted many secrets that the distinguished martyr entrusted to no other friend.

Col. Gooch was born in McLean county, Ky., forty-six years ago and has resided in Kentucky most all his life. He has always taken an active interest in Democratic party affairs: he has been in the thickest of the fray when most needed. He has been a constant worker, and a contributor to the party funds for many years: he has never been known to turn away any man seeking money for Democratic legitmate expenses.

Col. Gooch knows of no relative by the name of Gooch who is not a Democrat: he therefore comes of a family Democratic to the core. He is never offensive in politics and is well liked by representatives of all parties. He is always obliging and courteous and is never better satisfied than when doing a kind act or helping some friend or acquaintance in distress.

Col. Gooch is President of the Cincinnati Drug and Chemical Co.; he has built up a magnificent business and is a prime favorite in both commercial and social circles. He is at all times modest and unassuming and possesses a strong will power which he exercires for good. He is one of the leading and original free silver men of Kentucky. Long before the Chicago platform was adopted, he began the fight for those cardinal principles of Democracy which have made an unrivalled champion of that great leader—William Jennings Bryan. Col Gooch is now serving his third term as President of the Jefferson Democratic Club, the largest political club in Kentucky, having a membership of over 1400. He was twice elected to the office without opposition—something never before known in the history of the club.

Col. Gooch's campaign is being conducted on honorable, broad and generous principles. he is insisting upon every candidate being accorded fair treatment and an honest count. He says that the contest shall be one of merit and that the people shall rule. It is his highest ambition to be the choice of the whole people. He stands squarely upon the platform advocated by his devoted friend—the late Governor Goebel: he believes that the great common people should always rule. He says if elected to Congress he will serve the people first, last and all the time. He has never allied himself with any clique or combination, political or otherwise. He is free to do the work of the people in Congress and says that no Trust or Monopoly can expect favor at his hands, and if elected he will vote for all measures advocated by the Democratic party and will with devotion and consistency follow that noble leader—Senator J. C. S. Blackburn. In Col. Gooch's own language, "would rather be right as President of the Jefferson Club than wrong as a Congressman."

THE following from the London Echo was left in its stock of blood and murder declarations made for weekly use during the campaign last fall, and it has worked it over and published it, no doubt, for the purpose of intimidating the Supreme Court:

"The battle for civil liberty in Kentucky will just have begun if the Supreme Court decides that it has no jurisdiction, and our enemies who think they have won their victory will wake up to a realization that they are woefully mistaken. The people of Kentucky intend to restore civil liberty if it has to be done by an armed revolution. Stick a pin here, will you?"

THE Porto Ricans are under the rule of a new set of carpet-baggers, and they are trying to figure out wherein they have been benefitted by throwing off the Spanish yoke, only to be compelled to allow another set of strangers to grow rich off of their labor. The sympathy for Porto Rico on the part of this country soon disappeared when the trusts demanded a halt be made and that the advantages that would naturally accrue to the island by reason of its new relation to this country should be hedged about and their development prevented. "Plain duty" cuts no ice with trusts, and to become law it is only necessary for their will to become known in this country.

Cain Rice aged 73 years, a farmer of Knob Lick neighborhood, Bath county, has made a record in farm work this spring in spite of his advanced age. He has, by himself, this spring, broken ground for and planted twenty acres of oats, besides doing considerable other farm work. He can stand flat-footed on the ground and jumb astride a horse.

State Senator T. M. Hill, of Campbell county, died last Friday morning, after an illness which began Jany 3. He was sworn in as Senator but was never present at any of the sessions.

The following is a brief outline of the platform which will be prepared for adoption by the National Populist Convention this week.

"Public ownership of all public utilities and monopolies.

"Public ownership of mines, oil-wells and the natural sources of wealth.

"A public monetary system—all money to be issued by the Government direct to the people.

"Exemption of homestead free from taxation, execution and mortgage, and a graduated land tax to prevent monopoly.

"Public lands to hold forever the property of the people and not to be alienated to individuals and corporations.

"Work for the unemployed at fair wages on works of public improvement.

"Eight-hour workday, the opposition of child and convict labor, and opposition to the contract system of public works.

"Public tenements for the cities.

"Public dispensary liquor system.

"Liberal advancement of public education and arts.

"Inventions to be go free to the people, the inventor to be remunerated by the public."

It will conclude with a plank declaring for direct legislation, unqualified and imperative, and the purity and freedom of the ballot, and pledging to submit to a direct vote of the people all reforms.

FROM GRANT COUNTY.

[Courier.]

The committee which went before the State Board of Equalization last week at Frankfort were not extraordinarily successful. The proposed raise was 20 per cent on land and personalty and the Board after hearing the committee through reduced it to 15 per cent. The raise still leaves the assessed valuation of Grant county lower than it was last year by several thousand dollars. The entire shortage this year was on farm lands.

The Williamstown & Owenton Telephone Company was incorporated early in the week with a capital stock of $25,000. R. H. Elliston was elected President, J. T. Scott Vice-President, and J. C. Brown Secretary and General Manager.

A Woman's Awful Peril.

There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation" were the startling words heard by Mrs. I. B. Hunt, of Lime Ridge, Wis., from her doctor after he had vainly tried to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. Gall stones had formed and she constantly grew worse. Then she began to use Electric Bitters which wholly cured her. It's a wonderful Stomach, Liver and Kidney remedy. Cures Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite. Try it. Only 50c. Guaranteed. For sale at W. F. McKim's, Burlington; J. G. Oelsner's, Florence; M. J. Crouch's, Union.

The State Board of Equalization has jumped upon Carroll county again with both feet and has taken the farmers on an aerial flight so far above terra firma that they will fall hard, even if the balloon isn't punctured. The said State board has increased the value of farm lands 20 per cent above the value fixed by the assessor and the same on personal property and four per cent. on town lots—making a total of $1.22½ on the $100 on lands and personal property and 100½ on town lots. Any farmer who doesn't like this raise must sell his farm, invest his money in bonds, notes, etc., and perjure his soul in order to evade the payment of these taxes.—News.

"It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," says Druggist A. W. Sawtelle, of Hartford, Conn. "A lady customer, seeing the remedy exposed for sale on my show case, said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore,' and she became so enthusiastic over its merits that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he sank at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever." Sold by W. F. McKim, Burlington; Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, C. S. For the year 1899 there were 130,656 births in Scotland and 79,549 deaths.

In a new airship, designed by a Hoytian, a series of fans are mounted in a car partially supported by a gas balloon, the fans being used to drive air through adjustable pipes, which are adapted to turn toward any point to move the ship in the opposite direction.

In at least one respect Gen. Cronje the new Napoleon at St. Helena, will be better off than the one whose fortune was finally overthrown at Waterloo. The island has just been connected by cable with England and the Cape, so that the exiled Boer leader may keep in touch with current events.

A modern railway mail car, equipped with the latest contrivances, such as vestibules, automatic couplers, airbrakes, etc., costs between $5,000 and $6,000. The government pays for the use of railway mail cars at the rate of $40 a year for a 50-foot car per track mile, and $50 per year per track mile for a 60-foot car.

The monster telescope at the Paris exposition which will bring the moon within thirty-six miles, is three times the length of the largest of its predecessors, the Yerkes telescope at Chicago. It is 197 feet long, 5 feet in diameter, and weighs 21 tons. The lenses, the largest in existence, measure over 49 inches in diameter and weigh 1,320 pounds.

Mr. Wu Ting Fang, the Chinese minister, who will go to St. Petersburg in the early summer as the diplomatic representative of his country, is having built in New York, along lines planned by himself, a gorgeous automobile. It will be of the phaeton type. The body will be painted a brilliant, oriental yellow, and the velvet upholstering will be of the same hue. It will seat four persons.

Within the next six months Chicago hopes to bury thirty miles of overhead telephone, telegraph and electric light circuits, at an estimated cost of half a million dollars. At from 100 to 180 separate wires are on the lines of poles which are to be removed, the total length of wire actually put underground will exceed 4,500 miles. There are now about 500 miles of pole lines in the city limits, carrying approximately 100,000 miles of separate wires.

Judge McIlvaine, of Pittsburgh, has roused consternation among lawyers in that city by declining to allow fees for two lawyers in the settlement of an estate where only the services of one were required. He also ruled that a lawyer who has rendered professional services for an executor or administrator is not a creditor of the estate. The claims of the two attorneys in the case at issue aggregated $2,100 and the court scaled the fees down to $300.

Col. Daniel S. Lamont and William C. Whitney, each at one time prominent in national affairs, declare that they are no longer in politics, though most people give them credit for still wielding great influence. Not so with J. T. Sloat Fassett, also of New York state, and some time ago a republican leader. As he himself says: "I have been politically dead as a mackeral for eight years," meaning since his defeat for governor by the late Roswell P. Flower.

The cocoanut, commercially speaking, may be all used, or a good deal of it may be wasted. But ingenious manufacturers have learned that the hard hull has many uses. It can be ground fine and used to adulterate brown sugar. It may not add any to the sweetness of the sugar, but it adds to the weight and is entirely harmless. It may be ground a little coarser, and is of use to make coffee weigh more. The hulls may be ground very fine mixed with a special glue, submitted to hydraulic pressure, and become very valuable to German manufacturers for lifts of shoes.

Thirty-four state legislatures have asked congress to propose an amendment to the constitution making the senatorial office elective by the people. There would be no difficulty in getting a ratification of such an amendment by the states. The stumbling block is the senate, composed of senators who owe their seats to the present system and who are not sure of their ability to hold their seats under popular election. The feeling against the abuses of the present system is strong and growing much stronger.

THE BOERS RESISTING.

British Troops Forced to Fight for Every Mile of Territory Gained.

Lord Roberts Has Moved His Headquarters and Sent His Dispatch Dated at Vet River—The Latest News From the Front.

London, May 7.—The war office has published the following dispatch from Lord Roberts, dated Vet river, Saturday, May 5, 7:15 p. m.:

"I marched here to-day with Pole-Carew's division. Headquarters and Wavell's brigade of the seventh division are two miles in the rear. Maxwell's brigade of the same division is the same distance to our right.

"The enemy are in considerable strength on the opposite bank of the river. Our guns engaged theirs for some three hours without our being able to force a passage of the river, but shortly before dusk the mounted infantry under Gen. Hutton turned the enemy's right and in a very dashing manner pushed across the river under heavy shell and musketry fire.

"We are now bivouacking for the night within three miles of Vet river. Our casualties, I hope, are not numerous.

"Hamilton was in action yesterday and succeeded in preventing a junction of two Boer forces by a well-executed movement by some of the Household cavalry, the 12th lanciers and Kitchener's horse, who charged a body of the enemy and inflicted serious loss. The enemy fled, leaving their dead on the field and their wounded to be attended by our doctors. Hamilton was advancing this morning to a difficult drift over the Kleniot river.

"MacDonald's Highland brigade dislodged the enemy on the right flank under cover of the naval guns, in which operation the Black Watch distinguished themselves and were very skillfully led.

"Hunter reports that Barton's brigade was heavily engaged this morning two miles north of Rooidan. The enemy's position was quite four miles long and strongly held. He states that our men marched magnificently and carried ridge after ridge in grand style.

"Casualties in this force, in Hamilton's and Hunter's will be reported as soon as possible.

"Capt. Miller, who was taken prisoner near Thaba N'Chu, has been sent to Rundle's camp by the enemy with a severe wound in the abdomen.

"Brabant reports that one sergeant and three men were captured on May 3 while on patrol, and that one of them, who had been brutally ill treated and left for dead by the Boers, was found the following day.

"Lieut. Lilley, Victoria mounted rifles, reported missing, was found at Brandfort, dangerously wounded, and has been most carefully attended by the Netherlands ambulance."

Warrenton, May 6.—Yesterday Gen. Barton drove from 2,000 to 3,000 Boers from hilly positions at Rooidan, where they awaited them. They retreated after stiff fighting, leaving a number of dead on the field. The British casualties were slight. Gen. Barton is still pursuing.

Windsorton and Klipdam have been evacuated.

Gen. Paget's brigade is attacking the Boer position at Warrenton.

The engagement yesterday was severe, and lasted from 9 in the morning until 4 in the afternoon. More than once the British infantry were obliged to engage the Boers at close quarters, and the Boers only retired when their retreat was nearly cut off. The British losses were five killed and 23 wounded, mostly Welch fusiliers. The British took a batch of prisoners, including the Swedish ambulance, which they allowed to return. The Boers in their hurried retreat left 13 dead.

Thaba N'Chu, May 5.—Gen. Rundle, who has been pursuing the Boers with the seventeenth brigade, two batteries and contingents of the yeomanry and mounted infantry, succeeded in reaching them with his artillery and forced them to leave their positions. The yeomanry are making a long detour in pursuit. The result is not known.

Vet River, May 6.—Yesterday the British, after a long march, encountered the Boers holding Vet river with six guns, two being of long range. An artillery duel ensued Meanwhile Gen. Hutton, after a sharp engagement, crossed the river on the left just before sunset. The Boers retreated during the night.

CYCLONES IN KANSAS.

Half a Dozen of Them Swept That State and Nebraska—Some Lives Were Lost and Much Property Damaged.

Kansas City, Mo., May 7.—Half a dozen distinct tornadoes occurred in Central Kansas Sunday afternoon, following a day of exceedingly high temperature. Two people are known to have been killed and three injured. Wires are down in the affected districts, making it impossible to accurately sum up the damage done.

A special from Ellinwood, Kan., says: "At 5:30 o'clock a tornado visited Logan township. It formed a few miles south of Ellinwood and passed over the western portion of the city. At the Cheyenne bottoms, six miles north, it divided in six different directions and destroyed the residences of George and William Helfrich. George Helfrich and wife were instantly killed. William Helfrich, his wife and child were badly hurt. The storm next struck the farm of Carl Schneider, destroying the outbuildings and leaving the dwelling untouched. Further into the country a number of others are reported killed or injured. A large amount of stock was killed.

A special from Larned, Kan., says: "A tornado passed southeast of here at 6 o'clock and struck near Pawnee Rock, three miles distant. The wires are down and it is impossible to learn the extent of the damage done. Four separate funnel-shaped clouds are reported to have been seen in the direction of Great Bend."

Other storms are reported near Kanopolis in Ellsworth county, and near Brookville, in Saline county. Near Kanopolis eight distinct funnel-shaped clouds developed within a radius of 20 miles, four of them large ones and two of which are known to have traveled over the earth for a space of 25 minutes. One of the storms tore down all the outbuildings, granaries and windmills on the Waite farm, three miles north of Kanopolis.

Omaha, Neb., May 7.—A special from Beaver City, Neb., gives further details of the Wilsonville tornado. Many farm houses were destroyed. The hailstones were as large as baseballs and were driven through roofs. The twister appeared after the bombardment and took a northeasterly course. It was funnel-shaped and did damage over a wide area. Farmers west and north of Wilsonville were the greatest sufferers. Many people fled to their cellars. A Towers' large house was destroyed. Towers, his wife and daughter were seriously, though not fatally, injured. Houses and barns of H. H. Farrish, H. H. Corbett and H. A. Bourne were destroyed. The latter was seriously injured.

MILLION DOLLAR LOSS.

The Mallory Line Steamship Pier on the East River, New York, Is Completely Destroyed.

New York, May 7.—A fire that started at the river end of the Mallory line steamship pier, at the foot of Maiden lane and the East river, early Sunday morning, completely destroyed the pier and its valuable contents.

Several barges which were moored near the pier were also destroyed, and many rescues of their captains and of the members of the families on board were made. Only one life was lost. The 9-months-old daughter of Capt. Charles Lochs, of the barge Sherwood, was drowned.

The Mallory line pier was 200 feet long and 50 feet wide. The pier shed was filled with valuable freight of a miscellaneous character, but mostly cotton, all of which was entirely destroyed. The loss is estimated at $1,000,000.

CULTON REFUSED BAIL

The Prisoner, After a Hearing of Several Days, Ordered to Jail.

Sheriff Suter, J. B. Matthews, Constable Davis Harrold, and Others Give Their Testimony in the Case.

Frankfort, Ky., May 4.—W. H. Culton's attorneys announced that they would insist on offering evidence in the case of their client, and the defendant himself took the stand. He said he had never conspired with any of the defendants or any one else to kill Mr. Goebel and had nothing to do with the killing.

Frankfort, Ky., May 5.—Hearing of the evidence in the Culton case was resumed Friday morning. Capt. J. F. Howe, of Barbourville, a military officer, was the first witness Friday. He testified regarding Caleb and John Power's coming to him ten days before the assassination and trying to get him to bring his company to Frankfort disguised as citizens.

McKinzie Todd, private secretary to Gov. Taylor, said he saw Culton and Youtsey at the governor's office several times. Did not know Jim or Berry Howard. Saw many armed men in the governor's office the day of the big mountaineer excursion. Asked if he saw any guns in the office of the secretary of state, witness said he saw two there on the Saturday prior to the assassination. Youtsey was in the room and later picked up one of the guns and took a position near the window. Witness had left the room, but could see Youtsey, who was acting strangely.

Frankfort, Ky., May 6.—Saturday being the last day of the April term of the Franklin circuit court, and knowing a decision would be handed down in the Culton case for bail, the room was rapidly filling when Judge Cantrill called the court to order.

Constable Davis Harrod stated that he entered the executive building a few minutes after the shot was fired and saw a man run out of the secretary of state's office and run into the basement. He then tried to enter the governor's reception room, but was stopped by some men and a gun was dropped in his face. He didn't recognize any of the men.

Sheriff Suter told of going to the state house and assisting in the arrest of Harlan Whittuker on the day of the assassination. He also told of going to the state house on March 10 with warrants for Caleb Powers and John Davis, and being refused admission by Lieut. Col. Morrow, who said he was acting under Gov. Taylor's orders.

F. Wharton Golden followed Sheriff Suter. A number of letters from Gov. Taylor to Golden, in which the former pledged him his support and told Golden he was interested in his future, were read.

At 9:30 o'clock Culton was ordered by Judge Cantrill to be confined in the Franklin county jail until the September term of the Franklin county court. The commonwealth announced that it desired to make no argument. The defense asked for time to present its case through Attorney Ramsey. At 8 o'clock at night Mr. Ramsey began his argument and spent one hour and a half on the effort. It was an eloquent appeal.

In giving his decision at the conclusion of Mr. Ramsey's argument Judge Cantrill said with much feeling:

"I have not only been pleased and gratified, but I have been touched by a very able and eloquent presentation of the case for this defendant. It would not be proper for this court to comment upon the testimony in this case, nor to indicate how much of this great volume of evidence which has been submitted would be competent upon a final trial.

"There is one matter, however, which counsel failed to note, and the court, in referring to that, did not undertake to give weight upon a final trial of that particular branch of the testimony, but in this case, to the mind of the court, the testimony of Mr. Park, which was not contradicted nor in any way questioned, as to what transpired between him and the defendant at Louisville, to my mind, would preclude any court from granting this defendant bail. I regret exceedingly to have to deny this application. He is a young man with a young family, and, as the proof shows, with an afflicted wife. And the sympathies of every man must go out to a defendant under that state of facts.

"Yet the court is organized only for the purpose of weighing the matters between the defendant and the commonwealth, and under the obligations that I feel that I owe to the people of this community and to the whole commonwealth, I do not conceive that under that state of case the court would be authorized to grant this defendant bail."

Revolutionary War Claim Paid.

Washington, May 5.—A bill to pay $2,998 to Rachel Wilson, of Harrison county, West Virginia, for the services of her father, Col. Benjamin Wilson, in the revolutionary war, was passed in the senate. The beneficiary of the bill is one of 29 children of Col. Wilson.

He Was Secretary of War Under President Cleveland's First Administration.

Boston, May 7.—William Crowninshield Endicott, secretary of war under President Cleveland's first administration, died at his residence in this city Sunday afternoon of pneumonia, aged 73 years.

Although Mr. Endicott's system had been somewhat enfeebled by an attack of the grip, from which he suffered last winter, he had been in apparently good bodily health up to last Wednesday, when he took his customary drive. Shortly after he was taken ill and pneumonia developed.

The funeral will be private and burial will be in Salem. Mr. Endicott's daughter, the wife of Joseph Chamberlain, the English secretary of state for the colonies, was notified by cable. Mrs. Endicott was Ellen Peabody, daughter of George Peabody, the philanthropist.

THE "O. K." UPHELD.

The Appellate Court at Chicago Holds That It Is Generally Understood as an Indorsement.

Chicago, May 6.—Use of the letters "O. K.," signifying "all correct," receives the indorsement of Judges Horton, Freeman and Shepard, of the branch appellate court, and is the point on which their affirmation of a decision of the circuit court rests. The question was raised on the appeal of the Davis Paint Manufacturing Co. from the decree of the circuit court restraining the collection of a justice of the peace judgment from the Metzger Linseed Oil Co. The decree was entered in the circuit court on the presentation of a draft of the order bearing the letters "O. K.," followed by the signature of the counsel for the Davis Paint Co. The decree was amended, and the ruling of the branch appellate court restores its original decree.

In declaring the meaning of the letters "O. K.," Judge Horton quoted the dictionary, saying, "All right; now commonly used as an indorsement, as on a bill."

He was for a long time chairman of the judiciary committee of the house, and was regarded as one of the best constitutional lawyers in public life.

This extension was arranged for in view of the conviction that no legislation upon the treaty can be secured during the present session of congress. The extension will prolong the period allowed for the exchange of ratifications until the expiration of President McKinley's term of office.

A Pretty Old Horse.

Rev. Frank Gunsaulus at one time believed that his parish work would be made much easier for him if he possessed a horse on which to ride from place to place, so he determined to purchase one. Now what Rev. Mr. Gunsaulus didn't know about a horse would fill a large volume, and as might have been expected he fell into the hands of the philistines. He saw nothing wrong with the horse, however. He had told the man of whom he bought it that he was not used to riding, and so wanted a quiet animal, and in this respect, at least, the horse fully came up to the requirements. One day Rev. Mr. Gunsaulus' father came to visit him, and the horse was proudly shown to him. Gunsaulus pere looked the horse over carefully.

"Well, Frank," he said, at last, "he isn't much on looks, is he?"

"No," answered Frank, "but then, you know, father, the Saviour rode a horse that was anything but handsome."

"Yes, I've heard that," said the old man, reflectively. "Frank," he added, suddenly, "you've got a treasure. I'll bet this is the same horse."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

NOTES FROM WASHINGTON

Comment and Criticism of Administration Methods by Capital Correspondent.

WILD EXTRAVAGANCE OF REPUBLICANS.

The Revenues of Cuba Largely Absorbed by War Department Favorites—More Military Elegance Provided For—Philippine News Is Being Withheld.

[Special Correspondence.]

Already there are indications of the extravagance and disregard of law which are sure to follow in the wake of applied imperialism. The republican majority in congress being forced to consider some of the extravagant expenditures in Cuba, though they are very reluctant to do so, fearing the effect which the inevitable disclosures will have upon the presidential campaign.

Mr. McKinley, with his usual lack of tact, brought this discussion upon himself by sending a verbose message to congress asking permission to have military officers hold over in Porto Rico and occupy the civil offices at double salary until appointments were made from Washington. This precipitated a disussion which brought up the Cuban matter. There have been stories afloat in Washington for some time about the lavish expenditure which characterized the war department puts who are supposed to be giving Cuba an idea of what self government means.

In the case of Cuba, especially, the administration always has fervently disclaimed any desire to exploit imperialist notions, and has often assured both the Cubans and the people of the United States that its policy in that island was purely benevolent.

Of course that may all be, but the American officers seem to be having a pretty good time there. There is a general desire among the democrats in congress to find out just what the administration and war department have been doing with the revenues of Cuba. Secretary Root promises that a detailed account shall soon be submitted to the senate, and it is expected that it will make very interesting reading.

Luxury in Cuba.

It is known that the disbursements of the Cuban funds up to the close of 1899 reached the tidy sum of $14,000,000, and a great portion of that amount has been spent in paying the salaries and incidentals relative to American occupation of the island. It is said that Gov. Wood manages to draw about $17,000 a year from various sources, and other officials in proportion. The governor general's beautiful palace at Havana has been refitted for American use in a style which would make Gen. Weyler turn green with envy.

The meat of the whole proposition lies in the fact that these army officers are violating section 1269 of the Revised Statutes, which says: "No allowance shall be made to officers in addition to their pay." It is said that the war department will try to shift responsibility on the matter by saying that it permitted the extra allowance from Cuban revenues after the attorney general had so advised, and that because the amounts were taken from the Cuban revenues no law of the United States was violated.

The matter of the Cuban extravagance is not in itself so important, it is merely a practical illustration of what is bound to be done all along the line if the imperialism is to be the policy of this country.

In this matter the administration and its department officers set themselves above congress and outside statute law, and used the revenues which should have been held in trust to pay the debts of Cuba and rebuild its shattered industries.

The same thing will be done in Porto Rico under the new tariff and government law. The war of subjugation is being carried on in the Philippines at an immense cost, for the express purpose of exterminating the natives who have energy and spirit enough to desire independence. That kind of natives do not lend themselves well to trust and corporate exploitation.

When the Cuban matter came up in the senate, Sen. Platt was injudicious enough to put the administration policy in a nutshell. He declared that the "president could do as he pleased in Cuba without being responsible to congress for his action."

The democrats have contended all along that imperialism meant the assumption of this irresponsible power by the president, and that it would be used to plunder and oppress the inhabitants of the insular possesions.

Military Elegance.

The army and navy appropriation bills show the same wild desire to spend money in building up bulwarks for an autocratic administration. The naval bill especially provides for the most luxurious quarters for a lot of pampered cadets at Annapolis. Millions of dollars are asked to build barracks for a few young men who will thus become unfitted for actual hard service, should they ever be needed.

The republicans think that they have succeeded in leaving the way open to pay any price they choose for armor plate, more than $545 a ton, should the Carnegie and Bethlehem combination desire it. To be sure, a strict construction of the amendment on that point as it now stands in the house would limit the war department to $300 a ton, as provided by the last congress, but the construction is sure to be made liberal enough by the war department to accommodate the manufacturers of armor plate.

These are only a few items on the list of expenditures proposed by this republican congress. The total will be so stupendous that the mind simply cannot grasp it with any degree of definiteness. It will be a record of millions spent in every direction where there was a trust influence to be served and subsidies outright to those who would not be satisfied with ordinary legislative appropriations.

This policy will enable Mark Hanna to assess the trusts for the big campaign fund which he considers necessary and the voters will have the melancholy satisfaction of reflecting that in the final analysis they, and not the trusts, foot the bills.

The Philippine Situation.

The news from the Philippines indicates that the new commission will be wise in staying in Manila for awhile after its arrival. The Filipinos are rising in every province in Luzon. Not 20 miles from Manila they are tearing up railroads and ambushing American troops.

The war department reports indicate unusually heavy losses among the Filipinos and it is a significant fact that our soldiers never take any Filipino prisoners nor are there any Filipino wounded in our hospitals. What becomes of them? Surely, the occasional reports of shooting down Filipino prisoners does not mean that the administration has applied the policy of extermination in imitation of British methods of dealing with natives in Africa.

It is going to be very difficult from now on to get any real news of what is going on in the Philippines. The war department will censor the facts with great care and every precaution will be taken to give the people as little information as possible during the presidential campaign.

KENNAUGH.

Hanna's Leadership.

We are glad to see that there are signs of a revolt among the house republicans against the leadership of Mark Hanna. It is known that the Ohio senator is very anxious to secure the passage of the ship subsidy bill and it is probable that the bill will be pressed to a vote in the senate, though the assent of a majority of the senate republicans has been given with reluctance. But in the house the spirit is much less tame. In that body it is felt that the senate is too much disposed to control legislation and that the influence of Hanna is too strong. Moreover, the representatives from the western and middle states know that the bill is unpopular with their constituents. We are told that at least 50 republican members are pledged against a consideration of the bill in the house. This is, indeed, good news. It is time the republican party were beginning to realize that the people are very much in earnest in their opposition to this bill. They know that it is not in their interest, but that it is being backed by railroad and Standard Oil magnates, because they would make money out of it at the expense of the people. Nor can they be made to believe that Mark Hanna's advocacy of the bill is entirely disinterested.—Indianapolis News.

As to Expansion.

"The territorial growth of the United States heretofore has been simply an acquisition of contiguous territory to provide homes for our own people, and where states were to be erected which were in time to become a part of the American union on terms of absolute equality with all other states. No thought has ever entered the mind of any man in the acquisition of Louisiana, or the territory we acquired from Mexico, that an alien people were to be held in a condition of vassalage perpetually and controlled by the arbitrary will of the American congress as Great Britain governs her colonies. This sort of growth or territorial expansion was strictly in accord with every principle of government for which we contend now. This Porto Rican policy, however, is an absolute departure, and totally different in all respects from anything that has been done heretofore.—Senator James K. Jones, in National Watchman.

—Some of the administration's acts which the republican platform will not indorse are the pro-British conduct of the state department, the attitude of hostility against the Boer republics, the Maerum incident, the favoritism shown by the secretary of the treasury for the Standard Oil banks, Alger's beef contracts, rotten transports and plague ship scandals, Root's dredging permits and Griggs' crusade of passivity against the trusts. But the republicans can't put everything they have done into their platform. It would read too much like a treatise on crime if they did so.—Kansas City Times.

—Imperialism has spread by infection from one jingo-crazed country to another until it has come to be recognized as an international "principle" that weaker nations may be robbed of their liberties as well as their lands in order that the strong nations may "compensate" each other and maintain peace among themselves, based on a copartnership in conquest, annexation and plunder. And it is into this vicious maze of imperial "world politics" that the McKinley administration is leading us.—Baltimore Sun.

—No people in the world have ever fought for independence and self-government more deserving of American sympathy than the brave Dutchmen of the South African republics. The McKinley administration is pro-British and its influence will probably muzzle the American congress so it will not declare the judgment and wishes of the American people. Even Russia is likely to be ahead of us in sending governmental good wishes to the Boers.—Pittsburgh Post.

TROOPS WERE ACTIVE.

Gen. Otis Makes a Report of What Transpired in the Philippines During April.

Washington, May 5.—The war department received the following report from Gen. Otis:

"During the month of April we captured from the enemy 30 pieces of artillery, 1,269 rifles, considerable ammunition and a large amount of stores and other property. During the early portion of the month the enemy was active in the extreme northern and southern parts of Luzon and in some of the Visayan islands.

"Our reported losses for the month are 13 enlisted men killed and 3 officers and 24 enlisted men wounded. The rumored recent loss in Samar of 19 killed and a number wounded has not yet been reported. This is due to small detachments scouting in the mountains in the interior of the island. The enemy's losses, officially reported, were 1,721 killed, wounded and captured. Leading Filipinos express confidence in the early pacification of the islands. They say the war has terminated. Leading insurgents are surrendering."

BUSINESS FAILURES.

Bradstreet's Review Says That for April They Were Fewer Than for a Number of Years Past.

New York, May 5.—Bradstreet's review of the failures for the month of April says:

Business failures in April were not only fewer than in any corresponding month for a number of years past, but they were 13 per cent. smaller in number than in March, and were, in fact, the lightest recorded in any month since September, last year, when business embarrassments and liabilities were the smallest reported in any single month for at least seven years past. Liabilities showed even a larger shrinkage from the preceding month of March than did failures themselves, the decrease being nearly 21 per cent., but, compared with April a year ago, the falling off is only a fractional one, this being due mainly to the occurrence of a few large failures in New York city and Boston, none of which, however, was significant of any particular change or tendency in the general course of business.

SENSATIONAL SHOOTING.

A Baptist Minister Almost Instantly Killed a District Court Stenographer.

Charleston, S. C., May 5.—A sensational shooting occurred at Bamberg, this state. Rev. W. E. Johnson, pastor of the Baptist church, shot and almost instantly killed W. T. Bellinger, stenographer of this judicial district. Trouble between the two began over the painting of a fence between the premises of John R. Bellinger, father of the deceased, and the Baptist parsonage. Bellinger met Rev. Mr. Johnson, who was armed with a double-barreled shotgun, and a few words passed, which led to firing by both men. When assistance arrived Bellinger was dying.

Johnson surrendered to the sheriff. Who shot first is not known, but it is generally claimed that Johnson shot only once. Bellinger's pistol had four empty chambers. The families connected with the affair are the most influential in the city.

BEEF SUPPLIES.

Jack Dalton, Noted Pioneer and Alaskan Explorer, to Furnish Military Forces on Yukon River.

Seattle, Wash., May 5.—The contract for supplying the government military forces on the American Yukon with beef supplies has been awarded to Jack Dalton, the noted Alaskan pioneer and explorer. It involves $100,000, and provides that Dalton shall furnish the soldiers at Fort Egbert, Circle City, Rampart, and Fort Gibbon with all their fresh beef from July 1, 1900, to July 1, 1901. The contract is one of the largest ever let by the government in connection with Alaskan affairs, and the first shipment will be made from Seattle early in June.

Boutell Renominated.

Chicago, May 5.—Congressman Henry S. Boutell was Friday renominated by acclamation in the Sixth district republican convention. Resolutions were passed endorsing the St. Louis platform, the administration of President McKinley, favoring a reduction of the war revenue tax, urging the restriction of trusts and expressing sympathy for the Boers.

Special Election Ordered.

Montgomery, Ala., May 5.—Gov Johnston has fixed August 6 as the day for a special election to choose a successor to Gen. Joseph Wheeler a congressman from the Eighth Alabama district.

MILITARY LEGISLATION.

The Senate Passes a Bill Which Completely Reorganizes Army Staff Arrangements.

Washington, May 5.—The session of the senate was rendered especially notable by the passage, after a debate lasting only three hours, of the army reorganization bill. In military circles the measure is regarded as one of the most important of the present session. It practically revolutionizes the present staff arrangement of the army. It proposes to change the present system of permanent appointments in certain staff corps to one of detail by a gradual process as the officers now in those corps go out of active service. As vacancies occur in departments of the adjutant general, the inspector general, quartermaster general and commissary general they are to be filled by details from the line, the details to be temporary and not to exceed four years.

The new system is not applied to the corps of engineers, medical department, pay department or judge advocate general's department. The bill discontinues the regimental organization of the artillery and establishes an artillery corps of two branches, viz.: 126 batteries of coast artillery and 15 batteries of field artillery, with a total of 17,448 men. It provides for an increase of 100 in the corps of cadets at West Point, two at large from each state and 10 more to the present number of 20 from the United States at large. The rank of the commanding general of the army is raised to that of lieutenant general, and that of the adjutant general to major general, the latter being the incumbency of the present adjutant general, Gen. Corbin. The president is empowered to place on the retired list any officer who has been suspended from duty by sentence of court-martial or by legislative order in mitigation of such sentence, for a period extending to or within one year of the time of his compulsory retirement for age. This is well understood to apply to Commissary Eagan.

An amendment creating a veterinary corps for the army, consisting of a colonel and 35 other commissioned officers, was attached to the bill after a spirited debate, the amendment being adopted by a vote of 25 to 23.

FATAL NEW YORK FIRE.

Four Persons Were Killed and the Fifth Lies Fatally Injured in a Hospital.

New York, May 5.—Four persons were killed in fires in this city Thursday night and early Friday morning, and a fifth lies fatally injured in a hospital. At a raging house fire in South street, John Curran, a marine engineer, was burned to death, and Fireman Daniel Mullin was thrown from a ladder, receiving injuries from which he has died. Fireman James Fitzpatrick was fatally injured by the overturning of a hose truck which he was driving. An explosion wrecked the fat and tallow factory of Joseph Stern & Co., in West 40th street, and two men are believed to be buried under the ruins. They are Thomas McGuire and Joseph Drum. A gang of men worked all night in the ruins in a vain effort to recover the bodies.

Fought the Twenty-Five Rounds.

New York, May 5.—Joe Walcott and Mysterious Billy Smith fought 25 rounds at catchweights before the Broadway Athletic club, and Walcott got the decision. This was their fourth meeting. They fought two draws, and Smith gained the decision the third time they got together. Smith did not fight with his usual snap and vigor, but he put up a very game battle. At the end of the bout Smith's body was covered with blood and his face was besmeared, while the black body of Walcott did not show a mark.

Big Coal Shipment.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 5.—The British steamer Accomac has been chartered to load 3,500 tons of anthracite coal at this port for Cronstadt, Russia, at the rate of 17 shillings a ton. This charter calls for June shipment, and will be the first of a large quantity of coal that is about to be shipped from here to Russia ports in the Baltic Sea.

Pierced His Heart.

CELLULOSE DUST.

It Exploded and Wrecked a Factory at Owensboro, Ky.—Six Men Injured, One Fatally.

Owensboro, Ky., May 5.—The Marsden cellulose works, the largest of its kind in the United States, which was completely destroyed by fire three years ago, was again threatened with destruction. The materials used are of a highly combustible nature, and the air charged with flying cellulose dust exploded by spontaneous combustion, hurling one man through a window. Building No. 4, the largest of the plant, was so badly wrecked that if used again it must be rebuilt. Six men were severely burned by the explosion and their clothing took fire. One man, Frank Straner, ran along the roof with his clothes on fire. He will die.

The plant has its own water tower, which, with the city fire department, played upon the cellulose with which the building was filled, holding the fire in check. Much valuable machinery was destroyed. The damage to the building was $10,000.

DYNAMITE EXPLODED.

Eight Negroes Were Hurled Out of a Rock Quarry, and One of Them Was Instantly Killed.

Frankfort, Ky., May 5.—At the Benson rock quarry, in this county, an accidental explosion of a dynamite blast resulted in the fatal injury of James Hutchings, a Negro, of Hopkinsville, and the serious injury of Bob Shields, of this city, and several other Negroes employed by the L. & N. railroad, whose names are unknown.

While the men were digging in the quarry a blast which was thought to have been exploded was set off. A terrific explosion followed, in which seven or eight Negroes working around it were lifted entirely out of the quarry. Hutchings was frightfully injured and Shields and two others are badly hurt, but may recover.

Short in His Accounts.

Louisville, Ky., May 5.—Investigation into the accounts of Joseph W. Morey, assistant cashier for W. B. Belkney & Co., who committed suicide, show a shortness so far of about $3,000. Experts are still at work on the books and it is expected that the total will exceed this amount considerably. Morey is said to have lost the money in speculation and gambling.

Petition in Bankruptcy.

Owensboro, Ky., May 5.—Harbor McIntire, of Henderson, filed petition in bankruptcy. The liabilities are $2,473 and the assets $431, all claimed under exemption. McIntire is in the grocery business.

LIEUTENANT GIBSON WON.

Remarkably Fast Time Made in the Twenty-Sixth Kentucky Derby at Louisville.

Louisville, Ky., May 5.—Lieutenant Gibson won the 26th Kentucky Derby in 2:06¼, taking three-quarters of a second off the track record for one mile and a quarter. The race itself was in some respects a disappointment. The sensational work in the trials of the various candidates within the past week had given rise to the belief that the rawhide and steel would be plied vigorously during the last eighth of the journey in the big event. The promised finish failed to materialize but for one reason—Lieutenant Gibson was so far superior to his field that they could not make a race of it.

The Derby was the fourth event on the card, and when the entries were finally posted it was found that Orontus and Rendier had been scratched, leaving seven of the best colts in the west to contend for the honor. Kentucky Farmer, Lieutenant Gibson, His Excellency, Highland Lad, Florizar, Thrive and Hindus came out on the track in the order named, and each was in turn cheered as he paraded in front of the stand.

Starter Chinn had but little trouble in getting them away, all closely bunched, before the first quarter was reached Lieutenant Gibson had taken the lead and maintained it to the finish, passing under the wire winner by two lengths of daylight without having been touched. Florizar was second, half a length in front of Thrive, who was a length in front of Highland Lad, while His Excellency, Kentucky Farmer and Hindus were strung out in the order named. There were 20,000 spectators present.

FOREST FIRES.

A Vast Amount of Valuable Timber Is Being Destroyed in the Mountain Districts.

Lexington, Ky., May 5.—Fire is destroying thousands of dollars' worth of property throughout the mountains of Eastern Kentucky. At Chimney Top, a point near Natural Bridge, in Wolfe county, the Clay City Lumber Co. has lost several hundred logs and many hundred cross-ties during the past week, and the flames are still raging.

On the Red River & Beattyville Southern railroad, the Lexington & Eastern Railroad Co. has some 20,000 cross-ties, about 700 of which have been burned, and there is still danger of further ravages.

Why He Killed Him.

Lebanon, Ky., May 4.—The trial of Amos Harrison for the alleged murder of Blue Ford Kennett has begun. Harrison stated he shot Kennett in order to protect his home; that he knew Kennett bore a bad reputation for morality, and he warned him to cease his attentions to his sister, and told him that he did not want to catch him at his home again. When he returned home on the day of the tragedy and found Kennett there he was very much enraged. Kennett arose, Harrison stated, and when he placed his hands behind him he shot him, killing him instantly.

Ashland, Ky., May 4.—The republicans of the Ninth congressional district nominated Samuel J. Pugh for congress by acclamation. The delegates to the national convention at Philadelphia are Horace Cochran and George W. Armstrong; alternates, William Earl and J. B. Rice. W. G. Deering was selected for delegate-at-large.

Looking for a Location.

Richmond, Ky., May 5.—A party of Ohio capitalists were at Valley View this week prospecting for a site for a large lumber mill. They were pleased with the location and shipping facilities and left the impression that they would probably locate their plant here.

Vouchers Sent Back.

Louisville, Ky., May 5.—Pension Agent Leslie Combs is refusing to accept vouchers for pensions sworn to by notaries appointed by Beckham. All such are being mailed back to the sender, thus causing great delay and confusion in getting the pensions.

Early Vegetables Hurt.

Stone Quarry Shut Down.

Bowling Green, Ky., May 5.—The appointment of a receiver for the Bowling Green Stone Co., growing out of a $135,000 foreclosure suit, has caused the big plant to shut down. Several hundred people are thrown out of employment.

A Deadlock Broken.

Middlesboro, Ky., May 5.—The school board, which has been deadlocked over the election of a superintendent, agreed at a meeting on J. B. Taylor, of Beaver Dam, for the place.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

At a Mass Convention held by the Republicans of Boone county, Ky., in Burlington on May 7th, 1900, G. G. Hughes was elected chairman, and Jonas Stevens, secretary.

On motion the chair is directed to appoint a committee of three each, on Delegates, Reorganization of County Committee and Resolutions.

Committee on Delegates—Elihu Alden, B. F. Zimmer and C. C. Hughes.

Committee on New County Executive Committee—Harry Blyth, E. S. McKim and Z. T. Kelly.

On Resolutions—T. B. Mathews, J. G. Tomlin and G. L. Miller.

The following Delegates were selected to attend the State Convention: T. B. Mathews, C. T. Moffett, E. Alden, Cyrus Kelly, C. C. Hughes, B. F. Zimmer, J. G. Tomlin. A. M. Edwards.

District Convention—T. B. Mathews, C. T. Moffett, E. Alden, Claude Ford, Cyrus Kelly, C. C. Hughes, B. F. Zimmer, W. H. Metcalfe.

The following delegates were unanimously selected to attend Congressional Convention when called: T. B. Mathews, C. T. Moffett, E. Alden, B. F. Zimmer, C. C. Hughes, C. C. Metcalfe, Cyrus Kelly, Lee Gaines, jr.

Resolved, That we commend every act of Gov. Taylor, especially his offer of $500 reward to be paid from his private funds for the apprehension of the murderer of Senator Goebel, when the Democratic officials neglected to take proper action in regard to a reward.

We congratulate Hon. W. O. Bradley on his loyal efforts in behalf of the Republican State officials.

We endorse the wise and patriotic administration of President McKinley, but demand a modification of civil service laws which retain in office incompetent and obnoxious Democrats to the exclusion of capable and worthy Republicans.

We denounce the course of Senator J. G. Furnish and Representative Benj. Stephens in advocating the $100,000 appropriation, believing that said action did not reflect the desires of their constituents and that its tendency and purpose is to harrass and injure prominent Republicans and the Republican party, and not to bring to justice the guilty.

We condemn the action of Democratic members of House and Senate, who have accepted office and the promise of office as the result of their votes in the contest for Governor and Lieutenant Governor, while acting in a judicial capacity. Such conduct on the part of any judge is good, sufficient and just cause for impeachment and disgrace.

We condemn in unmeasured terms the cowardly assassination of Senator Goebel, as being one of the most heinous and dastardly crimes of modern civilization, we also condemn in unmeasured terms the cowardly effort being made to implicate Governor Taylor in said crime, and we especially condemn the action of a Goebelized Legislature and Senate, which in a highly partisan spirit and a corrupt distribution of patronage abused the power heretofore safely lodged in the representatives of the people by resorting to unheard of and revolutionary means and devices to nullify the voice of the people as expressed at the polls, and the methods adopted and the results accomplished of attempting to unseat Gov. Taylor and Lieutenant Gov. Marshall, the action of the Democratic House and Senate stands without a parallel in American history.

We demand a repeal of the Goebel election law as being a detriment to free suffrage and as a menace to the liberties of the people.

We congratulate the Independent Democrats who boldly took a stand for the liberties of the people as against wrong and thus encountered the bitter enmity of their former party friends.

Resolved, That the proceedings of this convention be published in the Boone Co. RECORDER and the Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune.

Beware of a Cough.

A cough is not a disease but a symptom of Consumption and bronchitis, which are the most dangerous and fatal diseases, have for their first indication a persistent cough, and if properly treated as soon as this cough appears are easily cured. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has proven wonderfully successful, and gained its wide reputation and extensive sale by its success in curing the diseases which causes coughing. If it is not beneficial it will not cost you a cent. For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington; Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg; O. N. Grant, Bellevue, C. S. ly, Bullittsville.

The Boone County Sunday School will meet June 7, in the Christian Church at Bullittsville, Ky. Rev. Geo. A. Miller of Covington will preach the opening sermon the night before and Mr. E. A. Fox, state secretary and other good speakers will address the meeting on Thursday. The full program will be published next week. Every Sunday school in the county is entitled to two or more delegates and all are asked to give the matter prompt attention. Miss Maggie Bullock, Secretary, Hebron, Ky. and H. Max Lentz Chairman, Florence, Ky.

Miss Florence Newman, who has been a great sufferer from muscular rheumatism, says Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only remedy that affords her relief. Miss Newman is a much respected resident of the village of Gray, N. Y., and makes this statement for the benefit of others similiarly afflicted. This liniment is for sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington; Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg; O. N. Grant, Bellevue, C. S. ly, Bullittsille.

In our write-up of the Odd-Fellows' celebration for last week we inadvertently omitted to mention Rev. Carney as one of the speakers at the church in the afternoon. He not only made a good speech at the church, but gave the lodge an excellent talk at the night session. He is one of the best fraternity lecturers in this part of the country.

Arthur McFee, many years ago a citizen of this county, died at his home in Marion, Crittenden county, April 28th, of a complication of diseases. He was born in Belfast, Ireland, in April, 1827. His wife, who survives him, was Miss Annie Marquess, of this county.

THE PRODIGAL SON.

Dr. Talmage Preaches a Sermon About the Elder Brother.

Lesson of the Parable—He Denounces Self-Righteousness and Lack of Sympathy for the Fallen and Unfortunate.

[Copyright, 1900, by Louis Klopsch.]

In this discourse Dr. Talmage pleads for a hearty reception to all those who have done wrong and want to get back, while the unsympathetic and self-righteous are excoriated; text, Luke 15:8, "And he was angry and would not go in."

Many times have I been asked to preach a sermon about the elder brother of the parable. I received a letter from Canada saying: "Is the elder son of the parable so unsympathetic and so cold that he is not worthy of recognition?" The fact is that we misinterpret the younger son. You can hear the flapping of his rags in many a sermonic breeze and the cranching of the pods for which he was an unsuccessful contestant. I confess that it has been difficult for me to train the camera obscura upon the elder son of the parable. I could not get a negative for a photograph. There was not enough light in the gallery, or the chemicals were too poor, or the sitter moved in the picture. But now I think I have him, not a side face or a three-quarters or the mere bust, but a full length portrait as he appears to me. The father in the parable of the prodigal had nothing to brag of in his two sons. The one was a rake and the other a churl. I find nothing admirable in the dissoluteness of the one, and I find nothing attractive in the acrid sobriety of the other. The one goes down over the larboard side, and the other goes down over the starboard side, but they both go down.

From all the windows of the old homestead bursts the minstrelsy. The floor quakes with the feet of the rusties, whose dance is always vigorous and resounding. The neighbors have heard of the return of the younger son from his wanderings, and they have gathered together. The house is full of congratulators. I suppose the tables are loaded with luxuries, not only the one kind of meat mentioned, but its concomitants. "Clap!" go the cymbals. "Thrum!" go the harps, "Click!" go the chalices, up and down go the feet inside, while outside is a most sorry spectacle.

The senior son stands at the corner of the house, a frigid phlegmatic. He has just come in from the fields in very substantial apparel. Seeing some wild exhilarations around the old mansion, he asks of a servant passing by with a goatskin of wine on his shoulder what all the fuss is about. One would have thought that, on hearing that his younger brother had got back, he would have gone into the house and rejoiced, and, if he were not conscientiously opposed to dancing, that he would have joined the oriental schottish. No, there he stands. His brow lowers, his face darkens; his lip curls with contempt. He stamps the ground with indignation; he sees nothing at all to attract. The odors of the feast, coming out on the air, do not sharpen his appetite. The lively music does not put any spring into his step. He is in a terrible pout. He criticises the expense, the injustice and the morals of the entertainment. The father rushes out bareheaded and coaxes him to come in. He will not go in. He scolds the father. He goes into a pasquinade against the younger brother, and he makes the most uncomely scene. He says: "Father, you put a premium on vagabondism. I staid at home and worked on the farm. You never made a party for me; you didn't so much as kill a kid. That wouldn't have cost half as much as a calf; but this scapegrace went off in fine clothes, and he comes back not fit to be seen, and what a time you make over him! He breaks your heart, and you pay him for it. That calf, to which we have been giving extra feed during all these weeks, wouldn't be so fat and sleek if I had known to what use you were going to put it. That vagabond deserves to be cowhided instead of banqueted. Veal is too good for him." That evening, while the younger son sat telling his father about his adventures and asking about what had occurred on the place since his departure, the senior brother goes to bed disgusted and slams the door after him. That senior brother still lives. You can see him any Sunday, any day of the week. At a meeting of ministers in Germany some one asked the question: "Who is that elder son?" and Krummacher answered: "I know him; I saw him yesterday." And when they insisted upon knowing whom I meant he said: "Myself; when I saw the account of the conversion of a most obnoxious man I was irritated."

First, this senior brother of the text stands for the self-congratulatory, self-satisfied, self-worshipful man. With the same breath in which he vituperates against his younger brother he utters a panegyric for himself. The self-righteous man of my text, like every other self-righteous man, was full of faults. He was an ingrate, for he did not appreciate the home blessings which he had all those years. He was disobedient, for when the father told him to come in he staid out. He was a liar, for he said that the reverent son had devoured his father's living, when the father, so far from being reduced to penury, had a homestead left, had instruments of music, had jewels, had a mansion, and instead of being a pauper, was a prince. This senior brother, with so many faults of his own, was merciless in his criticism of the younger brother. The only perfect people that I have ever known were utterly obnoxious. I was never so badly cheated in my life as by a perfect man. He got so far up in his devotions that he was clear up above all the rules of common honesty. These men that go about prowling among prayer meetings and in places of business, telling how good they are look out for them; keep your hand on your pocketbook! I have noticed that just in proportion as a man gets good he gets humble. The deep Mississippi does not make as much noise as the brawling mountain rivulet. There has been many a store that has had more goods in the show window than inside on the shelves.

This self-righteous man of the text stood at the corner of the house hugging himself in admiration. We hear a great deal in our day about the higher life. Now, there are two kinds of higher life men. The one is admirable, and the other is most repulsive. The one kind of higher life man is very lenient to his criticism of others, does not bore prayer meetings to death with long harangues, does not talk a great deal about himself, but much about Christ and Heaven, gets kindlier and more gentle and more useful until one day his soul spreads a-wing, and he flies away to eternal rest, and everybody mourns his departure. The other higher life man goes around with a Bible conspicuously under his arm, goes from church to church, a sort of general evangelist, is a sort of nuisance to his own pastor when he is at home and a nuisance to other pastors when he is away from home, runs up to some man who is counting out a roll of bank bills or running up a difficult line of figures and asks him how his soul is, makes religion a dose of ipec acuanha. Standing in a religious meeting making an address, he has a patronizing way, as though ordinary Christians were clear away down below him, so he had to talk at the top of his voice in order to make them hear, but at the same time encouraging them to hope on that by climbing many years they may after awhile come up within sight of the place where he now stands. I tell you plainly that a roaring, roistering, bouncing sinner is not so repulsive to me as that higher life malformation. The former may repent; the latter never gets over his pharisaism. The younger brother of the parable came back, but the senior brother stands outside entirely oblivious to his own delinquencies and deficits, pronouncing his own eulogium. Oh, how much easier it is to blame others than to blame ourselves! Adam blamed Eve. Eve blamed the serpent, the senior brother blamed the younger brother, and none of them blamed themselves.

Again, the senior brother of my text stands for all those who are faithless about the reformation of the dissipated and the dissolute. In the very tones of his voice you can hear the fact that he has no faith that the reformation of the younger son is genuine. His entire manner seems to say: "That boy has come back for more money. He got a third of the property; now he has come back for another third. He will never be contented to stay on the farm. He will fall away. I would go in too and rejoice with the others if I thought this thing were genuine; but it is a sham. That boy is a confirmed inebriate and debauchee." Alas, my friends, for the incredulity in the church of Christ in regard to the reclamation of the recreant! You say a man has been a strong drinker. I say, "Yes, but he has reformed." "Oh," you say, with a lugubrious face, "I hope you are not mistaken; I hope you are not mistaken." You say: "Don't rejoice too much over his conversion, for soon he will be unconverted, I fear. Don't make too big a party for that returned prodigal or strike the timbrel too loud; and, if you kill a calf, kill the one that is on the commons and not the one that has been luxuriating in the paddock." That is the reason why more prodigals do not come home to their father's house. It is the rank infidelity in the church of God on this subject. There is not a house on the streets of Heaven that has not in it a prodigal that returned and staid home. There could be unrolled before you a scroll of a hundred thousand names—the names of prodigals who came back forever reformed. Who was John Bunyan? A returned prodigal. Who was Richard Baxter? A returned prodigal. Who was George Whitefield, the thunderer? A returned prodigal. And I could go out in all the aisles of this church to-day and find on either side those who, once far astray for many years, have been faithful, and their eternal salvation is as sure as though they had been ten years in Heaven. And yet some of you have not enough faith in their return.

An invalid went to South America for his health and one day sat sunning himself on the beach when he saw something crawling up the beach, wriggling toward him, and he was affrighted. He thought it was a wild beast or a reptile, and he took his pistol from his pocket. Then he saw it was not a wild beast. It was a man, an immortal man, a man made in God's own image, and the poor wretch crawled up to the feet of the invalid and asked for strong drink, and the invalid took his wine flask from his pocket and gave the poor wretch something to drink, and then under the stimulus he rose up and gave his history. He had been a merchant in Glasgow, Scotland. He had gone down under the power of strong drink until he was so reduced in poverty that he was living in a boat just off the beach. "Why," said the invalid, "I knew a merchant in Glasgow once, a merchant of such and such a name." And the poor wretch straightened himself and said: "I am that man!" "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."

Again, I remark that the senior brother of my text stands for the spirit of envy and jealousy. The senior brother thought that all the honor they did to the returned brother was a wrong to him. He said: "I have staid at home, and I ought to have had the ring, and I ought to have had the banquet, and I ought to have had the garlands." Alas for this spirit of envy and jealousy coming down through the ages! Cain and Abel, Esau and Jacob, Saul and David, Haman and Mordecai, Othello and Iago, Orlando and Angelica, Caligula and Torquatus, Cæsar and Pompey, Columbus and the Spanish courtiers, Cambyses and the brother he slew because he was a better marksman, Dionysius and Philoxenius, whom he slew because he was a better singer. Jealousy among painters. Closterman and Geoffrey Kneller, Hudson and Reynolds. Francia, anxious to see a picture of Raphael, Raphael sends him a picture. Francia, seeing it, falls in a fit of jealousy, from which he dies. Jealousy among authors. How seldom contemporaries speak of each other! Xenophon and Plato living at the same time, but from their writings you never would suppose they heard of each other. Religious jealousies. The Mohammedans praying for rain during a drought; no rain coming. Then the Christians begin to pray for rain, and the rain comes. Then the Mohammedans met together to account for this, and they resolved that God was so well pleased with their prayers He kept the drought on so as to keep them praying, but that the Christians began to pray, and the Lord was so disgusted with their prayers that He sent rain right away, so he would not hear any more of their supplication.

A wrestler was so envious of Theogenes, the prince of wrestlers, that he could not be consoled in any way; and after Theogenes died and a statue was lifted to him in a public place his envious antagonist went out every night and wrestled with the statue, until one night he threw it, and it fell on him and crushed him to death. So jealousy is not only absurd, but it is killing to the body, and it is killing to the soul. How seldom it is you find one merchant speaking well of a merchant in the same line of business. How seldom it is you hear a physician speaking well of a physician on the same block. Oh, my friends, the world is large enough for all of us. Let us rejoice at the success of others.

Besides that, if we do not get as much honor and as much attention as others, we ought to congratulate ourselves on what we escape in the way of assault. The French general riding on horseback at the head of his troops heard a soldier complain and say: "It is very easy for the general to command us forward while he rides and we walk." Then the general dismounted and compelled the complaining soldier to get on the horse. Coming through a ravine, a bullet from a sharpshooter struck the rider, and he fell dead. Then the general said: "How much safer it is to walk than to ride!"

Once more I have to tell you that this senior brother of my text stands for the pouting Christian. While there is so much congratulation within doors, the hero of my text stands outside, the corners of his mouth drawn down, looking as he felt—miserable. I am glad his lugubrious physiognomy did not spoil the festivity within. How many pouting Christians there are in our day—Christians who do not like the music of the churches, Christians who do not like the hilarities of the young—pouting, pouting, pouting at society; pouting at the fashions, pouting at the newspapers, pouting at the church, pouting at the government, pouting at High Heaven. Their spleen is too large, their liver does not work, their digestion is broken down. There are two cruets in the caster always sure to be well supplied—vinegar and red pepper! Oh, come away from that mood. Stir a little saccharin into your disposition. While you avoid the dissoluteness of the younger son, avoid also the irascibility and the petulance and the pouting spirit of the elder son, and imitate the father, who had embraces for the returning prodigal and coaxing words for the splentic malcontent.

Ah, the face of this pouting elder son is put before us in order that we might better see the radiant and forgiving face of the Father. Contrasts are mighty. The artist, in sketching the field of Waterloo years after the battle, put a dove in the mouth of the cannon. Raphael, in one of his cartoons, beside the face of a wretch put the face of a happy and innocent child. And so the sour face of this irascible and disgusted elder brother is brought out in order that in the contrast we might better understand the forgiving and radiant face of God. That is the meaning of it—that God is ready to take back anybody that is sorry, to take him clear back, to take him back forever and forever and forever, to take him back with a loving hug, to put a kiss on his parched lip, a ring on his bloated hand, an easy shoe on his chafed foot, a garland on his bleeding temples and heaven in his soul. Oh, I fall flat on mercy! Come, my brother, and let us get down into the dust, resolved never to rise until the Father's forgiving hand shall lift us!

Oh, what a God we have! Bring your doxologies. Come, earth and Heaven, and join in the worship. Cry aloud! Lift the palm branches! Do you not feel the Father's arm around your neck? Do you not feel the warm breath of your Father against your cheek? Surrender, younger son! Surrender, elder son! Surrender, all! Go in today and sit down at the banquet. Take a slice of the fatted calf, and afterward, when you are seated, with one hand in the hand of the returned brother and the other hand in the hand of the rejoicing father, let your heart beat time to the clapping of the cymbal and the mellow voice of the flute. It is meet that we should make merry and be glad, for this, thy brother, was dead and is alive again; he was lost and is found.

THE PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION of the YEAR 1901

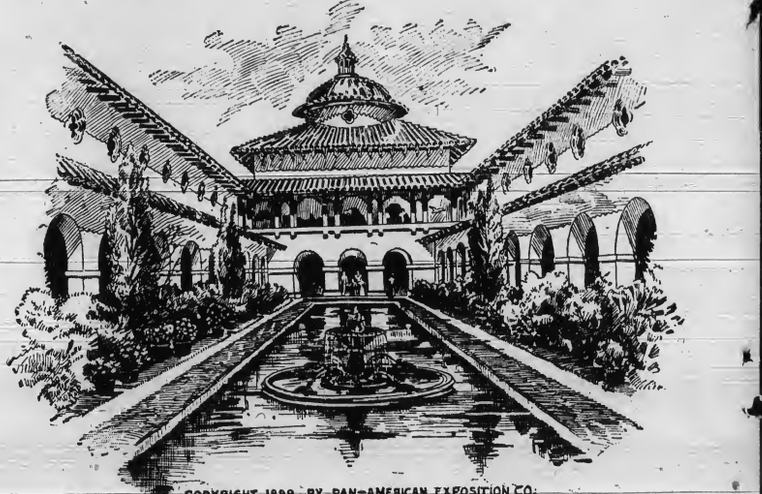
Buffalo Is Arranging for a Magnificent Display of the Products of the Three Americas for Next Year—Elaborate Floral, Horticultural and Electrical Features

THE GOVERNMENT BUILDING.

In It Will Be Displayed Many Valuable and Interesting Exhibits.

So vast is the number of valuable and interesting objects for exhibition in the possession of the United States government that none but a building of great proportions could possibly contain them. Instead of one building, however, at the Pan-American exposition in Buffalo, N. Y., in 1901, the federal group will consist of three massive structures connected by colonnades. The main building of this splendid architectural trinity will be 130 feet wide and 600 feet long. The others will each be 350 feet square.

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT BUILDING.



The government work is under the direction of James Knox Taylor, supervising architect of the treasury department. The group will be treated architecturally in a modified Spanish renaissance, the details suggesting a Mexican rather than a strictly Spanish origin. Like the others, these buildings will be constructed of staff, already made familiar to the public by its use at the Chicago and more recent Omaha exposition. The color scheme, in marked contrast to that used at Chicago, will be rich and brilliant, the lavish use of color and gilding giving, with the intricate plastic decorations and sculpture groups, an ensemble both striking and interesting. Portions of the roofs, covered with red Spanish tiles, will add much to the character of the buildings as a whole.

In plan the buildings are shaped like a letter U, the opening being toward the west. The main building corresponds to the bottom of the U, which will accommodate the greater portion of the government exhibits, the administrative offices, guard-room, etc. Its center will be surmounted by a dome, the apex of which, 250 feet above the main floor level and crowned with a figure of Victory 20 feet in height, will form one of the most conspicuous features of the exposition grounds. Connected by colonnades to the main buildings are two lesser buildings or pavilions, one of which is intended to hold an exhibition typical of life and labor in the government's new possessions, while the other will contain a branch station of the United States weather bureau and the exhibit, aquariums, etc., of the United States fish commission.

Inlets from the lagoons fill the spaces within the colonnades connecting the pavilions with the main building. The central plaza, the space inclosed by the arms of the U, is decorated by steps, terraces and formal flower beds, making an easy and beautiful approach to the main entrance under the dome.

The building has numerous entrances, the principal ones being in the center of the four facades. Once inside the structure, the size will be appreciated. All the towers, pavilions and other proper spaces are to be brilliantly illuminated and made gay with banners and flags.

The central court will be a veritable tropical garden, with a long narrow pool containing interesting specimens of aquatic life, and will have winding paths and nests among the flowers and shrubbery, where the weary visitor may find rest and diversion from his study of the more practical features of the exposition.

COURT OF MACHINERY AND TRANSPORTATION BUILDING.

THE MACHINERY BUILDING.

It Will Also Be Devoted to the Transportation Exhibits.

One of the big buildings of the exposition will be that devoted to machinery and transportation. This will be 500 by 350 feet, with a central court 100 by 175 feet. Its location is on the west side of the main group, opposite the Court of the Fountains. It is built in the type—as all the other principal buildings are—of the Spanish Renaissance, modified to suit the conditions of the exposition. The work is far more ornate, however, with roofs laid with red tile and the cemented walls brilliant with color. The colors are to be of reds and yellows in light tints. The facades will present an arcaded effect, with broad overhanging eaves, in imitation of the old mission buildings found in California and Mexico. Each facade will be broken by an important architectural feature, and each corner flanked with low pavilions, the design giving large plain surfaces for color, while the eaves give deep shadows. The loggias, balconies, pavilions and other places are to be ornamented with shrubs, vines and flowers, blending with the coloring of the building. The openings are grilled with specimens of wrought-iron "Rejas" or grill screens, such as are seen in examples of Spanish architecture of the sixteenth century.

ETHNOLOGY.

Queer Sort of Lottery.

Four times a year a curious lottery is held at Smolensk, in Russia. The raffle is for a young girl, and 5,000 tickets are issued, each costing a ruble. The money forms a marriage portion for the girl, and the winner of the lottery marries her. He may, however, for a consideration, allow some other man to become the bridegroom. In case the girl should object to marrying the winner of the lottery, the money is equally divided between them.

Lord Beaconsfield was commonly known as "Dizzy," and Palmerston as "Pam."

DR. HARTMAN'S ADVICE

Is Sought by Female Sufferers From Ocean to Ocean.

Mrs. F. W. Goulder, 1306 4th ave., Rock Island, Ill., writes:

"I was afflicted for five or six years with catarrhal difficulties and was growing worse all the time. I began taking your Peruna with a marked improvement from the first. Independent of curing that, the Peruna has greatly improved my general health."

"Every bottle of Peruna is worth its weight in gold; especially to me, for I owe my present good health to Peruna."

All over the country there are women who have been invalids for many years, suffering with female derangements which the family doctor cannot cure.

What a boon to such women is Dr. Hartman's free advice! So famous has his skill made him that hardly a hamlet or town in the country but knows his name. He cures tens of thousands, and he offers to every woman who will write to him her symptoms and a history of her trouble, free advice and treatment.

The medicines he prescribes can be obtained at any drug store, and the cost is within the reach of any woman. He describes minutely and carefully just what she shall do and get to make a healthy, robust woman of herself.

The Doctor has written a book especially for this class of women, entitled "Health and Beauty." This book contains many facts of interest to women, and will be sent free to any address by Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O.

DOESN'T KNOW RIGHT HAND.

In some of the little things of life women are absurdly ignorant, says the Chicago Chronicle.

"I saw by a paper last week that a colored woman was excluded from testifying in court because she didn't know her right hand from her left, and was, therefore, esteemed too ignorant for her evidence to be of any value," said an observant Chicago man the other day. "Now, do you know I don't believe one woman out of six knows her right hand from her left without stopping to consider the matter.

"I was standing in the foyer of a theater the other day at a matinee watching the audience, mostly feminine, as it passed in. Well, each maid handed her check to the usher and he called out: 'First door to the right,' or 'Second door to the left,' as the case might be. With hardly an exception those girls turned in the wrong direction; then they'd pause to consider, exclaim: 'We're going the wrong way,' and skurry back again.

"This happened so often that I spoke to the usher about it.

"'They always do it,' he replied, laconically. 'I usually point so they'll know the way, but I've neglected to do that to-day. They're all right if they stop to think, but they never do think.'

"I myself know an intelligent young woman who has to make a little motion as if she were writing with both hands before she can determine the right one, and she declares that all her acquaintances are affected in like manner, so, perhaps, this is a general feminine failing, and the colored witness was unjustly excluded."

AMERICAN DUEL IN GERMANY.

A So-Called Affair of Honor Between Heidelberg Students Is Fatal.

During my residence at Heidelberg a lamentable and terrible affair took place that threw a profound gloom over the university and the entire town, says a writer in Science. Two German students, having quarreled, decided the earth was not large enough for both of them to live in, and resorted to the diabolical practice called the "American duel." In a darkened room the two young men drew lots, having sworn that he who drew the black ball would commit suicide. The unhappy loser went to his room and discharged a bullet into his breast, but missed his heart, and lingered for several days on his deathbed. His parents were summoned by telegraph and besought him on their knees to disclose the name of his antagonist, but he steadfastly refused and died with the secret locked in his breast.

The students not only excused his conduct, but praised his courage, and when his remains were taken to the railway station to be transported to a distant city they accompanied the funeral cortege with torches and music. The students claimed he was not a suicide, for he was killed in an honorable duel, and they maintained that his opponent was not accessory to his death, because he shot himself. I had many arguments with them and never could convince them of their extraordinary tergiversation.

FIFTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

Summary of Leading Events.

Washington, April 30.—Senate—A motion to take up the resolution expressing sympathy for the Boers was defeated by a vote of 29 to 20. The conference report on the joint resolution relating to the administration of civil affairs in Porto Rico and providing for the appointment of temporary officers on the island was agreed to.

House—The Lacey bill to enlarge the powers of the department of agriculture and to prohibit interstate commerce in game killed in violation of local laws was passed. The conference report on the joint resolution extending the tenure of military officers in Porto Rico was agreed to.

Washington, May 1.—Senate—All proposed amendments to the Alaskan civil code bill were withdrawn and the bill passed. The senate then took up the army appropriation bill and discussed it until adjournment. It carries an appropriation of $114,951,590.

House—The Nicaraguan canal bill was taken up, and occupied the entire session, even to a night session. A powerful opposition to the measure was developed.

Washington, May 2.—Senate—Consideration of the army appropriation bill developed into a debate on the treatment of the volunteer soldiers sent to the Philippines that at times was very bitter. Just before adjournment a sharp colloquy occurred over the proposed consideration of the resolution to unseat Mr. Clark, of Montana, which indicated that the unanimous recommendation of the committee on privileges and elections will be sharply contested.

House—At the conclusion of the most stormy debate of the present session of congress, the house passed the Nicaragua canal bill by the overwhelming vote of 225 to 35. No other business was transacted.

Washington, May 3.—Senate—The army appropriation bill was passed without division. The day closed with the passage of a number of private pension bills, including bills to pension Mrs. Julia Mai Henry, widow of the late Gen. Guy V. Henry; Gen. James Longstreet; Mrs. Margaret M. Badger, widow of the late Commodore Badger, and Mrs. Harriet Gridley, widow of the late Capt. Gridley, of the navy.

House—The "free home" bill, which has been pending before congress for a number of years, was passed. It provides that the government shall issue patents to actual, bona fide settlers on agricultural lands of Indian reservations opened to settlement. The remainder of the day was devoted to the sundry civil appropriation bill, the last but one of the great supply bills.

Washington, May 4.—Senate—The bill reorganizing the army was passed. It increases the rank of Gen. Miles to lieutenant general and Gen. Corbin to major general. The regimental formation of the artillery is discontinued and 126 batteries of coast artillery and 12 batteries of field artillery are provided for. The fortification bill, carrying an appropriation of $7,735,628, was passed, and a bill to pay $2,998 to Rachel Wilson, of Harrison county, West Virginia, for the services of her father, Col. Benjamin Wilson, in the revolutionary war.

House—Four progress was made with the sundry civil appropriation bill, 73 of the 132 pages being completed.

Washington, May 5.—Senate—Only a short session was held, the entire time being devoted to the confirmation of appointments made by the president.

House—The sundry civil bill was passed. It carries slightly more than $61,500,000, about $10,000,000 more than any previous sundry civil bill. The senate amendments to the army appropriation bill were disagreed to and the bill was sent to conference. The fortification appropriation bill was also sent to conference.

Fortification Bill Passed.

Washington, May 5.—The fortifications appropriation bill was passed in the senate. It carries $7,733,628, an increase of $640,140 over the house measure. Before passage an amendment authorizing proportional payment for pneumatic dynamite guns, carriages and ammunition was agreed to.

Want to Succeed Wheeler.

Montgomery, Ala., May 4.—Gov. Johnson has announced that he would order a special election in the Eighth congressional district for a successor to Gen. Wheeler at the date of the regular election in August. There are half a dozen prominent candidates for the general's seat in congress.

Raid Made to Test a Law.

New York, May 4.—Inspector Thompson raided the Broadway Athletic club, and Manager George Considine and two pugilists, Kid Thomas and James Heywood, were arrested. The charge is conducting a boxing contest without a license. A test case will be made.

Will Compete With the Standard.

Denver, Col., May 4.—The Superior Oil Co., which is capitalized at $10,500,000, will enter in competition with the Standard Oil Co. and Continental Oil Co. throughout the territory west of the Missouri river.

Striking Tinners Return to Work.

Peoria, Ill., May 5.—The striking tinners in this city returned to work Friday. They were out four days and gained seven and a half cents an hour.

Flood Damages Sportsmen's Resort.

Dallas, Tex., May 6.—The Trinity river flood swept away the levees of the Dallas Hunting and Fishing club, destroying two fine lakes and sportsmen's resorts 12 miles below this city. The grounds are overflowed completely, and many thousands of dollars' worth of property is destroyed.

Taken to the Penitentiary.

New Orleans, May 3.—J. L. Moyse, who married Bertha Warnka, of Dayton, O., while impersonating "Capt. Clarke," of the battle ship Texas, was taken to the Nashville penitentiary.

A BIT OF SPRING.

The Pensive Poet Said the Crocus Is the Rooster of Flowers.

"Do you wish any spring poetry to-day?" inquired a long-haired caller, and the lamb-like editor reached for his gun. The caller saw the motion and held up his hand appealingly.

"Shoot if you will this long haired head, but do not kill the poet dead," he crooned, softly. "But I understand you to say you would like some spring poetry to-day?" he added, with mild insistence.

"I would like it as well to-day as any day," replied the editor, "but I do not liket it any day. There's housecleaning and moving and a superabundance of bile and torpid livers and influenza and enough other things to contend with in the spring without having any poetry shoved in on us."

"But think of the kind mine is," insisted the visitor; "listen," and he pulled out a dingy-looking slip of paper and read:

"There bursts the Jonquil from the earth
To meet the growing showers,
And there the crocus presses its plumes,
The rooster of the flowers."

"What do you think of that?"

"Who in thunder ever heard of a flower being a rooster?" queried the editor. "The most unlimited poetic license will not permit that sort of a wrench to the imagination."

"Steady, steady, my Pegasis," said the visitor, soothingly, "I knew you would be kicking out of the traces, and I don't blame you, but there is really startling thought in that suggestion. It is plain enough when you see it."

"Which isn't saying that anybody can ever see it."

"Only the blind will not see. Now observe, please. The crocus is the rooster of the flowers—is what I said, didn't I? And I am right, for the rooster is a raw cuss, ain't he? Now, what have you got to say?"

And what the editor said is not fit for publication.—N. Y. Sun.

An Ironic Condolence.

When a man becomes suddenly rich it not infrequently follows that he becomes as suddenly odious to his old friends. Thus, a Persian having obtained a lucrative position at court, a friend of his came shortly afterward to congratulate him thereon. The new courtier asked him: "Who are you and why do you come here?" The other coolly replied: "Do you not know me, then? I am your old friend, and am come to condole with you, having heard that you had lately lost your sight."—San Francisco Wave.

Multum in Parvo Prayer.

Georgie's mother insisted upon his repeating the prayer of childhood. He started sleepily requiring prompting at the beginning of every line. Drowsiness had nearly won the mastery by the time that he had obediently got as far as "my soul to take."

"God bless" prompted his mother. Georgie has a long list of relatives. There was a flutter of his sleep-laden lids as he limped them all together: "God bless the whole shooting match!" And he was asleep.—Chicago Chronicle.

Few College Students Die.

The death rate in colleges is extremely low. The strict attention to the physique is given as the cause. People outside of colleges, as well, may have health and strength. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is recommended most highly for preventing as well as curing bodily weakness. It is for the blood, the nerves and all stomach disorders, and its cures of constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, sluggish liver or weak kidneys, are most remarkable.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

ALABASTINE is a durable and natural cement-base wall coating, in 5 lb. paper packages, made ready for use in white and fourteen beautiful tints by mixing with cold water. It is a cement that goes through a process of setting, hardens with age, and can be coated and recoated without washing off its old coats before renewing.

ALABASTINE is entirely different from all the various kalsomines on the market, being durable and not stuck on the wall with glue. Alabastine customers should insist on having the goods in packages properly labeled. They should reject all imitations. There is nothing "just as good."

ALABASTINE

Prevents much sickness, particularly throat and lung difficulties, attributable to unsanitary coatings on walls. It has been recommended in a paper published by the Michigan State Board of Health on account of its sanitary features; which paper strongly condemned kalsomines. Alabastine can be used on either plastered walls, wood ceilings, brick or canvas, and any one can brush it on. It admits of radical changes from wall paper decorations, thus securing at reasonable expense the latest and best effects. Alabastine is manufactured by the

BABY'S BAWLS

MAM-M-MA!!
DON'T YOU HEAR BABY CRY?

Do you forget that summer's coming with all its dangers to the little ones—all troubles bred in the bowels.

The summer's heat kills babies and little children because their little insides are not in good, clean, strong condition.

Winter has filled the system with bile. Belching, vomiting up of sour food, rash, flushed skin, colic, restlessness, diarrhoea or constipation, all testify that the bowels are out of order.

If you want the little ones to face the coming dangers without anxious fear for their lives, see that the baby's bowels are gently, soothingly, but positively cleaned out in the spring time, and made strong and healthy before hot weather sets in.

The only safe laxative for children, pleasant to take (they ask for more) is CASCARETS. Nursing mothers make their milk mildly purgative for the baby by eating a CASCARET now and then. Mama eats a CASCARET, baby gets the benefit. Try it!
